Do you want to continue HIGH WAGES that have enabled this country to build and use, as Mr. Hoover points out, 14,000,000 AUTOMOBILES IN THE LAST SEVEN YEARS, or do you want to experiment with the Tammany tiger in the Government of the United States?

Do you want to put in charge of the national Government, of the White House, of the Supreme Court appointments, and OF THE TREASURY OF THE UNITED STATES THE TAMMANY CROWD, successors of Boss Tweed, Fernando Wood, Richard Croker and Charles Murphy?

DO YOU WANT PROSPERITY OR DO YOU WANT TAMMANY?

Are you willing to have Tammany Hall run the National Government?

Will you vote to continue the service of such men as Coolidge, Mellon and Hoover, or will you change and experiment with "THE TAMMANY CROWD," successors of Boss Tweed and the gang?

THAT'S the issue.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop

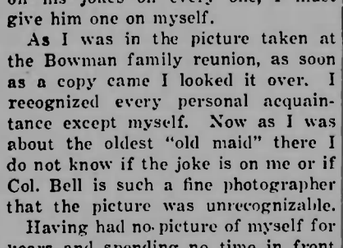
The Missing Snapshot.

Archibaldson, the pressman in the back room, was in receipt of a letter on Monday which he turned over to Scoop, and it tells its own tale.

Dear Sir:—Since Scoop is getting off his jokes on every one, I must give him one on myself.

As I was in the picture taken at the Bowman family reunion, as soon as a copy came I looked it over. I recognized every personal acquaintance except myself. Now as I was about the oldest "old maid" there I do not know if the joke is on me or if Col. Bell is such a fine photographer that the picture was unrecognizable.

Having had no picture of myself for years and spending no time in front of a mirror may be the cause, but "wad some power the gifte gie us to see ourselves as ithers see us."



Col. Bell must have this power.

Respectfully,
M. A. SMITH.

Upon receipt of the letter, Scoop interviewed Col. Bell and warned him of his negligence, threatening to cut off his meal ticket and fire him from the employ of The Republican, when the Colonel came back with the following facts in the case:

He had discovered several days ago that the lady was missing from the picture, so he set out for her home to secure a special sitting. It was on this trip that the mishap of last week occurred when he lost the entire rear end of his car along the Accident route. This delayed the Colonel and his picture just seven days, else it would have appeared last week and saved all the trouble of the lady inquiring about it.

What Was Left Out.

There is no doubt but that this individual showing should be much more satisfactory. The Colonel refused to take the photograph until after the subject had made herself up before the mirror, and the only other difference between this picture and the group picture she should have appeared in is that in the foregoing she has her fall headgear hanging on the proper hook.

At the Big Fair.

Colonel Bell has been in his glory during the past three days getting photographs of local people and those of prize exhibits. Some of these he has given to Scoop, as he realizes that he must keep The Republican's readers in good humor.

The first picture received was that of Mayor Fraley, just after he discovered that he had received only $2.55 change from a $5.00 bill given for a ten cent purchase at one of the faker's booths. He remembers seeing the carnival chap counting the money very carefully. As yet he hasn't discovered that his watch is missing.

On the Road to Discovery

Dressin' Up.

The next one was found to be Bill Whorton, dressed up for the parade this afternoon at one o'clock. Bill joins with the Rotarians and other business men in this event. He wanted to exhibit his latest work of art on a float but the Legionaires said they had had such a time getting him to erect the base for the cannon that they would not allow him to tear it down now just to be used as a plastering symbol.

Ready for the March.

Telling Fortunes.

The Colonel's last photograph presented for the week is that of the fortune teller at the carnival. She is engaged in telling the past, present and future for Henry Smouse and she seems to be pulling the wool over his eyes. But what else could be expected?

Nearly All For Hoover

During a hot argument Friday evening in Hinebaugh's restaurant between Jefferson Ralston, known Democratic leader and worker, and Neil Fraley, anything else but a Smith man, it was decided to take a straw vote. Jeff instigated the suggestion, as he knew that there were nine Democrats present and only three Republicans. But after the vote was taken and counted there were two votes for Smith and ten for Hoover. Ralston declared the ballot illegal and deserted the restaurant. Jerry Stanton was among those present and it is possible that something was pulled that would not go in a general election, especially in Garrett county. But anyway, who cares about that? If you want to see a real straw vote look at it in the Literary Digest.

Smith Has Never Carried Rural New York

An analysis of election returns in New York State in the past 5 gubernatorial elections, made by the research department of the Republican National Committee indicates an ebb of Smith strength in his own State. According to these figures Smith at no time has carried more than 13 of the 57 counties outside of Greater New York. This was in 1922. In 1920, when he was defeated by Miller he failed to carry a single one of these 57. In 1924 he carried one and in 1926 four.

WATCH YOUR POCKETBOOK

During the remainder of the sojourn of a number of strangers within our midst, without trying to seem paternal or give out the idea that a number of Garrett County's worthy citizens are gullible to smooth-tongued fakirs, The Republican wishes to advise all people to watch out for these strangers during the remainder of the week.

Several complaints have come to the editor's knowledge concerning these fakirs within the past few days. As yet there is no town ordinance against them. So, if somebody wants to give away an empty pocketbook, or even a pocketbook with money in it, watch out. He is after more than he is giving.

In cases of this kind, it will be well to remember that anybody who wants to give away something for nothing is either crazy or has a scheme for "beating" you. Giving away things as a general rule, just isn't being done these days.

BORAH WARNS FARMERS AGAINST FREE TRADE

Governor Smith specifically cited the Underwood tariff law as indicative of what the Democrats would do to the tariff if they were restored to power. The Underwood tariff, passed by a Democratic Congress and signed by a Democratic president in 1913, put the basic farm products of the United States on the free list.

Senator Borah, who knows the west, the live stock industry and other farm interests, is quick to scent the alarming import of Mr. Smith's utterance on the tariff. As Borah says, it is the "most important" item in the address, so far as the west is concerned. "We do not want to go back to the free list with farm products, as the Underwood tariff bill carried them," protests the Idaho senator. "What we desire are increased duties on farm products."

A return to free trade in farm products, as Governor Smith is proposing, would be a disastrous blow to the west. Senator Borah cites a single item—cattle. The record shows that "prior to the passage of the Underwood tariff act our importation of live cattle amounted to 125,000 head for the year ended June 30, 1914; under the Underwood tariff importations jumped to 868,000 head."

Then the World War came on in 1914 and saved the American farmers for a while from the penalties of free trade in her products. Millions upon millions of men were withdrawn from the farms of Europe and sent to the battle front. All Europe was eager, while the war was raging, to buy every thing that we could sell.

With the end of war and the return of millions of men to the farms, conditions again were reversed, and in the closing year of Wilson's administration the United States became the dumping ground of foreign farm surpluses.

Senator Borah speaks of cattle; but all other live stock was stripped of protection by the Democratic Underwood tariff. Meats, too, were put on the free list—pork, hams, bacon, lard, beef, veal and mutton. Wheat, corn and their manufactures were on the free list. Milk and cream, too; and eggs, potatoes, wool and many other products.

Alarmed by increasing capture of their home markets by foreign producers, the American farmers sent a mighty protest to Washington. It was ignored by the Wilson administration.

Then, when the Republicans came back to power in 1921, the protest was heeded. An emergency tariff was hastily passed for the protection of farm products, and later agriculture was given still greater protection in the general tariff law.

If Smith ever had a chance to carry a western state, he has impaired or destroyed it by his adoration of the Underwood tariff. The probability now expands into a seeming certainty that he will lose the few western states that are normally or occasionally Democratic—Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

What is the logical conclusion from these facts of record? That the Democratic party cannot safely be trusted with "tariff reform." Its record on the tariff speaks more loudly than its latest promises not to injure American business and labor. The country has heard those promises before and it is fully familiar with the sorry sequel.

As Senator Smoot says, the Republicans will revise the tariff to bring it into accord with the latest conditions, but they will do so, as they have always done, in a manner to conserve the national prosperity. The Democrats do "protest too much" that they are industry's and labor's best friends. The Republicans are the ones with whom to intrust the coming revision of the tariff.

Mr. Kelso Replies to a Query Concerning the Organ in the Mormon Temple at Salt Lake City and Gives Additional Information Concerning the Tabernacle and Temple There.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I was recently asked a question concerning the size of the organ in the Mormon Temple at Salt Lake City and in making an answer I also wish to correct a misconception of some persons in regard to the Tabernacle and Temple.

The Tabernacle is 150 feet by 250 feet and 80 feet high. The arches of the roof rest upon 44 stone piers and has no center support. It was built to accommodate the great gatherings of the Mormon people in their annual and semi-annual conferences.

I attended services in the Mormon Tabernacle Sunday May 13—Mother's Day—and two Mormon preachers or apostles spoke in great earnestness. Women ushers passed among the congregation presenting white and red roses to those who wished to commemorate their mothers.

According to the statement I read, the organ in the Tabernacle is 60 feet wide, 33 feet deep and 48 feet high. It contains 8000 pipes and is fitted with 270 stops. The action of the organ is electric throughout. The pipes, when the organ is in action, are operated or blown by four motors of thirty-two horsepower. The seats about the organ are said to seat four hundred unpaid members of the choir and all seats were occupied the Sunday of my attendance at the service.

I have no definite information concerning the furnishings of the Temple or the services conducted therein.

The information I have from Mormon literature states the Temple is reserved for special holy purposes in which only a limited number of worthy church members participate. All members of the sect living righteous lives are said to be privileged to take part in the Temple work.

E. W. KELSO.

GRANTSVILLE.

Fire Destroys Dwelling

A fire of unknown origin destroyed the dwelling house owned by Albert Dahlgren located three miles southeast of Grantsville, and occupied by Edward Pritts and family, Saturday evening between the hours of eight and ten o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Pritts and their children had left the dwelling early Saturday evening to go to Meyersdale. They left a lamp burning in a room of the house, which may have exploded and fired the building, although this is only a matter of conjecture. The fire was discovered by neighbors and when they reached the burning structure it was a mass of flames. The fire destroyed the building and its contents,, including a piano, beds and bedding, clothing, heating and lighting plants, several hundred jars of fruit and others things. The Grantsville fire truck was called but before it arrived with a number of men the house was burned to the ground.

The house was partly covered by insurance, but the furniture, etc., belonging to Mr. Pritts was uninsured.

The loss is deeply felt by Mr. Pritts as coupled with this latest loss thieves had stolen quite a number of chickens during the month of July and set his chicken house on fire. Mr. Pritts and family are now living with neighbors.

Mrs. Elizabeth Folk.

Mrs. Elizabeth Folk, wife of C. J. Folk, died Saturday night, September 22, at her home near Keyser Ridge. She is survived by her husband, one son, L. C. Folk, three daughters, Mrs. Stella Reichenbacker, Mrs. Rosa Reichenbacker and Mrs. Lucille Duckworth, of Keyser Ridge. The funeral was conducted on Tuesday afternoon at the Lutheran church, Cove, Md., Rev. Gode officiating. Interment was in the Accident cemetery.

Schools Closed.

Following a meeting of the patrons of the Grantsville high and elementary schools on last Friday evening, it was decided that the schools should be closed for an indefinite period. This action was taken to prevent the possible contraction of infantile paralysis by pupils of the school. Dr. N. R. Davis advised this be done. There have been two deaths and one new case of the disease reported.

Music Pupils Promoted.

A most satisfactory examination of five pupils of the piano department junior A grade of the Holmes and Wallace studio was given Saturday last when the young students received their promotion certificates. The highest points attained were by Miss Pauline Patton, with a general average of 89 per cent.

ACCIDENT.

Chautauqua a Success.

The Swarthmore Chautauqua, which filled a three day engagement in Accident, September 18-20, was a great success, notwithstanding weather conditions, which were cold and damp. The various entertainers appearing at the afternoon and evening performances were well received and highly appreciated by all those who were in attendance. Accident is an ideal spot for chautauquas, as the town is deprived of theatres and of movies or entertainment of any other kind except that given by the school. The class of entertainment brought here by the chautauquas is clean and just the kind the people of any community should appreciate. Swarthmore Chautauqua will be in Accident again next year as has been assured by fifty-three guarantors signing a contract.

THE HOMEMAKERS' CORNER

By MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN,
Home Demonstration Agent

In accordance with the announcement made in these columns last week, Miss Elsie Benthien, home demonstration agent for Garrett County, is beginning her series of articles on domestic subjects, her contribution today treating on pickles. These articles will continue each week and her subject next Thursday will treat of jellies and preserves in season.

Pickles

Although pickles contain very little nourishment they play an important part in the dietary because they stimulate the flow of saliva and gastric juices, thus aiding digestion. Used in moderation, they are a valuable food accessory.

Success in "making pickles" is determined largely by the kind of vinegar used. A good grade of cider vinegar is considered best to use in making pickles. Pickles become soft due to poor quality of vinegar, too long cooking, too strong brine, too weak brine and allowing them to float on top of the brine.

Shriveled pickles are caused by use of too strong brine, vinegar or sugar solution. Hollow pickles may be due to the way the cucumbers have grown by allowing the cucumber to stand too long between the gathering and the pickling. Always pickle cucumbers one day after being gathered, or earlier.

Six Pickle Recipes.

Oil Pickles—Two dozen cucumbers, table size. Slice without paring; sprinkle with salt three hours or over night; one c. olive oil or Wessen oil, 1 quart vinegar, 1-2 c. mustard seed, 1-4 c. celery seed; alternate layers sliced onion may be added.

Mustard Pickles or Lazy Housewife Pickles—Pickle size cucumbers placed in stone jar. One c. sugar, 1 c. salt, 1 c. dry mustard, 1 gal. vinegar.

Sweet Pickles—To 7 lb. cucumbers, pickles size or use large cucumbers cut in chunks; 3 pints vinegar to cover. Cook vinegar and cucumbers slowly 2 hours. Boil together 3 minutes and pour over cucumbers the following and seal jars: Five lbs. brown sugar, 1 oz. allspice, 1 oz. cinnamon, 1 oz. celery seed.

Dill Pickles—To 6 quarts water use 1 qt. salt and 1 qt. vinegar; alternate layers dill. Keep pickles well under brine and they will keep longer and be more brittle when laid down in salt.

Chow Chow—Two quarts green tomatoes, 12 small cucumbers, 4 green peppers, 1 small head cabbage, 6 onions, 1 qt. string beans, 1 cup salt, 1 gallon vinegar, 1 tablespoon celery seed, 1 tablespoon mustard, 1 tablespoon allspice, 1 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon cloves. Directions: Chop together tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers, cabbage, onions and string beans. Let the mixture stand in a covered enamel pan over night. Place mixture in a pan with alternate layers o fsale, using 1 cup salt, reserving enough salt for top layer. Let mixture stand 12 hours, then drain. To 1 gallon vinegar add 1 tablespoon each of celery seed, mustard, allspice, pepper and cloves; heat to boiling point, add vegetables and cook mixture until tender. Pack the chow chow into clean, hot ball jars and seal at once.

Pickled Crab Apple—Choose firm crab apples of uniform size; do not pare, but remove blossom ends; make a spiced syrup in the following proportions: 1 qt. vinegar, 4 cups sugar, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon cloves, 1 tablespoon allspice, 1 tablespoon mace. Cook syrup until it will coat a spoon; add the apples and heat them slowly to avoid bursting. Simmer them until tender. Pack into clean, hot Ball jars; cover with syrup and seal at once.

CIVIC MEMBERS DISCUSS COUNTY HOME PROPOSITION

Letters From Adjoining Counties Read at Meeting

The discussion of the need of a county home was discussed at the last meeting of the Oakland Civic Club at which time two letters were read which came from counties adjacent to Garrett, in West Virginia, where conditions are about the same as in this county. The first one reads as follows:

"We feel that it is very advantageous to have a county home, for always there are those among the county's poor who must be taken care of entirely. Such cases we send to the county home. We have, however, numerous cases that we help to support in their own homes at a small allowance per week and we find we get along better by having a home to which we may consign persons in extreme need.

"Our county home inmates range from 30 to 40 in number and is about self-supporting, but should we crowd it to the extent of the demand for county aid it would cost us more than our present plan."

The second letter reads as follows:

"The county has an investment in the farm of $20,900. There are 270 acres, all cleared and improved except 30 acres; equipment of horses, wagons, machinery, tools, cattle, hogs and chickens, would go about $3,500. They have at present 13 inmates. The farm is not self sustaining, as it costs $3,000 in addition to interest on investment.

"The inmates are supposed to do such work as they are able but I know that to be very little. It also costs the county several thousand dollars to keep the widows' pensions. We feel that the poor farm is not a success; that at least two or three counties should go together, giving more supervision.

"The ideal condition would be to take care of these people in their homes, but that would cost more. The home is separate from the superintendent's family and home. They are furnished the raw materials and are supposed to do their own cooking, the women among them usually doing this."

An article from Salisbury was read in regard to the consolidation of county homes in Maryland, desiring a community house and infirmary to supplant the present county almshouses which now have dwindled to six on the Eastern Shore.

A report from Garrett county gave a list of twenty men and sixteen women as those cared, along with fifteen families and three couples at a cost of over $8,000 each year.

This information has been given out by the Oakland Civic Club so that the voters of the county may be informed on a question for which they must cast their votes in November and not in any way to influence their action, Miss Thekla Fundenberg, president of the Civic Club, stated.

Collision Near Grantsville Brings Into Limelight Most Polite Tourists.

The following story appeared in the Fairmont (W. Va.) Tlmes of Sunday. The gentleman mentioned in the story is the father of Clay V. Miller, Jr., who was editor of the Mountain Echo, Keyser, W. Va., during the past winter and early spring. Here it is:

Clay V. Miller, merchant in Grafton, in a story in a Chicago paper, is lauded as being the "world's most polite motorist." The story is told in the Grafton Sentinel and it is as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Miller and their daughters, Catharine Miller and Virginia Miller, and Clarence Poe were in an automobile accident near Grantsville, Md., on August 30. Mr. Miller's car collided with a machine occupied by three young college men of Southtown, a suburb of Chicago, said by Mr. Miller to be the most polite youths he had ever met. It is not so often that when an automobile accident occurs that there is a mutual good feeling for each other by those who experience the accident. In this case both think that each of the other exceeds all others in that splendid quality known as politeness. The story by the Chicago paper is as follows:

"Returning home from three weeks' travel through the east, three Southtown youths declare they have found the world's most polite motorist.

"The Southtown boys, William Dean, 20 years old; Elmer Stonehouse, 17, and Charles Michael, 15, were motoring through the Allegheny mountains, near Grantsville, Maryland.

"As they were going down a steep mountain grade on a rainy day, another machine coming in the opposite direction skidded on the wet pavement and ran into their car. The machine occupied by the boys was turned over and demolished.

"Although his own car was badly damaged and his wife injured, the other motorist, of Grafton, W. Va., took the boys to the nearest town (Cumberland, Md.) and bought them a new car of the same model as they had been driving.

"He filled the gas tank, took the boys home to dinner, kept them as guests in his home over night, and wished them luck as they started on their way."

L. S. Hartley, Baltimore and Ohio live stock specialist, ls in Oakland today in the interest of the Boys' Calf Club of Garrett county. He is much gratified with the work of the boys.

HOOVER HOUSE IS A HOMELIKE HOME

Palo Alto Neighbors Praise Kindly Hospitality of Their Most Famous Residents.

MRS. HOOVER VERY POPULAR

She Planned Her California House Herself and Superintended the Building of It on Stanford University Campus.

By Ruth Comfort Mitchell

PALO ALTO.—The town of Palo Alto and the campus of Stanford University fairly pulse and glow with the presence of the Hoovers. It isn't only the visible manifestation of flags and banners and flowers and printed placards in the shop windows, but something which is at once less tangible and yet more real and permanent—the genuine warmth of pride and loyalty which radiates from faces and voices everywhere.

The Hoovers are and always have been an integral part of the picture here, and it is interesting and illuminating to see them through the eyes of college mates, old friends, neighbors, and newcomers, proud to share their world eminence.

Men and women of their own generation remember their university days and sketch two fine and vital young people who showed in youth the keenness, the energy, and devotion and balance which have made them what they are today.

It is a community rich in members of the "I-Knew-'Em-When-Club." People like to paint them as they have known them through the years—college students, the young married couple taking the great out-trail of the mining engineer, forging steadily and solidly ahead by reason of grit and endurance and cleverness, coming into professional and material success and taking it simply and sensibly, coming back to build a typical California home on a California hill overlooking the campus where they worked and played and found each other in a community of interests and character.

The Hoover house is reached by a winding, mounting road from the campus, and is built on a hill, with the mountains piling up behind and beyond it, and the red tiled roofs of Stanford just below.

It is a low, rambling edifice of the pueblo type and fits so perfectly into its setting that it seems as component a part of the landscape as the trees and the rolling ridge itself.

Neighborly House

The Hoover house is symbolic of the Hoovers themselves in the way in which it merges into its background. There is nothing aloof about it; it is tucked in cosily between its neighbors. Hoover trees shade neighbors' lawns and neighbors' roses spill over Hoover fences. There is a gate cut into the wall so that the neighbors can come through, without going round to the front, to share the swimming pool. Neighbors come and go, now, in these dramatic days, as they always did, slipping in with baskets of fruit and armfuls of flowers; there is no tension, no sense of strain or impending strain in the atmosphere.

Mrs. Hoover feels strongly that the California out-of-doors is so brilliantly, often harshly bright, that the insides of houses should be cool and restful, and she has attained that effect in her own. In all decoration she is fonder of the beauty of line, or design, rather than color. One steps into a rather small reception hall, round in shape, with stairs leading down from it to sleeping rooms, and the living room and the open roof beyond beckoning from it. Everything is low-toned and restful to the eye which has just come in from emerald lawns and turquoise sky—brown on floor and wall and window, with an Indian basket filled with hearty hued zinnias for the only robust color note.

The guest rooms are below, and they, too, are in the same color scheme. They are delightfully inviting, deliciously comfortable, plain, homey, simple.

Comfortable and Livable

There are generous beds and deep chairs really made to sit in. There is not a stiff, badly angled chair in the Hoover house! There are more of the cheerful zinnias in pottery bowls, and books on the table which are meant to be read. And there are no delicate, monogrammed, too-exquisite guest towels—the sort which make a well meaning visitor feel she should wipe her hands on her handkerchief—merely a quantity of plain, soft, beautifully laundered linen towels which are manifestly made to be used.

That is the keynote of the whole place. Everything is genuine, comfortable, livable.

Everyone knows, nowadays, that Mrs. Hoover planned the house herself and superintended the building of it, so that it is a definite expression of her ideals of home making, and that she said she had walls only where it was absolutely necessary to keep books and papers and clothing in, or the amiable California weather out, and for the rest, roofs, in true pueblo fashion, flat roofs on different levels, where they read and rest and meet their friends, day dream or doze or dine! For practically all the year they use the roofs for sitting rooms. There are cushions on the stone copings and hammocks and swings and reed and wicker chairs and everything is comfortable and well used, and just a little worn shabby here and there—the sort of things which are reluctantly discarded because they are so deeply entrenched in the life of the household.

No Ultra Modern Ideas

Mrs. Hoover manages the very rare and satisfying effect of an absolutely unstudied ensemble. Her things seem to belong together by right of convenience and fitness and harmony. It is cheerfully evident that no ultra modern decorator has been given a free hand to experiment with bizarre combinations: Mrs. Hoover's house is as clearly her own, and an echo of her own personality, as her clothes are.

There is just one picture in the large, finely proportioned indoor living room, a painting by the California artist, Francis McComas, of an ancient Indian pueblo dwelling, the motif for the whole thing.

Mr. Hoover, standing before it with friends one day, said, "Well, give us a couple of hundred years and this house will look as mellow and interesting as that does!"

In the dining room there is a single picture, likewise a California desert scene with a lot of glamour and magic in it, by A. L. Groll. Mrs. Hoover feels that the walls of a California country house do not need much in the way of decoration when the windows offer so much!

The whole east end of the dining room is a big rounded window, and there the Hoovers have breakfast, looking out on the hearty and high colored garden, over the red roofs of Stanford, down to the bay, and across the Santa Clara Valley to the Coast Range Mountains with the Lick Observatory on Mt. Hamilton shining sharply in the sun.

Blue for Rugs and Gowns

Mrs. Hoover has a great fondness for blue, a cool clear blue which, in a gown, picks up the color of her eyes, and in her own room there is a Chinese rug which strongly features it.

Mr. Hoover's study with French doors and windows reaching down to the floor opens out on it. All day long, when the Hoovers are at home, as they were in early August, a line of men passes in and out of his room, waiting out in the sunny driveway or strolling in the garden. At four o'clock old friends and neighbors and college mates come in to see Mrs. Hoover and for a couple of hours there is a quiet, comfortable visit, with California fruit punch and home made cookies, and good talk.

Mrs. Hoover, in the quiet combinations of gray and black or black with white which she has worn since her father's death, bare headed, moves from group to group with a quiet friendliness which is delightful. She has a very alert social consciousness, the more pleasing because it functions silently and unobtrusively. In the midst of an anecdote of Australia—and Mrs. Hoover tells a story excellently well—she is aware of a small, lonesome figure in a corner, and presently she gathers up one or two of the chattier callers and moves casually toward the quiet one and wonders if she would mind taking the friends up to the top roof for the wider view.

Frequently, during this period, they dine on the roof, in the full glory of the sunset.

Never in a Hurry

The most amazing thing is the feeling of leisure which Mrs. Hoover manages to radiate, in spite of all that is before her and upon her. There is no sense of crowding hurry; she is that rare and blessed person, a woman who has learned to do the next thing next—who doesn't wrestle with tomorrow's problems today. She has kept the comfortable habit of her girlhood of being able to relax instantly. Between two important functions she can drop on the couch and sleep ten minutes like a well regulated baby, and that perfect balance and poise is reflected in her appearance and personality.

Mrs. Hoover's clothes are Mrs. Hoover's clothes. Just as her house is free from the standardizing of the professional decorator, so her gowns and wraps are clearly of her own choosing, stamped by her very definite individuality. No one "dresses Mrs. Hoover."

Some time during the afternoon hours of visiting Mr. Hoover comes out of his study and takes fifteen or twenty minutes of air and freedom, and chats with the callers. He looks always in the pink of condition, well, buoyant, vigorous. Mrs. Hoover sees to it that the most modest and inconspicuous visitors meet him first. He, too, gives the sense of unhurried calm, although relentless routine calls him back to the waiting work.

The Loser's Stakes

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

A QUARREL separated them. When he felt that he did not care and was without ambition, he lost his job. After that he wandered over the country working in the fields, in garages, anywhere, for enough to take him on. Larry Wade said he would see the world and forget Naomi Lee and then, one day, he discovered he had been wrong.

It was evening and he was all but dozing under a tree near the fruit ranch where he was working as a packer, when he saw, for the first time, Naomi's side to the old argument. He felt suddenly small and the pride which had kept him silent and made him wander seemed a monstrous thing.

"I'll find her," said Larry Wade. "I'll find her if it's the last thing I do in the world."

And so he set out. Naomi, he discovered, in answer to his letters, had left the old town. No one knew where she had gone but it was thought she was somewhere on the Pacific coast. Larry drew his pay and started West. He followed the crops, took one job and another, and kept on the move. The months passed and he had found no trace of the girl.

There came a time when success and defeat pressed close for position. Larry was out of work and without a cent and he had heard that a girl named Naomi Lee had lived once in the very city in which he found himself. A waitress had told him of such a girl who had worked in the restaurant.

"But she had a notion of getting a better job. She studied and didn't say much. Guess you better look in the offices, or somewhere."

Suppose he found her? Suppose she had moved on, down the coast. How could he follow her? How could he present himself in his worn clothes and with empty pockets?

"I'll have to get money," he told himself, "a lot of money, and in a short time."

It was a poster that decided him. There were prize fights—boxing exhibitions they called them—in this very city. On the road he had been called upon to defend himself more than once. He was hard and active. Larry presented himself to the matchmaker trying hard to act the seasoned boxer and was given a chance.

In the first exhibition, against a raw lad, Larry won and was given enough money to buy food and a new suit. Better yet, he was offered the chance to box with a tougher opponent and for larger stakes.

"I'll have to win," he told himself as he stripped for action, "I'll have to whip this Kid Wallop—for Naomi's sake." He felt he was a gladiator entering the ring and it seemed to him if he could win this purse the money would find Naomi.

Kid Wallop was stocky. He looked at Larry from eyes set deep beneath black brows and the look was one of menace. Larry danced around the Kid, poking in blows and the other waited. The Kid was slow but alert. He wasn't going to waste his strength—he'd wait.

"Keep it up," said Larry's second, "and you may win on points. Only look out for his right."

The battle went on. Larry knew the Kid was looking for the chance, that at any moment the sluggish opponent might leap into action, turning loose that right upon which he depended.

"I'm hitting him," Larry said to himself, "but he doesn't mind."

In the seventh round the Kid began to mind. Repeated blows on his face stung him to anger, which showed only in eyes which gleamed with a more ominous intent.

"This is the last round," it was the second again. "Keep away from him and the scrap's yours. The Kid is going to wade in. He knows you've out-pointed him and he'll try for a knockout."

The Kid came forward, slightly crouched, a figure of purpose, intent and deadly. Larry side-stepped, dodged and ducked and the Kid came on. "I've got to win. Naomi, it will find Naomi."

The Kid's arms were down. Here was the chance. Larry sprang forward, swung from the shoulder, and all but fell as the blow missed. For the first time the Kid smiled. It was just a flash before he struck and that smile was the last thing Larry remembered. They told him he got to his feet and stumbled into a rain of blows. Then he was beaten to the floor and took the count. The Kid had won.

When Larry opened his eyes he was in bed. Then he remembered. This was a hospital and he had lost the fight. Broke again, and without a chance to find Naomi. He closed his eyes. It was hopeless now. If he could have won that fight! Some one was moving in the room. He would not let the nurse see him weep, but with a broken heart and swollen face, it was hard to grin. The loser's stakes. The short end.

The nurse put her hand on his forehead and he looked up. She was smiling and leaning toward him.

"Naomi! Girl, I've been looking all over for—"

"I know, boy. I know. You have told us all about it in your delirium. Now go to sleep, for everything is going to be all right."

Date For Reading Gas Meters Is Changed

The date of meter reading for the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas company changed on October 1, according to R. R. Gilbert, local manager. This was done to more evenly distribute the work of billing and collecting at the Oakland office.

The Oakland division will be read, beginning on the first of each month with the discount period from the 10th to the 20th. Other divisions of the company will be similarly affected. Notices to this effect are now being mailed to the company's customers.

FIRE FIGHTERS PUT OUT SERIOUS MT. LAKE BLAZE

Prompt Action of Oakland Department Prevents Spread.

Fire, said to have originated from an overheated stove, practically destroyed the roof and attic of the two-story frame structure belonging to Miss Kate Lee, corner F and Cedar streets, Mountain Lake Park, about 1 o'clock on Friday afternoon.

An alarm was sent to the Oakland Fire Department and when it arrived the entire roof was a mass of flame. Hardly any water was available for the use of the pumper engine and the fire was brought under control by the use of the two chemical trucks of the local department. A bucket brigade was also formed and this aided in extinguishing the blaze.

The house was occupied by Mrs. Howard Johnson and her four children. An investigation of the cause of the fire showed that an overheated stove in one of the rooms of the second floor probably set the flue blazing and this in turn set fire to the attic. The roof being composed of shingles and very dry, it was soon in flames, and had it not been for the prompt action of the Oakland department the entire building and one nearby would have been consumed.

Much of the furniture had been carried to the street, but the pieces left in the house were very little damaged by water. The house was insured against fire.

MONONGAHELA BUS DRIVER HELD UP THURSDAY NIGHT

Pocketbook, With $60, and Valuable Papers, Taken

No clue to the identity of the two robbers who held up L. F. Smith, Monongahela-West Penn bus driver, last Thursday night near the Manhattan Hotel, Oakland, has been found, according to authorities who have been engaged in making an investigation.

After securing a pocketbook containing more than $60, along with a number of valuable papers and driver's license card, the highwaymen ordered Mr. Smith, with guns presented, to walk down the railroad tracks, and due to the dark condition of the street at that time he was unable to identify the men.

Mr. Smith had just completed his late run to Oakland from Morgantown and was on his way home after having put his bus in the garage when the highwaymen flashed a gun in his face and demanded his money.

Officers and bloodhounds were soon on the trail of the robbers, trailing them as far as Hutton, where the trail was lost.

The money stolen was the personal property of Mr. Smith. Funds belonging to the transportation company was in another pocket and the robbers overlooked this, Mr. Smith said.

K. of P. Parade Committee Appointed.

The Hallowe'en parade committee for the Knights of Pythias celebration on October 31 has been appointed to work out the details and is composed of Dr. H. W. McComas, Guy O. Yutzy, A. R. Martin and Wade H. Hinebaugh. Since the meeting of the town council was postponed until tonight it is not known just which street of town can be used for the booths and square dance floor, but it has been assured that a smooth street will be at the disposal of the committee and that Charles Ream, of Crellin, will call the figures.

There will be two and possibly three bands in the parade and the Oakland Fire Department, at a meeting held Tuesday night, promised to join also.

Hallowe'en novelties will be on sale in the afternoon so that everybody can prepare for the evening's entertainment.

Something the Law Doesn't Take Into Consideration

Although it is out of season to hunt pheasants, the law does not say what to do with one in case it flies through one of your windows and does damage to the amount of $5 or more. In case of douht, should the bird be buried?

Early this morning, Mr. C. H. Loar heard the crashing of glass in a room on the street floor of his home. Upon investigation he saw a pheasant parking on the rug in the front room, or maybe it was taking life easy in a cushioned chair. Anyway, it had come through the window with such force that only n small hole had been made, but the ringneck was completely stunned for the time being.

It is now being cared for in the cellar of the Loar home where it will probably die? ? ?

HIGH SCHOOL ENROLLMENT NOW 263; MORE EXPECTED

Grammar School Has 169—100 Pupils To Start Later

Enrollment in the Oakland High school yesterday reached the total of 263, Miss Katharine Conley, principal, announced. This number is slightly less than the attendance for the same period last year, but before many days it is expected that this record will be changed and an increase in the number of students will be noted.

Schools in Oakland and vicinity opened on last Thursday with small nttendance of pupils.

The Oakland Grammar school has a total enrollment of 169, Miss Marion B. Leary, principal, stated. This is almost one hundred less than the number anticipated to enroll later in the present month.

ALLEGED ROBBER, AFTER FISTIC ENCOUNTER, JAILED

Was Unwilling To Be Placed Under Arrest, But Sheriff Caused Him to Change His Mind

Following the refusal of John Mayor, 40, of near Morgantown, W. Va., to submit peacefully to arrest, a short fistic encoun.. ensued, on Friday in which Sheriff W. D. Casteel came off victorious.

Mayor was given a hearing before Magistrate West Saturday afternoon who held him for his appearance at the December term of the Circuit Court on the charge of larceny, to which he entered a plea of guilty.

The plea of guilt on the part of the prisoner followed the robbery of the Red House filling station owned and operated by Benj. F. Knepp on Friday. Mr. Knepp notified the town officials immediately after the crime had been committed, giving a brief description of the man. Mayor Fraley, upon his return to his home, saw and recognized the man loitering in the residential section of Second street. He notified Sheriff Casteel and upon the arrival of the officer he attempted to engage the man in conversation. Mayor, with a curse, struck at the officer and the fistic encounter followed. State Police Currie and Deputies Seymour and Griffith assisted in placing the man in jail.

At the jail, when Deputy Griffith attempted to search him for concealed weapons, Mayor returned to his fistic mode of defense, but this encounter was also of short duration.

In default of bail in the sum of $400 Mayor will remain in the County Jail until December. The articles alleged to have been stolen consisted of a box of cigars.

The closing sermon last night by the Rev. Simon Snyder, Wheeling, was declared by delegates to have been one of the high spots of the conference. F. E. Brinistool, Charleston, general secretary of the West Virginia Council of Religious Education, also addressed the churchmen.

Committee Appointed For Armistice Day Celebration.

Appointment of committees for the different phases of the Armistice Day celebration was the main accomplishment of the American Legion meeting Monday night at the City Hall.

Walter Janoske, Milton Sincell, C. H. Reckard, Alex. Hesen and Ronald McIntire were appointed on the committee to arrange for a dance on Monday, November 12. Edward Kahl, Donald Sincell and Ernest Gortner were appointed as a committee to arrange for a benefit picture and Delbert Davis and I. R. Rudy will have charge of the afternoon program and the unveiling of the gun on the Court House lawn.

There was a very good attendance at the meeting, and the post commander was exceedingly well pleased. Refreshments were served. Eighteen members signed for the army rifles which may now be had for $1.50 each and the order for these guns will be forwarded on Saturday.

Questions coming before the Legionaires at a near future time will be the election of officers in November and the membership campaign. The next meeting will be on October 15.

Car Damaged By Fire.

A short circuit in the electrical wiring caused the Hudson sedan owned by Henry Menke, Morgantown, W. Va., to catch fire in front of the Garrett National Bank last Wednesday about noon. At the time the owner of the car was in a restaurant eating his lunch. Sheriff Casteel, passing at the time, noticed smoke issuing from heneath the hood of the machine and he cut the wires and extingnished the blaze. Damage to the extent of $65 resulted, which was amply covered by insurance, the owner stnted. Mr. Menke was enroute to Dodson on a business matter.

AUTO THIEF GIVEN YEAR IN HOUSE OF CORRECTION

David DeWitt Found Guilty at Hearing On Saturday

One year in the Maryland House of Correction was the sentence passed upon David DeWitt, 23, living near Oakland, at a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. A. Gonder, Saturday, on the charge of having stolen an automobile.

DeWitt was arrested early last Wednesday morning at a point on the highway between Oakland and McHenry, upon a warrant charging him with the theft of an automobile belonging to Charles Kidd, of King's Run, north of Oakland, one night last week. The car was later recovered at Thomas, West Va. Just before his arrest DeWitt was reported to the officers as loitering in the vicinity of McHenry. Sheriff Casteel and Deputy Sheriff Griffith made the arrest as DeWitt was coming toward Oakland in a car driven by a man from Lynchburg, Va. DeWitt was lodged in jail until his hearing on Saturday.

The prisoner is also said to be wanted at Morgantown, West Va., where he was sentenced to serve six months in jail and from which he escaped after having served two months of the term.

DeWitt, according to Sheriff Casteel, has been arrested at least twice before in Garrett county.

SHEEP TRAIN GETS UNDER WAY; SHOWN HERE FIRST

Goodly Number Hear Addresses of Specialists on Improvement and Marketing of Sheep

A good sized gathering of farmers of Garrett county investigated the Sheep Improvement Special yesterday at the Baltimore and Ohio freight yard in Oakland and heard several interesting talks on the care of sheep and the marketing of wool and also of the animals. A series of stops of the train is being made during the week at various points in Maryland.

The program was opened by J. L. McGlone, County Agent, who introduced O. K. Quivey, general agricultural agent, and he spoke on why the Baltimore and Ohio runs these improvement trains. Mr. George T. Willingmyer, of the United States Department of Agriculture, spoke on the various grades of wool and how the farmers could obtain better prices by grading.

M. M. Stewart, secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau, talked on advantages of a wool pool and the likelihood of more money from this arrangement.

A. E. Molten, a representative of the meat packers, spoke on the needs of the market and what the packers desired in the way of a dressed carcass.

K. A. Clarke, University of Maryland sheep specialist, spoke on sheep of Maryland and the kind the farmers should produce in order to obtain better prices for their product.

Moving pictures were shown at the beginning of each program.

Following the lectures a sheep was killed and examined for sheep worms. The animal was picked from a Garrett county flock by the county agent and was said to have had worms. On examination this proved to be true and showed the value of treating sheep for this disorder.

The improvement train consisted of a lecture car, an exhibit car with dipping vats, placard showing steps on how to treat for stomach worms, various types, difference between docked and undocked animals, etc.; a flat car with movable type of sheep pens, hay and grain racks; an exhibit of various grades of sheep and proper method of packing for shipment. Three market grades of sheep were shown—choice, good and common—and the price for each, which varied from 14 cents for the best to 9 cents for the lowest grade.

It has been the custom in West Virginia to take orders for rams at this time and the following progress is shown: In 1926, 100 rams were sold; 1927, 154; and 1928, 212. These rams are ordered through the county agents and selected by University officials. Arrangements have been made for this to be done in Maryland next fall.

The train after leaving Oakland, stopped at Swanton where a similar program was carried out.

Registration Shows that Republicans are Largely in the Majority.

Two hundred fourteen Republicans were registered October 2, in four election precincts of Garrett county, as compared with 43 Democrats, according to an announcement made by the Board of Supervisors of Elections.

The districts listed included 7, 14, 13, and o. Other districts had not sent in a report, but a similar landslide in favor of the Republicans is expected in most cases.

October 9 is the last date on which anybody will be allowed to register for this fall's election.

MILK DRYING EQUIPMENT NOW ADDED TO CREAMERY

Study of Importance of By-products Prompts Company To Make Another Improvement

After having given much study to the importance of by-products in the milk industry, the Oakland Creamery is now making another addition to its plant on Center street, whie hwill care for some of the by-products in the form of powdered milk.

This addition, a 20x20 room in the southwest corner of the plant, will be the second addition since spring and the latest of many over a period of several years since the creamery was established here.

The contract was awarded to Stanton D. Whipkey, local contractor, and is under the supervision of L. H. Stewart, chief engineer of the Imperial Ice Cream company, Parkersburg. The room will be known as the drying room and the structure and machinery will be in readiness for operation on Monday morning. The approximate cost was placed at $3,000.

The powdered milk will be used as calf feed, chicken feed, and the better grade will be sold to bakers for use in breadmaking. It is hoped finally to find a local market for the product.

Variety of Products

With the addition of the drying plant which produces powdered milk, the creamery now manufactures condensed milk for ice cream and baking industries; sweet cream for ice cream industry; sweet cream for city markets; ice for local distribution; ships whole milk to the city markets, and is a distributor of Imperial Ice cream.

The entire floor of the plant will be resurfaced and a skeleton iron floor will be laid in the cement to prevent wear, Mr. Stewart said. This work will be completed next week.

Started In Small Way

When the Creamery company began work here in April, 1920 the necessary housing covered a space only 66 by 36. With constant additions of the following since that time the present building now covers an approximate space of 72 by 115, and is easily accessible for farmers with their milk trucks.

The small plant was at first rearranged; a shed for trucks was built; the capacity of the ice plant was increased to twice its former size; two large boilers were installed in place of one small one; three wells were dug to give sufficient water supply; a storage room was added; coal bins enlarged; ice cream and milk storage room enlarged; and finally the powdered milk plant which will go into operation on Monday, was added. "The next time we enlarge," Mr. Sprague, manager of the local plant, said, "I hope they take the heavenly route."

Bayard Man's Body Found In Potomac River.

The body of Peter Morgan, about 60 years old, was found Monday afternoon in the Potomac River near Bayard, West Va. It is believed that he fell off the river bank Saturday night or Sunday morning and being stunned by the fall, was drowned. He had not been seen since Saturday night.

The body was found in three feet of water, near the river bank. Justice Williams, of Garrett county, took charge of the body and had it prepared for burial by the Bolden Undertaking Company of Oakland. Morgan went to Bayard about 15 years ago from Lonaconing and had been employed by the Penn-Maryland Collieries, Inc., first as miner and later as stable boss. He was unmarried and lived alone in a house near the Nethkin mine.

Isaac Tusing Found Dead at His Home in Oakland This Morning.

Isaac Tusing, aged 52 years, was found dead in a chair in his home on Center street, Oakland, at an early hour this morning. Death was due to a heart attack. He was a stone mason by trade and the father of several children. He was industrious and had worked all day yesterday at his trade. Funeral arrangements at the time this paper goes to press had not been made.

By Scoop

Vacation Days

Although the school children have just about forgotten vacation Scoop was suddenly reminded of it when the Col. asked for a week's freedom from the worry of taking pictures for this column. And since Archibaldson does not need much type this week, and since Scoop himself would enjoy a vacation away from the typewriter, Col. Bell was granted a leave of absence of 6 days.

A Photographic Marvel

Col. Bell, however, had two pictures taken during the days of the Garrett County Fair, and he has submitted them to Scoop. The first is a snap of the hold-up scene on Railroad street last Thursday night. Mr. Smith is the one in the midle.

The Hold-Up

Archibaldson says if you wound up your watch just once in a while you wouldn't expect satisfactory results, yet, some merchants expect a steady flow of business from an occasional ad. Note.--This is the first of a series of wise cracks about advertising, all of which will come regularly from between the teeth of the make-up man.

By the way, Soldier Halsey wasn't allowed to go to the Garrett County Fair grounds on any of the four days, except in company with his better half. Experience teaches well.

However, the "Dum-dum" exhibit tent didn't seem to lose any money.

Giving It Away

While the Col. was viewing the people at the Fair grounds he caught Berne Teter (just an ordinary bank cashier) in the act of receiving one of those free pocketbooks and giving away two tens for a five spot. The smile vanished several hours later after he had awakened.

THE HOMEMAKERS CORNER

BY MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN
Home Demonstration Agen.

In continuing her series of articles this week, Miss Elsie Benthien, home demonstration agent, tells about the making of jellies and includes several recipes of value to the homemakers of Garrett county.

Jelly making has a special place of its own on the housekeeping calendar. Jelly is easy to make if certain rules are followed. It can be made from fresh fruit juices in late summer and early fall, or from caned fruit juices in the wintertime.

Jelly is the product obtained by combining the juice or a combination of juices of certain fruits with the right proportion of sugar and cooking the mixture until it becomes a clear, tender, sparkling, transparent quivering mold.

To obtain best results in jelly making, it is advisable to work with a small quantity of juice. Two quarts of juice is sufficient to handle at one time.

To test the jelly, dip a spoon into the juice and if it sheets and twodrops hang together from the side of the spoon, the jelly is done and should be removed from the fire immediately.

Jelly table—in making apple, crab apple or quince and apple jely, there should be two-thirds cup of sugar to one cup of juice; in making grape with under-ripe grapes, from three-fourths to one cup is for one cup of juice.

Conserve—A conserve is a mixture of several fruits and is made like jam. It may contain nuts or raisins, both or neither.

Grape Conserve—3 lbs. seeded grapes; 6 cups sugar; 1 lb. English walnuts, small pieces. Mix ingredients and cook together as for jam. Juice of orange and peel of one-half orange in small pieces, may be added for variation. Seal in clean, hot Ball jars.

Quince, Apple and Cranberry Conserve—Two cups quince pulp, 2 cups cranberry pulp, 2 cups apple pulp, 1 orange, juice and grated rind; 4 cups sugar, 3-4 cup English walnuts. Combine ingredients, except nuts, and boil mixture rapidly until thick. Pack into clean, hot Ball jars and seal at once. If walnuts are used, chop them and add to mixture just before conserve is removed from stove.

Grape Marmalade—Wash grapes and remove stems. Press pulp from skins; cook pulp and press through sieve to remove seeds; add the skins to pulp; measure mixture and allow 2-3 as much sugar as pulp. Cook mixture until skins are tender (about 20 minutes) and seal at once in clean, hot Ball jars.

Preserved Crab Apples—Select perfect, well-colored crab apples, wash thoroughly, remove blossom ends, leaving stems and skins. Place apples in thick, boiling syrup made in proportion of 3 parts sugar to 1 part of water. Cook gently until tender (about 30 miuntes). Pack hot into clean, hot Ball jars, cover with boiling syrup and seal immediately.

Pear Chips—Eight pears, 4 lbs. sugar, 1-4 lb. Canton ginger, 4 lemons. Wipe pears, remove stems, quarter and core; then cut in small pieces. Add sugar and ginger, and let stand over night. In the morning add lemons cut in small pieces, rejecting seeds and cook slowly 3 hours. Put into a stone jar or seal in jars.

MT. LAKE PARK.

Another destructive fire occurred here last Thursday at the dwelling owned by Miss Kate Lee, located on the corner of F and Cedar streets. The roof was almost completely burned away and other damage from fire and water on the interior of the structure resulted. The secretary of the Women's Home Missionary society of the M. E. church gave an interesting account of the work done by this organization in the United States when she spoke here recently.

In anticipation of the convention of the United Presbyterian church which is to be held here during the month of July next year a committee from that body was here last week for the purpose of inspecting nil the public buildings, hotels nnd boarding houses so as to complete the plans of the church organization for the convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Baker left the Park last Monday morning for their winter home at Evanston, Ill.

GOVERNOR SMITH SHOULD MAKE MORE SPEECHES

Governor Smith's first speaking trip has been an unqualified success—from the Republican standpoint. If he does no better in subsequent efforts, Herbert Hoover may yet have to thank him for being the most effective orator on his side.

It now appears to be the consensus of opinion that Gov. Smith's chances of election would have been far greater had he never ventured upon his western expedition, for upon that trip he demonstrated to the country that lies west of the Alleghenies that he is a hopeless provincial—that he simply can't think in terms of anything but New York City.

That metropolis, the home of the Tammany Tiger, is at once his Alpha and Omega. It is the only thing he understands, because repeated elections in his own state have demonstrated that he even lacks the confidence of New York farmers whom he so frequently has attempted to Tammanyize. But, thanks to that Republican majority in the legislature which he has undertaken to belittle, New York farmers haven't yet found it necessary to bow to Tammany.

Gov. Smith's trip has demonstrated that it was no idle statement he made when he said that state for state of the union is a duplication of New York state. That is at once an affront and an injustice, and fully explains the hopeless maze of words upon which he entered in his several discussions that revealed him to be completely lacking in an understanding of the aims, aspirations and problems of the west and middle west.

Nobody knows what he was driving at in his farm speech; his Oklahoma address was as unfortunate as it was unjustified because therein he injected a religious issue into the campaign; his Denver address, according to persons who should be favorable to him, was a "flop" and might better not have been made from the Democratic standpoint, and so the list could be extended.

While the Democratic candidate has been indulging in Tammany politics, Mr. Hoover made his Newark labor speech, an address which reveals the mind of a statesman and a man who knows not only what it means to work with his hands but who is dedicated to use all his wisdom and experience to get a square deal for the farmers and workers of this country.

And, what is more, the impression is growing daily that the people of the country have sized up things in the same way and that Hoover will receive the call to the higher service of the American people. But, it is too early for any Republican to stop working for the election of the ticket.

THE SERVICES OF THE BANKS

Not many years ago one could often find people who had a grudge against banks and bankers. They would often declaim against these people, whom they believed exacted a tribute from the people and grew rich out of the people's money.

Most people get so many free services out of banks nowadays that this feeling has mostly disappeared. They give us an enormous amount of free advice about investments, business management, and handling of money affairs, that if we had to pay for all that counsel as we have to pay in some fields, a heavy bill would be charged us. But they look at it in a generous way that when they save money for people much of that money saved goes on deposit with them.

An enormous amount of money is wasted annually by being lost in worthless investments. There is no excuse for such losses, when most of them would have been saved if people had only gone to their home town bankers and asked advice.

When those slick salesmen come around and want you to put your cash in that stock that is going to make you rich in a short time, your banker will show you any flaws that exist in the proposition.

The banks of today are more prosperous than ever before, and one reason is that they are doing a great deal of advertising. Old fashioned bank advertisements commonly consisted mostly of announcements of the location of their place of business, list of officers, etc. But thousands of modern banks are using in their advertising brief arguments in favor of thrift, economy, prudent investment, etc. This advertising interests the people, draws money out of old stockings and puts it to work, gives people financial education and increases bank resources. Banking made a great stride ahead when it put printer's ink to work.

ANOTHER DECREASE NOTED IN MARRIAGES THIS WEEK

Number on Friday Exceeds that On Saturday During Period

Another decrease in the number marriage licenses issued was noted during the past week at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court and a peculiar circumstance is that more licenses were issued on Friday than on Saturday, the latter day being usually the heaviest one of the week for the marriage license clerk.

Eight permits were granted on Friday, while the best that could be done on Saturday, when fifteen applicants are usually accommodated, was the issuance of three.

For the month of September 117 marriage licenses were issued, which was 22 less than for the same period last year. Twenty-two of the total number were issued during the week ending Monday at noon. Two of those issued were marked "don't publish," while two applicants were refused licenses on account of the parties being under the age limit.

The total amount thus far contributed is $3,357,590, and the appeal to the nation is for a minimum fund of five millions. Thousands of people are being cared for and the greatest danger now confronting the victims is the possible spread of an epidemic.

The members of the Garrett County Chapter urge the immediate assistance of all those who can contribute to the fund. Money will be received in several of the Garrett cuonty banks or may be sent direct to Mrs. Renninger. It is hoped that possibly the churches will assist in this matter.

He came out at the head of a great army of volunteer citizens—men, women and children—who had, at his request, saved and skimped, and had thus helped him to conserve the food that was necessary to win the war."

FRIENDSVILLE HIGH TEAM WINS IN JUDGING CONTEST

Ernest Hauser and Bruce Jenkins Win First Place Honors Monday—Conover Judge

The High School Boys' Judging contest to decide the winning team of the county in cattle judging was held on Monday and was won by the Friendsville High School team. Accident was second; Oakland, third, and Grantsville, fourth. J. A. Conover, University of Maryland, acted as judge.

The contests were held on the farms of Carl Frazee, Fred. Trickett, Paul Friend, of Garrett county, and the farm at Hopemont, near Terra Alta, under the management of Mr. Hayes, who had an excellent herd of Holstein cattle.

The following composed the teams: Ernest Hauser and Bruce Jenkins, Friendsville; John Speicher and Ralph Buckle, Accident; John Stevenson and Wilbur Gnegy, Oakland; Allen Baker and Alvin Beachy, Grantsville. The four agriculture instructors in the high schools acted as coaches.

In the Guernsey breeds, Ernest Hauser, 1; Ralph Buckle, 2; John Speicher, 3. Jersey breeds, Hauser, 1; Buckle, 2; Speicher, 3. In the Holstein breeds, Ernest Hauser and Bruce Jenkins tied for first; John Stevenson and Wilbur Gnegy tied for second.

High scores for all breeds, Hauser, 1; Jenkins, 2; Buckle, 3. A prize of $2.50 in gold offered by the First National Bank, Oakland, for the highest score made by an individual, was won by Ernest Hauser. A prize of $2 and a third prize of $1 offered by the agriculture clubs were won by Jenkins and Buckle, respectively.

In the open contests a special prize of $2.50 in gold was offered by the county agent and was won by Hauser. Otto Menear, Oakland, was second, and Ben Fike, Friendsville, third.

Other boys participating in the contest were William Spiker, Lawrence Bittinger, William DeBerry, Oakland; Everett C. Weitzell, Accident; Glenn Fike, Floyd Umbel, Paul Kisner, of Friendsville; Allen Baker, Wm. E. Bevans, Rexford Bittinger, Grantsville.

Two boys and one alternate from each school will go to Frederick Md., next week to compete with boys from other counties in a similar contest. The coaches will accompany the teams and it is also probable that County Agent McGlone will also attend.

The agriculture departments wish to thank those who have contributed in any way to the sucess of the contest. The Grantsville team was delayed by car trouble and were not able to attend the contest in the morning.

Boat Club Considering Building Floating Pier on Lake.

That the Allegheny Boat Club will have a floating dock or pier next year was decided at a meeting of the members of that body held Monday night in the City Hall. Preparations for the building of this pier will be made this fall while the water is low, Charles W. Ream, commodore, stated. Railroad rails will be sunk in cement blocks at the time when the water reaches its lowest stage this fall so that when next spring arrives with its rains there will be two solid uprights on which to fasten the floating pier.

This arrangement will permit those who enjoy swimming to take a dive from off the pier in safety into deep water and will also afford an admirable boat landing, no matter what level the water reaches.

The members of the club also decided to securely close the club house for the winter and to clear the shore line of driftwood and debris while the water is at its present low stage and to make preparations for the safe storing of the boats. About ten members of the club were present at the meeting.

Mr. Playford A. Naylor To Wed Florida Girl October 18.

The Rev. and Mrs. Robert Eugene Telford, Sebring, Florida, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Charlott Craft Telford, and Mr. Playford Alonzo Naylor, of Sebring, formerly of Oakland. The wedding will occur on October 18 at Sebring and will be attended by the bridegroom's parents, Senator and Mrs. A. D. Naylor, Miss Mary Drake Naylor and Mr. and Mrs. S. Townshend Naylor, the party having left Oakland on Saturday by motor for Sebring.

FIFTEEN FARMERS MAKE DAIRY INSPECTION TRIP

Farms of Washington Market Milk Shippers Are Examined

Fifteen interested dairymen of this county, in company with E. Stanley Haller, field representative of the Imperial Ice Cream Company, made an inspection of several milk shipping points and dairy farms in Virginia last Friday and returned with renewed interest in making Garrett county an outstanding dairying county.

The party left from the Grange Milling and Supply Company's warehouse at Loch Lynn at seven o'clock, making their first stop at Winchester, Va., where they had lunch. The members of the party visited the farm of J. V. Nichols, who has 62 head of cattle. Mr. Nichols' herd averaged last year over 400 pounds of butter fat per cow in the Cow Testing Association. The lowest average for any of the farms visited was 300 pounds per cow.

The party also visited the farms of H. T. Pancoast Will Brown, W. H. Wilson, who is 74 years old, and who has been shipping milk to Washington for 45 years and now supplies the White House with cream; Overbrook Farm, W. W. Everett, owner, and several others.

It was estimated that there were about 50 cows on each farm visited, principally Guernseys and Holsteins. They found a variety of barns, but all fulfilled the requirements of the Washington market. All of the farmers visited were large shippers to the capital, Mr. Haller stated.

Those making the trip from Garrett county included Ross Watson, manager of the Grange Milling and Supply Company; Owen Martin, Harry Porter, Truman C. Bittinger, Sam D. Beachy, W. S. Friend, Paul Friend, E. D. Schrock, Ernest Mosser, Galen Fike, N. D. Schrock, Benjamin Friend, E. O. Liller, O. C. Bittinger, Charles Baker, E. Stanley Haller. The trip was made in cars furnished by Benj. Friend, Ross Watson and E. S. Haller.

Triplets Start to Oakland High School Monday.

Three youthful students presented themselves at the door of Oakland High School on Monday morning and announced themselves ready for the four years' training. There was nothing unusual in starting to school as hundreds of others had done the same thing year after year, but not under the same circumstances.

The three boys are triplets, Lee, Glenn and Burton Ashby, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Ashby, of Crellin.

The admission of triplets as members of the student body of the local school has never before occurred and it is probable that these boys will hold the record for some time to come.

MRS. MARY S. FRAZEE.

Mrs. Mary S. Frazee Oakland, aged 88 years, died last Thursday evening about 7:30 o'clock. Death was due to heart failure. She was riding in an automobile enroute from Mt. Lake to Oakland at the time of her death.

FOREST LOVERS TO TOUR THROUGH GARRETT COUNTY

Party Will Start from Baltimore Tomorrow—Sugar Camps and Virgin Forests To be Studied

A tour through Western Maryland forests, conducted by the Maryland Forestry Association and the Maryland Forestry Department, will be made tomorrow and Saturday, according to information received at The Republican office. The party will leave Baltimore at eight o'clock tomorrow morning.

Friday will be spent enroute by the party visiting in Frederick and in Allegany county. Saturday morning the tourists will come into Garrett county stopping first at Grantsville where the possibilities of the maple sugar industry in Garrett county will be studied and the beauties of the sugar orchards admired in their autumn dress.

From Grantsville the party will continue to the top of Meadow Mountain where the Bittinger tower will be visited stopping en route at various sugar camps in that section. From the Bittinger tower the route will be over the county road to the estate of F. F. Nicola where the large forest plantings made during the past eight years will be examined.

Luncheon will be served at Deep Creek Lake, controlled by the Maryland Conservation Commission. The afternoon will be spent in examining the State forests of Western Garrett county, including the famous Swallow Falls and Herrington Manor, which contains the largest stand of virgin timber in Western Maryland.

It is expected that a large representation of people will avail themselves of this opportunity to study local forest conditions.

Deer Park Hotel To Be Sold at Public Auction.

The Deer Park Hotel, located at Deer Park, six miles east of Oakland on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, will be sold at public auction on November 7 at ten o'clock in front of the Court House here according to information reaching The Republican yesterday afternoon.

The property was purchased three or four years ago by the Duncan Hotel Company from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. The Duncan Hotel Company owned large holdings in Florida and was caught in the slump in real estate in that State with large holdings upon which no realization of values could be had, hence an assignment was made which included the local property and the sale to occur on November 10 is a result.

OLD POSTER, TELLING OF WHAT OAKLAND BOASTED BEFORE GARRETT BECAME A COUNTY, IS DISCOVERED

Dr. McComas, Looking Through Old Volume, Finds Paper Sent To Voters at That Time

In the days of A. D., but long B. P. (before prohibition), around 1872 to be exact, when Garrett was just being declared a county all to itself, people were wondering where the county seat would be located. Oakland residents, as well as those in several other less pretentious towns, thought that the county seat should be in their town and many hot arguments were advanced as to the benefits to be conferred upon the general public and to be derived by the towns making bids for its location in their bailiwick. Swanton wanted it; Grantsville was also a contender and McHenry went so far as to begin the erection of a hotel to accommodate lawyers, the court and possible visitors attending the court or having business in connection with the administration of justice and their presence at the seat of government.

Oakland also wanted the county seat and then as now when the public or an individual wants to make known to a waiting world its or his desires, printer's ink was invoked.

Dr. H. W. McComas, in looking through an old volume which was a part of his late father's library, discovered the following circular, addressed to the voters of the proposed new county, and in it is stated why Oakland should be selected as the county seat.

CIRCULAR

To the Voters of the Proposed New County.

In view of the location of the County Seat of the Proposed New County of Garrett, the Citizens of Oakland offer the following reasons why the Town of Oakland should be selected as the County Seat of said New County,

1st. Advocating the interests of the great majority living within the limits of the proposed New County (and candor compels us to add) the interests of the eight hundred individuals constituting the present population of Oakland, as against the interests of all other places.

2nd. Oakland is nearly central in location, is on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, a firstclass station, at which stop all trains carrying passengers, connected by well graded roads with Selbysport, Accident and Grantsville and leading into West Virginia by roads connecting with the North Western Virginia Turnpike.

3rd. Its enterprise and business connection with a wide scope of country, as evidenced by its Woolen Factory, Cabinet Maker's establishments and twelve stores, doing a business of over two hundred thousand dollars a year.

4th. We have a fine firstclass Hotel, several smaller ones, a number of private boarding houses and many beautiful residences, Masonic and Odd Fellows Hall, with five beautiful churches of different denominations.

The Town is incorporated, the streets well graded, with good side walks and last but not least, a two-story firstclass School House.

5th. When it was first proposed to divide the County, one of our prominent citizens offered to donate the lands necessary for the public buildings, and although he gives his name in no circular, we the Citizens of Oakland, vouch for his good faith.

We have ample accommodations for Court purposes and propose to furnish such for five years to come, free of charge, or until the Commissioners shall see fit to erect more suitable buildings.

For the reasons we earnestly appeal to the citizens in the proposed New County to consider the claims of Oakland.

Signed by E. G. Hall, Ralph Thayer, P. Hamill, John M. Jarboe, John Dailey, John Hughes, S. L. Townshend, Peter Shirer, R. T. Browning, Thomas Coddington, James R. Bishop, George W. Bosley, Charles Sweeney, Warren M. Coddington, Peter A. Chisholm, Bowie Johnson, G. A. Spedden, John H. Jarboe, D. E. Offutt and 100 other citizens.

FIRE DESTROYED CRELLIN BARBER SHOP YESTERDAY

Building and Contents a Total Loss to the Owner.

Fire, said to have been caused when a bucket of tar boiled over on a gasoline stove, completely destroyed the barber shop of Arthur Warnick in Crellin yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock. The loss was estimated by Mr. Warnick to be approximately $200. No insurance was carried.

The owner of the shop was engaged in tarring the roof of the building yesterday afternoon and was heating tar over a gasoline stove. He left the shop for a moment to purchase more of the material at a nearby store and when he returned smoke was issuing from the windows. Upon opening the door he was confronted by a mass of flames.

The Oakland Fire department was called as it was feared that a garage and the Boys' Band hall next door would burn, but a bucket brigade prevented the spread. There were seven automobiles in the garage. The fire having gained great headway, the entire building had burned to the ground when the department arrived.

Mr. Warnick used the barber shop every Friday afternoon and Saturday, and the building contained numerous supplies, all of which were destroyed.

SECOND STREET WILL BE USED FOR CELEBRATION

Town Council Grants Permission To K. of P. For Hallowe'en.

Oakland's street carnival celebration of Hallowe'en the afternoon and evening of October 31, under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias lodge of Oakland, has received the endorsement of the Mayor and Town Council, that body having consented to turn over Second street between Liberty and Alder streets, to the organization for the placing of their booths, concessions and dance floor.

Tentative plans adopted by the various committees indicate that the celebration will be one of the largest and most colorful ever staged in this town.

Fraternal orders, clubs and other organizations have been invited to participate and to enter floats and in the parade of mummers many grotesque costumes will be seen. Local merchants are being asked to contribute funds and articles to be given as prizes to the paraders.

Second street between Liberty and Alder streets will be gaily decorated and Hallowe'en novelties will be on sale in the afternoon in addition to many things that are usually found on sale at the annual Knights of Pythis picnics. There will be a platform erected where those so inclined may engage in square dancing. The music will be furnished by the String Band Entertainers. Dancing will be free, the manager of the carnival, stated.

The carnival will open at noon and from that time on until late at night the celebration will continue.

The parade of the mummers will begin at seven o'clock in the evening and will probably form on Oak street. There will be two and possibly three bands and other attractions and with the numerous costumed figures and floats in the procession the evening promises to be one of entertainment and gaiety. The parade will be followed by the awarding of prizes, the street dance and the Chevrolet coach will be presented.

Health Nurse to Conduct Class at Loch Lynn Heights

A class in home nursing and care of the sick will be formed next Monday afternoon at 2:30 at the community house, Loch Lynn, Miss Rhesa M. King, County Health Nurse, announced this morning.

The instruction will be absolutely free and everyone who is interested in this subject will be cordially welcome, Miss King said. The class will meet every two weeks.

Florida Relief Fund Growing.

Florida and Porto Rico relief funds reached a total of $45.67 in this county yesterday, according to a report made by Mrs. J. C. Renninger, treasurer of the Garrett County Chapter, American Red Cross.

In addition to those listed in these columns last Thursday the following have made contributions: Miss Bertha White, $1; Oakland Presbyterian church, $24.67; Epworth League, M. E. church, $5; Mrs. N. V. Liller and Neil V. Liller, $5.

AN ATTEMPT TO DESTROY BAKERY IS FRUSTRATED

Fire Is Discovered and Extinguished by Carl Brown Early Sunday—$100 Reward Posted

An attempt, or what appears to have been an attempt to fire the buildings of the Oakland Model Bakery, owned and operated by Henry Lauer, was frustrated about 6:50 o'clock on Sunday morning when Carl Brown pulled some oil soaked rags and bits of wood from the back door of the bakery just as the blaze was being communicated to the building.

No motive for the act could be assigned by Fire Chief George Kerins or by Mr. Lauer. Several theories have been advanced, one of which is that there was a "fire-bug" in the vicinity; another, that somebody had a grudge of some kind against not only Mr. Lauer but everyone owning property in the locality, and another that the fire was intended for another building in the immediate neighborhood but that a mistake had been made in placing the saturated rags and kindling wood.

As the result of this bold attempt to destroy valuable property, the City Council and the Oakland Fire Department have offered rewards totaling $100 for evidence that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the party or parties responsible.

"This was almost a bad beginning for Fire Prevention Week," Chief Kerins said, "which is being observed this week from October 7 to 13, but it happened that nothing serious resulted. Every property owner is urged to help reduce America's staggering fire waste by observing this week to the best of his ability."

Pleasant Valley Grange Holds an Interesting Session

Preparations for a goodfellowship rally and banquet were made at the last meeting of Pleasant Valley Grange last Thursday night in the Grange Hall. A committee of six was appointed to make arrangements for the dinner, the committee being composed of O. T. Glaser, Paul Friend, E. O. Liller, Benj. Friend, Mrs. Nellie Bowers and Mrs. Mary Custer.

The banquet is being planned for some time in November and it is urged by the committee that every member of the Grange cooperate fully in making it a success.

Following the business meeting last Thursday evening an interesting lecture hour was enjoyed. E. O. Liller and Miss Elsie Benthien made short talks. There was also some group singing. Music was furnished by Mr. Kitzmiller and accompanists. The next meeting will be on Thursday, October 18, and a program which promises to be interesting has been arranged.

To Conduct Schools in Sheep, Poultry and Dairying Problems

Arrangements for schools in sheep, poultry and dairying problems in four high schools of Garrett county during the winter are being made by the agriculture instructors in these schools, J. L. McGlone, county agent, and the Extension Service of the University of Maryland, the first of which probably will be held in the month of November.

The details are being worked out by Emerson Bishoff, Grantsville agriculture instuctor; Harry Beggs, of the Accident school; John Carter, of the Friendsville school, and Thomas Graser, Oakland school, in connection with Mr. McGlone. It is stated that the schools will consist of lectures in the afternoon and evening and will be open to all male students of the respective schools.

There will be three talks on each subject at each of the four high schools, according to present arrangements, the speakers to come from the University of Maryland Extension Division. K. A. Clarke will deliver the lectures on sheep; W. H. Rice will have charge of the poultry lectures, and J. A. Conover, in the dairying classes. The subject in dairying will be covered in December.

Divoreed Couple Remarried

Mrs. Emily Cushing Houck, who obtained a divorce during the past summer from her husband, Raymond D. Houck, in a court at Reno, was remarried to Mr. Houck at her home in Oakland Monday afternoon, Rev. Paul G. Linaweaver, rector of St. Matthew's P. E. church performing the ceremony.

SMITH REVIVES AN ISSUE BURIED LONG AGO

Governor Smith is finding it very difficult to break down the assertion of Herbert Hoover that the record of the Republican administration during the last seven and a half years "constitutes a period of rare courage in leadership and constructive action."

His job is a hard one because he is up against a stone wall of actual and amazing achievement that is recognized very generally.

His weapon as wielded in Helena, Montana, was composed of an issue that is dead and was buried by the people of the United States at the election of four years ago. Pretty short on argument is the Tammany candidate for the presidency when he has to dig up the old oil scandals as a reason why Hoover should be defeated.

That oil business was rotten—rotten to the core. It started in May, 1921, when Secretary Fall in the newly formed cabinet of President Harding secured the transfer of the control of the so-called Navy oil lands from the Navy Department to the Department of the Interior. Harding had faith in Fall, who was a Senator of the United States from New Mexico when appointed. Fall played him false. What the Secretary did was to deal in secret for the leasing of these oil lands. It was "cold blooded," as Governor Smith says. It was "a deliberate fraud." No doubt about that. But there has never been a shred of evidence to show that the President himself had knowledge of the vicious deal, and when the Governor undertakes to hold the Republican Party leadership and incidentally Herbert Hoover, who had joined the cabinet as Secretary of Commerce, to any responsibility in the matter he is talking the veriest nonsense.

For what happened? An investigation of the leases produced proof of corruption on the part of individuals—hidden corruption. Harding died. Calvin Coolidge succeeded. He turned the law loose on the betrayers of the Nation. He appointed Atlee Pomerene, Democrat, and Owen J. Robert, Republican, to prosecute the cases.

Every inch of those oil grounds has been restored to the Government.

Individual guilt is not party guilt. But party leadership would have been guilty had it not cleaned house. It did clean house. It cleaned very thoroughly. Individual corruption on the part of the Director of the Veterans' Bureau and the Alien Property Custodian—aftermath of the war—was discovered and these criminals are languishing in the Atlanta Penitentiary. No government on earth has been conducted with a greater degree of efficiency, of honesty, of success and of prosperity-promotion than that of Calvin Coolidge.

In 1924 the oil deals had long been fully uncovered. The Democrats went into the presidential campaign with Republican corruption as their main issue. All the facts were then fresh in the minds of the public, and this public mind realized that criminality had been confined to individuals, had the utmost faith in the Republican leadership that had grappled with it and retained Coolidge in the White House by an overwhelming majority of the Electoral College.

That issue, we have already said, is dead. Jim Reed, the Bellowing Bull of Missouri, thought otherwise. He made corruption his campaign cry and stumped various states in behalf of his own nomination at the Houston convention. He chased delegates, but the delegates turned and chased him. A more humiliated candidate never emerged from a convention, Democratic or Republican. Even his own state repudiated him at the recent primaries and cast him into the outer darkness. He was far behind the time.

Now, we have no objection if Governor Smith, lacking for campaign material, desires to talk about oil wells, but we do object most seriously to his efforts to besmirch Herbert Hoover. He says of Hoover: "He sat in the cabinet of the President while all this was going on and you can search the record from one end to the other, you can delve into it in the minutest detail, and you will fail to find a single word of condemnation." But what did Hoover know of the oil leases? Why, the Governor himself destroys his own insinuation when he acknowledges that "great secrecy surrounded the whole transaction." So completely was the cabinet kept in the dark by Secretary Fall that when an oil company, hearing rumors of a contemplated lease, asked Hoover to use his influence with the Interior Department to permit a bid on its part, and when Hoover went to the department about it, he was told that nothing had been done or was contemplated. Yet at that very time the leases had been consummated. Secretary Fall lied to Secretary Hoover.

That there may be no doubt concerning the attitude of Mr. Hoover concerning corruption, let us turn to his acceptance address wherein he says:

"In the past years there has been corruption participated in by individual officials and members of both political parties in national, state and municipal affairs. Too often this corruption has been viewed with indifference by a great number of our people. It would seem unnecessary to state the elementary requirement that government must inspire confidence not only in its ability but in its national, state or municipal, is a double wrong. It is treason to the state. It is destructive of self-government. Government in the United States rests not only upon the consent of the governed, but upon the conscience of the nation. Government weakens the moment its integrity is doubted. Moral incompetency by those entrusted with government is a blighting wind upon private integrity. There must be no place for cynicism in the creed of America."

The Coolidge Administration has inspired confidence. In the disposition of hundreds of millions of dollars by the Hoover organization in handling the affairs of the starving people of Belgium and France and later in a dozen different countries of Europe not a cent was misappropriated, and Herbert Hoover, spurning the temptation to build up an enormous private fortune, devoted himself solely and without salary (he even paid his own expenses, and they were very heavy to the cause of humanity. It was perhaps the most remarkable sacrifice of self in all history. Therefore he, too, has inspired confidence.

When malice or deliberate misrepresentation runs up against solid facts malice and misrepresentation are bound to be self-destructive.

TO THE REAR WHEELS

An oil that forms a perfect seal between piston and cylinder wall, prevents the loss of the explosive power of your gasoline. This makes it work for you.

In engine tests, the effective power developed by a motor is commonly measured by machines called dynamometers. In almost daily tests with these devices, "Standard" Motor Oil is being compared with other motor oils, commonly used.

Results show the same motors develop from 4 to 10 per cent more power with "Standard" Motor Oil.

No wonder motorists say of "Standard": You can actually feel the difference.

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FAILED TO IMPRESS THE WEST.

Exactly a month remains before election. Within that period, observers are now generally agreed, Governor Alfred E. Smith must make tremendous and virtually impossible gains in order to win. Every indication points to a Hoover-Curtis victory, and by a decisive margin.

When the Democratic candidate began his western trip three weeks ago, it was unanimously agreed that a golden opportunity to bolster his cause lay before him. With the results of that 6,000 mile journey carefully tabulated and estimated, Gov. Smith's venture beyond the Mississippi quite evidently has failed to accomplish its purpose. No notable increase in Smith sentiment is reported from the states which he visited, and that should leave all of them safely Republican, as they were in both 1920 and 1924.

The failure of the Democratic candidate to arouse the west, according to a consensus of opinion, is due to his lack of a program for a sound national administration. Given a chance to tell the serious-minded folk of that section exactly how he proposed to run the government, if elected, he contented himself with abstract discussion of several unrelated issues, without getting down to practical discussion of the problems involved. As a result, he left his audiences without information as to his program on the tariff, on fiscal policies, on immigration and other equally important questions, and these oversights have shown his weakness.

Herbert Hoover, in contrast to his opponent, has been adhering to a well considered campaign program. From the start of the campaign, his purpose seems to have been to convince the voters that he has a thorough understanding of every major issue involved in this campaign. With the splendid record of the Coolidge administration as an example, Mr. Hoover has devoted his speeches to analysis of the big problems still to be solved, and has succeeded in convincing the country that he is the man to continue to present even and prosperous trend of conditions.

That his course is drawing to him men of every school of thought is constantly evident. One of the most recent converts to the Hoover program is B. F. Yoakum, life-long Democrat and pioneer railroad builder, who has probably opened more agricultural land to settlement through transportation facilities than any living railroad man. For a number of years Mr. Yoakum has been a careful student of the agricultural problem. Since Governor Smith began his flirtation with the McNary-Haugen bill, Mr. Yoakum has come out squarely for the Republican program of farm relief as outlined by Herbert Hoover, endorsing his plan for development of a nation-wide farm commodity marketing system through government aid.

The assurance that stability of government will be continued under Herbert Hoover has also been an important factor in the decision of 86 editors of Democratic and Independent newspapers to support the Republican national ticket. Their newspapers are located in 15 states.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan, tersely summed up the advantage of the Hoover-Curtis ticket in the middle west recently by pointing out that employment in most industrial centers is as general or better than it has ever been, that the refusal of the Democrtic candidate even to discuss the tariff leaves the middle west uncertain about his intentions, but inclined to distrust them from previous experience, and that the failure of Governor Smith to understand the importance of such great projects as the St. Lawrence waterway takes much interest away from his candidacy in the inland industrial and agricultural states.

For the remainder of the campaign Mr. Hoover's plans call for about one speech each week, in which he will continue his plan of discussing the issues. The extensive preparation which he devotes to each one of his speeches has made them clear-cut, concise dissertations on the more important questions which the majority of the voters are interested in rather than spasmodic efforts at working up interest through his attacks on his opponent.

THE HOMEMAKERS CORNER

BY MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN
Home Demonstration Agent

Below are to be found several receipes for dainty dishes, which have been sent out by the extension department, and which, if tried, will be found very delicious:

Bacon and Corn, Camp Style

Twelve large slices bacon, 2 c. of corn, salt, pepper, 2 eggs, ½ green pepper, 1 small onion.

Cook bacon until crisp, pouring off fat occasionally during cooking. Remove bacon and keep warm. In about four tablespoonfuls of the bacon fat cook the pepper and onion, chopped fine, for 5 minutes. Add corn, eggs well beaten, and salt and pepper to taste and scramble all together in hot fat.

Cauliflower

One head cauliflower, 1½ t. butter, fat or oil, 1½ c. milk, ¼ c. grated cheese, 1½ T. flour, ½ t. salt.

Trim off the leaves of the cauliflower, clean, turn upside down to soak in salt water for a short time. Cook until cauliflower is about half done, then place in a baking dish and pour over it the grated cheese and the white sauce made of flour, butter, milk, salt and pepper. Bake in moderate oven.

Golden Glow Salad.

One package lemon jelo, 1 c. boiling water, 1 c. canned pineapple juice, 1 t. vinegar, 1 c. pineapple, diced, drained; 1 c. raw carrots, 1-3 c. pecans, cut fine; ½ t. salt.

Dissolve jello in boiling water; add pineapple juice; chill. When slightly thickened add vinegar, pineapple, carrots, pecans and salt. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing. Serves six.

Baked Apple Meringues

Six large firm red apples, 1½ c. thick apple sauce, white 4 eggs, powdered sugar, custard sauce.

Wash apples and remove pulp with a sharp spoon leaving a shell about 1-4 in. thick. Put a tablespoon apple sauce in each apple. Beat the egg white until stiff. Fold in four tablespoons powdered sugar and the rest of the apple sauce. Fill the apples with this dust with powdered sugar and bake in a moderate oven about 25 minutes. Serve hot with a cold, thin custard sauce.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SCHOOL LUNCHES FOR CHILDREN

They Should Be Provided With Well Balanced Meals

With the coming of the cooler days mothers of young children who have to carry their lunch to school, will welcome the suggestions that are made in bulletins obtainable from the U. S. Bureau of Education in Washington, and the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of Health. In calling attention to these publications, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said: "One of the best ways of strengthening the growing child's power of resistance against disease is by providing him or her with well-balanced, nourishing meals. Children, as a rule, eat a hasty breakfast before dashing off to school, and for a child who leaves home early in the morning and spends the day in school a warm meal in the middle of the day is a necessity.

"A simple arrangement that has been tried out in a number of the rural schools makes it possible for food prepared at home to be warmed before it is eaten at school. The food to be heated is carried in wide-mouthed glass jars, and the children are encouraged to bring cream soups, meat and vegetable stews, combinations of cooked vegetables—things that are both nourishing and palatable.

"The equipment for heating consists of a wash boiler fitted with a double row of wire racks, for holding the food, th elower rack elevated about two inches from the bottom of the boiler, to prevent the jars from touching the water which just fills the bottom. On reaching school in the morning, each child places his jar in the rack, each jar being marked in such a way that the child can identify his own property.

"During the early morning recess, or shortly before the regular lunch hour, the teacher or one of the older boys or girls moves the boiler forward on the stove and after a half hour's steaming the food is ready to be eaten.

"A number of teachers take advantage of the opportunity offered in connection with the lunch hour to preface the serving of the food with a handwashing drill which serves the double purpose of cleanliness and of getting rid of some of the germs that have passed from hand to hand during the morning in the customary exchange of school equipment.

"Under the title of "Diet for the Young Child" the State Department of Health has published a pamphlet, prepared by the Bureau of Child Hygiene, which contains suggestions for the diet of the children who are just entering school and who need all the health and strength they can muster to stand the strain, physically and mentally, of the change to school life. A copy of this pamphlet may be obtained by writing to the State Department of Health, 2411 North Charles Street, Baltimore. A bulletin on school lunches for the older children may be obtained by writing to the U. S. Bureau of Education at Washington, D. C."

Fresh From Vacation

Col. Bell showed himself rarin' to go for the winter when he returned from his six-day vacation, because the first thing he did was to get out his camera and take a snap shot of the miscreant as he attempted to fire the building of Henry Lauer. The only fault Scoop has to find with the Col. is at this particular time, the shot should have been made with lead and not with flashlight powder.

The picture is being published exclusively by Scoop, and anyone recognizing the villain and causing his arrest is welcome to the whole $100 reward. P. S. However, the picture cost Scoop and the Col. $4.655.

A Gay Old Bird

Tomorrow is Columbus Day, but it is a safe bet that not many people will realize it. It seems that Columbus never made himself famous in the daytime, hut always sprung his wild parties after dark, thus gaining quite a reputation in these modern days. You never hear anymore about his escapades in the daytime, but you still can hear plenty about his knights.

Sure Riddance For Tonsils

A new way has been found to remove tonsils without a hospital operation. A man suffering from enlarged "gills" in his throat called on Dr. N. I. Broady yesterday and asked for the quickest way of getting rid of them. According to an official report, Doc said the quickest way he knew of was to bet his neck on Al Smith. (It can also apply to corns, boils, etc.)

The Series Is Over

Col. Bell's second picture of the week was taken shortly after Babe Ruth had knocked his third home run Tuesday afternoon in the World Series game, and caught Hary Miller at the telephone just as he was receiving the sad news from Bill Gibson—or maybe from Guy Yutzy.

The picture of sadness caused by the Cardinal's loss might just as well picture Turk Shartzer or "Tom" Gonder.

The Weekly Mystery

Members of the Postoffice force have worried more than a year about the drinking fountains at the foot of the Court house steps. More than a year ago the combination "man and beast" fountain was replaced by a newer one. The old one was left on the sidewalk and it is there to this day. So in order to keep the gray hairs from the brows of Uncle Sam's workers, Scoop would suggest its removal either by commissioner Maroney or by Hallowe'en enthusiasts. Its usefulness as a hitching post has past.

It has just been discovered by Charlie Sprague, an Englishman, who invented swimming, and as usual the Scotch have something to do with it. In the days of long ago two of them were travelling and they came to a toll bridge and in order to save a few pence both dived in the river and swam across.

CAN IT!

The New York World, one of the leading Democratic newspapers of the country and a supporter of Governor Smith, in an editorial published September 25, 1928, thus condemns the publicity methods resorted to by the Democratic National committee:

For several days now the Democratic National Committee in Washington has been digging up old bones and displaying them with gusto. These treasures consist of remarks made by various Republican statesmen, either in the ancient past or the recent past, which are highly unflattering to Mr. Hoover. Some of them are not only very old but very cheap and very silly. It is difficult to tell from the manner in which this material is published just when the Democratic Committee is quoting some Republican and when it is adding some brilliant footnote of its own, but in either case there are references here to Mr. Hoover which are both unfair and vulgar. He is described, for example, as a "quaking Quaker in the war" and as "the fat candidate from Piccadilly."

For the Democratic National Committee to peddle such stuff is indecent, stupid and contemptible.

If this is the best the committee can do, it had better shut up its shop and go home.

SPIRITUAL GIFTS

LESSON TEXT—I Cor. 12:3-7,31; 13:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Love Is the Best of All.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Thing in the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Greatest of All Gifts.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Spiritual Gifts.

Joel predicted a remarkable effusion of the spirit in Messianic times (Joel 2: 28, 29; cf. Acts 2:17, 18).

Before the crucifixion, Jesus promised to send the Holy Spirit to be the helper and guide of His people. This was historically fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. The gifts of the Spirit were extended to all classes. Not only were these endowments marked by great profusion, but by great diversity. In the exercise of these gifts confusion would surely arise. Divine life, suddenly poured into human nature, stirred it to unusual power. In view of the abuses and confusion which are likely to arise from such a condition, it is highly important that certain principles be set forth for guidance and regulation.

I. The Infallible Criterion (1 Cor. 12:3).

The infallible test which determines whether gifts are spurious or genuine is one's conception of and attitude toward Jesus Christ. Only those who recognize Him as God manifest in the flesh, His vicarious atonement on the cross, and submit to Him as their Lord, can be recognized as possessing the gift of the Holy Spirit. Christ said before leaving the earth that when the Spirit came His supreme business would be to testify of Him, to take the things of Christ and show them unto the people. The soundness of the faith of a man is the sign of this commission from God.

II. The Diversity of Spiritual Gifts (I Cor. 12:1-11).

In the church there are to be found those possessing the gift of wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment of spirits, divers kinds of tongues and the interpretation of tongues.

III. The Unity of the Spirit's Gifts Cor. 12:12-30).

Christian unity is only possible when effected by the one Holy Spirit. This unity amidst diversity is represented under the figure of the human body.

1. The human body has many members, each performing distinct functions for the good of the body (v. 12).
2. The members are mutually related and independent (vv. 13-17).
3. The place of each member is determined by the choice of God (v. 18).
4. The members which are least attractive and least conspicuous are most important (vv. 21-23).

IV. Love, the Spirit's Best Gift (I Cor. 12:31-13).

1. The pre-eminence of love (vv. 1-3).

It transcends.

(1) Speaking with tongues.
(2) The gift of prophecy.
(3) Faith of the most vigorous kind.
(4) Philanthropy of the most generous sort.
(5) Heroic devotion leading to martyrdom.

2. The attributes of love (vv. 4-7).

(1) Long-suffering and kind.
(2) Free from envy.
(3) Freedom from boasting.
(4) Decorous and well behaved.
(5) Unselfish.
(6) Does not give way to passion; is not quick tempered.
(7) Thinks no evil; does not impute evil motives to others; is not suspicious.
(8) Delights not in evil.
(9) Beareth all things.
(10) Is trustful, hopeful and firm.

3. The permanence of love (vv. 8-13).

Prophecy as prediction will be fulfilled. Prophecy as teaching will be brought to an end in the day when teaching is not needed. Tongues shall cease, for as the languages of earth were caused by God's judgment for sin, so shall Christ's redemption bring the nations back to one tongue. Knowledge shall be done away with the coming of a wider and nobler intelligence. The twilight will be lost in day, childhood, in maturity. Love will always abide, for God is love.

5. The comparative value of prophecy and tongues (14:1-25).

Prophecy is given the highest place because it is to declare God's message to men. Its primary meaning is to forthtell. To speak with tongues means to speak in other languages for the purpose of showing the presence of God.

One Who Never Forgets

Others may forget us in their prayers; there is One in heaven who never does forget. Others may fail us when their lamp burns low; He never liveth. We are engirdled by the prayers of One who loves us and has the ear of God and therefore is able to save to the uttermost.—George H. Morrison.

Going! Going! Gone! Another summer is tottering on its last legs. In a few weeks the winter coal bill will be staring us all in the face.

You will appreciate AMOCO-GAS now more than ever. It makes your car start easy and requires less choking these cool mornings, this means longer life of the oil in the crankcase.

With the possible exception of the makers of ice cream, palm leaf fans and fly swatters, we all feel that the glorious fall opens up new possibilities of profit, new zest in life and new ways to spend money with pleasure in the spending.

A new set of spark plugs at least once a year will soon pay for themselves in the savings of gasoline.

It certainly pays to advertise. Through the columns of our local papers we have been able to locate our dog which was missing for several weeks.

We have several bargains in good closed cars. Why not trade in your open car for one of these. Stop in for a demonstration.

For Good Telephone Service

* * * * on the management rests an unusual obligation to the public to see to it that the service shall at all times be adequate, dependable and satisfactory to the user—"

WALTER S. GIFFORD,
President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company (Bell System)

¶ There are two requirements for good telephone service.

¶ First, the organization. An army of men and women, highly trained and efficient, with a high sense of duty and a thorough understanding, not only of their own jobs, but of the relationship of their jobs to those of the others. This teamwork is essential in a service so highly personal in its nature as telephone service.

¶ Second, the plant. Buildings and machinery, poles, conduit, cables, wires, switchboards and instruments—all these go to make up a telephone plant. Much of the equipment used is delicate and intricate. Any faulty adjustment or break, though these do not occur often, may cause annoyance and inconvenience to the user. Thus, constant inspection and testing—continuous watchfulness over every detail of operation is needed to keep the service working at the highest efficiency.

¶ To provide the two essentials for good service—organization and plant—this company spares no effort. We are striving always, not only to improve the technical features of the service, but to encourage a sympathetic understanding between those who use the service and those who furnish it.

¶ Such sympathetic understanding is most important because, from its very nature, the telephone projects the personality of the user and may reflect the irritation of the moment which, in many cases, may have nothing to do with the quality of the service furnished.

¶ While much of the work of giving service must be done by routine methods and mechanical devices, it is our aim in so far as is possible to eliminate all sources of annoyance and to give individual and personal attention to each user. Success in this effort cannot fail to reflect itself in improved service.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 52. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, OCTOBER 18, 1928. NUMBER 35.

CANDIDATES ARE ASSURED GARRETT IS FOR G. O. P.

Goldsborough and Zihlman Tour County On Monday—Wind up Trip at Oakland Headquarters

Several hundred persons visited Republican headquarters in Oakland on Monday evening and met Hon. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, former governor of Maryland, now Republican candidate for the United States Senate, and Congressman Frederick N. Zihlman, Republican candidate for reelection from this District, at an informal reception and discussion of campaign issues and problems. The meeting was sponsored by the Republican State Central Committee of this county.

Prior to the evening meeting the two candidates, accompanied by L. M. Fraley, mayor of Oakland and chairman of the Republican State Central Committee; E. R. Jones, secretary of the committee; Henry M. Speicher, W. Ravenscroft and W. A. Smith, made a tour of Garrett county and were received everywhere with acclamation.

The party left Oakland at 9 o'clock and McHenry was the first stop. From there the intinerary included Friendsville, Grantsville, Bittinger, Deer Park, Crellin and Kitzmiller. The party also stopped at farm houses and along the roadside where men were engaged in threshing or in their fields. The candidates made no speeches and the groups gathered at the various stopping places seemed content to discuss the campaign issues. The people assured the candidates that "you won't have any trouble in this county."

Mr. Goldsborough was assured by town and district leaders that Garrett county would show a Republican majority of at least 2000 on election day.

Election Day Figures Given

Leaders in the party show by records available that the registered majority among Republican voters in the county is more than 3000. It is predicted that of the total registration of 8000 the Republican vote should be at least 4000 as compared with a vote of 1500 Democrats.

Veteran Boasts of Record.

At McHenry Mr. Goldsborough met David W. Fraker, a Civil War veteran, who boasted that he had voted the Republican ticket when Lincoln was elected for his second term and had never missed since. At 84 years of age, he announced, he is still going to vote the same way—"straight Republican."

When a little arithmetic revealed that he was only 20 years of age when he voted for Lincoln he explained, "I know it; but I was in the army and they gave me a vote and I voted it."

Mr. Goldsborough and Mr. Zihlman left Oakland Monday night by motor for Cumberland where they toured in Allegany county during the day and addressed a meeting in Cumberland Tuesday night.

STOKE THE HOME FIRES

Library Is Appealing To Public for Funds to Carry on Work

Since all public benefits for the Garrett County Free Public Library were cancelled this summer, owing to the presence of infantile paralysis, the treasury of the organization is empty, and decision has been made by the committee to make a direct appeal to the citizens of Oakland for funds with which to carry on the work.

This method was felt to be best as other organizations had benefits already planned. "There is no doubt that the Library gives a real return in progress and educational and civic development," Mrs. E. Z. Tower, one of the committee, said. "It must not be forgotten that a good Library provides pleasure and recreation of a most wholesome type both for young and old, and it is only right that we increase its usefulness."

Contributions may be sent to J. M. Jarboe, treasurer, or to members of the library committee. Acknowledgements will be made in the local papers. The committee has received $10 from Miss Elizabeth Howard and $10 from the Oakland Civic club.

Brotherhood Meeting Tonight

St. Mark's Lutheran Brotherhood will hold its first meeting following the summer vacation tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the assembly room of the church. Dr. J. W. Kapp, Cincinnati, Ohio, will be the speaker. The men of the churches of the Bittinger and Eglon charges have been invited to attend this meeting and a large number is expected.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL TO BEGIN ON ARMISTICE DAY

Arrangements for Enrollment of Members Made During Week

The American Red Cross has set aside the day of Sunday, November 11, as the date on which to begin its annual Red Cross Roll Call, and Mrs. H. Margaret Whitcomb, field representative of the Red Cross, was in Oakland last week and arranged for the roll call in the county.

Mrs. E. Z. Tower, county chairman, and Mrs. J. C. Renninger, treasurer announce that two plans will be employed in conducting the roll call. Teams composed of two persons in each community will go from house to house and each minister of the county is asked to appoint a roll call secretary for his particular church. Rev. C. A. Shilke, of the local Lutheran church, has been appointed the chairman of the ministerial committee for the county.

Membership for the year may be obtained by the payment of one dollar to any duly authorized persons to receive the same.

Last year only 47 persons responded to the roll call in this county, but it is hoped that there will be far more this year.

NO HUNTING IN MARYLAND UNTIL NOVEMBER TENTH

Season Opens On That Date and Lasts Until Dec. 30—Dogs Must be Kept Out of Woods

State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte, in an effort to clear up any misunderstanding of the Maryland game law, has issued the following notice for the benefit of hunters in this section of the State:

"With the closing of the squirrel and dove season state-wide in effect September 30, there will be no open season on any species of upland game in this State until November 10th, at which time the season will open on squirrels, doves, woodcock, English or Mongolian pheasant, ruffed grouse, rabbit, wild turkey and quail, and remain open until December 31, following. (However, ther eis a closed season on wild turkey in Garrett county until November 10, 1930.)

"We have received reports to the effect that some misunderstanding has been created relative to the hunting of doves in Maryland. The State law provides an open season, September 30, for doves in all counties except Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Howard and Baltimore. The law provides an open season in the five counties on doves November 10 to December 31. The Federal regulation provides an open season for doves September 1 to December 15. Federal regulations on game supercede State laws unless the State law further protects. In this case the State further protects doves by closing the season October 1 to November 9, therefore supercedes the Federal regulations. The State law provides an open season on doves November 10 to December 31, the Federal regulations will supercede this and the open season for doves is November 10 and closes December 15.

"The Game Division of the Conservation Department of Maryland has placed additional deputies throughout the State to take care of the situation this hunting season and persons found afield with dog and gun between October 1 and November 10, must account and give a good reason otherwise our wardens are liable to apprehend them and prosecute for violation of the game laws by hunting during closed season. The open season for hunting wildfowl including wild geese, ducks and brant is November 1 to January 31 inclusive. Wildfowl has been arriving in Maryland waters since the last week in August, numbers increasing weekly and we anticipate a wonderful hunting season for the wildfowl hunters.

"E. LEE L'COMPTE.
"State Game Warden."

Aged Couple Secure Marriage License in Oakland.

A marriage license was issued at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland on Monday of this week to Moses Fike, 91 years of age, and Betty Digman, 68. Mr. Fike is from Eglon, West Va., where he is engaged in farming. He has been a widower twice, once in 1866 and again in 1926. The bride became a widow in 1926. The couple will reside on the Taylor Sines farm near Sines.

CRELLIN TO BE HOST FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL MEET

Annual Convention is Scheduled for Saturday, November 3—Noted Speakers Are Coming

The annual convention of Sunday school workers of Garrett county will be held at Crellin on November 3, and plans have been made for a large gathering of men and women active in this line of work.

Reports of the accomplishments of State convention and the World's Sunday School convention held in Los Angeles during the past summer will be heard.

There will be three sessions of the convention, beginning Saturday morning at ten o'clock, Saturday afternoon and evening. A number of addresses of interest to the Sunday school workers will be delivered by the State Secretary, Dr. Robert Davids, Col. J. IL Cudlipp, Miss Lillian McCormick, Dr. M. R. Hamm, all of the State staff, and by other speakers.

Conferences will be held during both the morning and afternoon sessions, at which time problems facing the Sunday schools will be discussed. Everything is being done to make this one of the best conventions ever held in the county.

No Restriction on Number

No restrictions will be made as to the number who may be present as delegates from any Sunday school, all of the sessions will be open to everyone inclined to attend and a general invitation has been extended to Sunday school officers, teachers, pupils or others who are interested in the work.

A letter has been sent from the office of the county association to all of the superintendents in the county urging their cooperation and asking them to arrange for delegations to be present. Every Sunday school worker who can possibly do so should plan to spend the day. November 3, in Crellin where the people are hospitable. A more detailed program will be published in a later edition of The Republican.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED

Senior Class Elects Officers—Other High School Notes.

An athletic association for the Oakland High school was organized Tuesday with Andrew Gonder, president; Wilba Casteel, vice-president; Betty Gonder, secretary-treasurer; Mary Gonder, Betty Gonder, Richard Stemple, cheer leaders. Mr. Speicher and Miss Hollar have a number out for soccer and field ball and are practicing regularly.

The senior class organized this week with Lester Winters, president; Helen Leighton, vice-president; Louise Lauer, secretary-treasurer.

The faculty enjoyed a delightful steak fry at Crystal Spring on last Thursday. The party, led by "Uncle Wiley," was made complete by Miss Brown's unique banjo stunt; the Indian war dance was another feature of the evening.

The school wishes to express its appreciation to Mrs. E. H. Sincell for the set of slides donated to the biology department. They were made by the late Edward Sincell, Jr., while a student at Gettysburg College. They will be of real service to the department.

Essex Sedan Is Consumed By Flames Monday Morning

The Essex sedan, owned by Fred Peddicord, Oakland, was destroyed by fire early Monday morning on the Mt. Lake-Oakland highway near the intersection of the Oakland-Thomas road.

The flames were first noticed under the hood of the car and before any aid could be summoned, the entire car had been consumed.

Mr. Peddicord was enroute to work about 5:30 a. m. at the time of the mishap, and when he became aware that the front part of his car was ablaze, he ran to Oakland, gave the fire alarm, and rushed the chemical truck to the scene. The machine was practically destroyed when he returned.

The car was partly covered by insurance. Some sort of jinx seems to be following Mr. Peddicord as this is the fifth loss he has sustained by fire within the past eight or ten years. The house in which he and his family were living caught fire three times, the building being completely destroyed on one occasion. The last two fires have consumed automobiles.

ORTHOPEDIC CLINIC TO BE HELD HERE ON OCTOBER 27

Recent Paralysis Victims to be Given Thorough Examination Dr. Bennett In Charge

Arrangements for the third orthopedic clinic to be held in Garrett county have been made, according to Miss Rhesa M. King, public health nurse. This clinic will take place on Saturday, October 27, beginning at ten a. m. at the Court House, Oakland. Dr. George Bennett, of Baltimore, will be in charge.

Arrangements also have been made to bring a specialist on massaging here at the same time to teach the art to parents whose children need such care. Miss Karcher will be in charge of this. Miss Mary E. Church, executive secretary for Maryland, will also be present.

The purpose of the third clinic, Miss King stated yesterday, is to bring in all recent sufferers from infantile paralysis and give them a thorough examination, and any new cases of crippled children in the county will be cared for if they are brought to Oakland on that day.

In connection with the clinic there will also be a meeting of the Orthopedic Society, Garrett County Chapter, at ten o'clock, with Dr. W. E. Gattens, chairman, presiding. Plans for future work will be discussed at this time, it was stated.

According to figures compiled by Miss King there were 44 at the last clinic. Sixteen patients have received care in the county, all of whom have shown improvement. There are at present five patients from the county who are in Baltimore receiving treatment.

BOWLING LEAGUE TO OPEN SEASON ON NOVEMBER 1

Third Annual Series to Get Under Way with 8 Strong Teams

The Oakland Bowling League, composed of church and local organization teams, will begin its third annual series of contests about November 1, was announced this morning by the manager of the League. It is expected that at least eight strong teams will enter the race this year.

Announcements concerning the opening of the league season will be sent to all teams of the previous years and other matters pertaining to the contest will also be taken up. Changes in the rules will be decided at a meeting of team captains at a later date.

Teams finishing in League membership last year were the Methodist, the Postoffice, Merchants, Gortner, Rotary Club, Knights of Columbus, Presbyterian, Ramblers, Crellin and Lutheran. Two teams, the Printers and the Brotherhood, dropped out before the season ended.

Those interested in bowling and in other sports may organize as a club, the manager stated, and in this case there will be officers elected to govern the play throughout the season.

Auto Accident Results in Death Of Former Garrett Countian

Mrs. William Keller, of near Meyersdale, Pa., dnughter of Charles Garlitz, of Avilton, Garrett county, met death Saturday evening near Meyersdale when she fell from an automobile moving at a high rate of speed, death being due to a fracture of her skull when she struck upon the roadway at a point near the Baltimore and Ohio tracks as the car was entering Meyersdale and which was being driven by her husband. Two of the three children of the couple were occupying a rear seat in the machine.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at ten o'clock at the Avilton Catholic church. The deceased was a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Custer of near Swanton.

FAIR EXHIBITS ARE BOOST TO MAPLE SUGAR INDSTRY

Garrett County Natural Habitat of Trees Producing Sweets

That Maryland has a substantial industry built upon the production of maple sugar and maple syrup has been brought home to hundreds of people of the State this year by interesting exhibits staged by the Forestry Department at some of the leading county fairs, the Garrett County Fair included.

Some of the modern equipment and methods employed in the production of maple sugar and maple syrup were shown at these exhibition points.

Last year, it is said, approximately 60,000 trees were tapped to produce Maryland's output of maple sweets and the revenue derived from the industry totalled more than $100,000.

While Maryland is south of what is generally known as the maple sugar producing territory of the country, the high altitude, especially in Garrett county, is admirably adapted to the tree growth and the collection of sap has for years been an important early spring occupation in sections of the county.

H. C. Buckingham, district forester, and County Agent McGlone expect to work more upon the project during the coming winter.

NORTHWESTERN TURNPIKE BODY ELECTS OFFICERS

Leaders Are Reelected For the Ensuing Year at Meeting in Thomas Monday—Directors

R. P. Maloney, C. N. McIntire and George D. Browning, Oakland, were named as directors for Garrett county.

West Virginia State bonds in the amount of $35,000,000 will be asked in an amendment to the State constitution at the November election, the proceeds of the sale to be used in connection with the furtherance of road construction in West Virginia, the corporation having unanimously approved the petition.

In regard to the unfinished portion of the pike in Maryland,, which members of the association have been prevailing upon the State of Maryland to rebuild, it was announced that J. W. Hudson, president of the Baltimore Association of Commerce, had returned from Europe a short time ago and that former Governor J. J. Cornwell expects to obtain an appointment for a delegation form the Northwestern Turnpike, Inc., soon.

Representatives from Maryland further announced the State would have her portion of the road completed by the time West Virginia had finished work on that side of the line.

Other officers appointed included T. E. Clovis, Pennsboro; A. L. Helmick, Thomas; H. A. Carpenter, St. Mary's, as the new executive council.

The Northwestern Turnpike, Inc,, is an organization formed to promote the reconstruction of the historic Northwestern Turnpike through West Virginia. The association met last year in Oakland.

Bus Drivers Praised.

Two bus drivers of the Blue Ridge Transportation Company, Millard Crilley, formerly of Hancock, and Richard West, formerly of Oakland, were praised for their unselfish work in connection with the tripple tragedy at Tabb's Crossing of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, when Ward Bleigh, of Cumbo, was killed outright, and his wife and baby fatally injured, when a train struck the Bleigh automobile.—Cumberland Evening Times.

Soccer League Leaders Swamp Grantsville.

Kitzmiller High Soccer team, undefeated in the Garrett County Soccer League, swamped Grantsville booters at Kitzmiller Saturday afternoon by the score of 10-0. A barrage of field goals in the last half routed the visiting team, which held the Kitzmiller team scoreless in the opening period. Malous was the outstanding star.

Oakland was defeated by Accident High Thursday afternoon at the Oakland Fair grounds.

IN THE TRADITION OF LINCOLN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY OFFERS HERBERT HOOVER FOR PRESIDENT

True to the spirit of Democracy, it turns again to a man of the people for a successor to Lincoln, the rail-splitter, Grant the tanner, and Garfield of the towpath—to a blacksmith's son, an Iowa orphan and country schoolboy, raised by his own efforts and his own merits, to a plane of distinction in more fields of usefulness than any man the nation has ever been privileged to place in the White House.

It presents a civilian with the military knowledge of a trained soldier. It presents an executive who has already remodeled Federal administration, simplified its machinery, destroyed its red-tape worms, reduced the cost and expanded the scope of departmental action.

It offers a humanitarian whose heart has never questioned a race or a creed—and a loyal citizen pledged by platform, record and declaration against the hazard of foreign entanglement.

His career is marked with the callouses of struggle and achievement. He has pursued ambition along the corn-row, across the furrow, into laboratory, down mine shaft, into great administrative and engineering projects in America, Australia, Siberia and China.

His university is Leland Stanford, but his true Alma Mater is the map of the world.

The Great War did not make Herbert Hoover; it simple revealed him. The task of filling the Belgian—and later the Allied—then still later, the German, Polish and Serbian bread box called for qualities of initiative and organization beyond Old World efficiency.

Europe couldn't produce the man; they appealed to America and got him. And Hoover did the job. As he had done his daily tasks in America and China. And in Australia. And in Siberia. And in Asia Minor.

As he had done his job in America, through Democratic and Republican regimes alike.

And he's still on the job—handling situations without precedent in executive difficulty—tasks born of emergency—jobs for skill and tact. Jobs requiring the co-operation and conciliation of antagonistic forces—jobs for imagination, for thoroughness, for technical expertness—for a business head and a Quaker's universal heart.

No Presidential candidate ever before had the same range of contact with the problems of capital and labor—with the conditions under which we severally do our daily chores.

The essential principle of the Republican Party is the safeguarding and improvement of those conditions—the protection of prosperity against the pauper wages and products of Europe and Asia.

Herbert Hoover, qualified by years of familitarity wth foreign agriculture, foreign factory standards, foreign living scales, foreign methods, foreign resources and foreign trade strategy, is the one man to plan and conduct that defense.

A vote for Hoover is a vote for belching smokestacks, flaring furnaces, clanging hammers, busy looms, honest and permanent agricultural relief—a vote for peak production, for steady employment, for the song of the riveter, for more automobiles—a vote for better government, for sounder business practice, for full time and fuller pay envelopes—a vote for impartial legislation, for the integrity of the Constitution, for continued equality before opportunity and the law—a vote for National safety, solvency and sobricty—and National ideals.

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Editor of The Republican:

Below is an open letter written to Hon. W. Cahell Bruce by Charles E. Hoye, of Los Angeles, Cal., and is here reproduced for the readers of The Republican:

Los Angeles, Cal.
September 1, 1928

Hon. W. Cabell Bruce,
U. S. Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Last May when Congress adjourned the Arizona newspapers referred to you as "one of the strongest opponents" of the Boulder Canyon Dam bill then as now before the Senate. You doubtless had reason for your opposition, but permit me to express the hope that you will change from opposition to equally warm support of that measure if the Commission of engineers authorized by Congress makes a favorable report thereon next December, and if not, that you and your colleagues will provide a better method of development of the great Colorado river, now wasting its waters in the Gulf of California.

I have lived three years in Los Angeles, but have recently homesteaded 160 acres of desert land in Arizona, therefore I am interested in both states. It appears to me that you in Maryland are also interested in the Southwest; Arizona has thousands of acres of desert land, now producing practically nothing of value; with water this desert will be among the finest agricultural land in America. This now useless land will be farmed by people from Maryland and other Eastern states. We few people in Arizona now have already all the land we need.

Two years ago I visited in Maryland. I saw rocky hillside farms, which would be better employed producing trees, while our level deserts, which now cannot produce even forest trees, will produce the finest fruits and alfalfa when our Government arranges to use the water which flows by our borders.

I am taking this liberty of writing you, sir, because I was born and reared in Maryland, as my forefathers since Colonial days, but I am now content to live on the last American frontier on the Colorado, and I know that others from Maryland are coming. Will you not help prepare a place for us where rain seldom falls, but the sun shines all year?

Very respectfully,
Charles E. Hoye

He spent his boyhood on the farm and in his youth attended Mt. Morris college in Illinois, where he met Miss Effie Hershberger, Lagoda, Ind., whom he afterward married.

Mr. Gnagey united with the Church of the Brethren in his youth and while living at Grantsville was called to the ministry by the Maple Grove congregation. He continued steadfast in his faith until the end of his days, frequently acting in his ministerial capacity but never serving as a regular pastor.

DANIEL S. WAMPLER.

Car Plunges of 25-foot Embankment in Peculiar Accident

Mrs. Edith Mallott, 54, wife of M. H. Mallott, Abilene, Kansas, was the victim in a peculiar motor accident on the National Highway about 200 yards from the Pennsylvania State line in Garrett county at 11:30 o'clock Friday morning. Mrs. Mallott succumbing to her injuries about noon in Dr. Francis' Hospital, Confluence, Pa.

Although three cars were involved in the accident, none collided with any other and no one was held responsible, according to Officer W. B. Chappelle, of the Maryland State police, who investigated the mishap.

According to Chappelle, the accident which resulted in Mrs. Mallott's death from a fractured skull followed when the machine driven by Roy N. Downs, Baltimore, and bound east on the highway, crashed into a culvert at Mill Run. In avoiding the disabled car, Harry A. Price, of Meyersdale, bound west, overturned in his car but escaped injury. A wet highway was given as a contributing cause in the overturning of Price's car.

The fatal accident followed Price's mishap when the Mallott car, also bound west, sought to avoid hitting the two wrecked cars and plunged over a twemy-five foot embankment. Mallott suffered a fracture of his ribs in the drop.

State Officer Thomas Currie continued the investigation of the case on Saturday.

EVENING SHADOWS ARE FALLING EARLIER NOW

You have possibly noticed the shortening of the daylight period along with the falling of the leaves and the briskness of the air.

As the daylight period decreases, more time is spent at home and consequently the use of light increases. Incidentally there is greater use for and satisfaction from the radio during the long evenings.

If your electric light bills are higher now than in June or July there's a reason.

The artificial lighting hours in June were two and a half. In October they are nearly five.

We rejoice in rendering a service as productive of comfort and happiness as the dissemination of light.

THE LARGEST FAMILY IN MARYLAND HAS 161,600

It is Composed of Children Under Five Years of Age.

Did you ever realize what a large sized family there is in Maryland? If you have not, it may interest you to glance at the accompanying estimates prepared by Dr. John Cillison, Chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health, showing the distribution of population, last year.

Beginning with the most important members of the individual families, the babies, and their next older brothers and sisters, the record shows a total of 161,600 children under 5 years of whom 32,805 were the babies under a year old. In this group, there were 81,285 boys and 80,315 girls. In the next group, the children from five to nine years old, there were 158,400, and in the group from ten to fourteen there were 153,600. These youngsters, the babies and the boys and girls under fifteen, a total of 473,600, constituted nearly one-third of the total population of the State.

The second third was composed of the boys and girls of high school and college age and the young women and young men up to thirty-four years old making a total of 550,560. Here again the men were in the majority. There were 276,690 men and 273,870 women in this group.

The remaining third was composed of all of the rest of the population—those from thirty-five to eighty years old or over. In the latter group were over 9,000 who had passed the eightieth milestone.

Total population of the State was 1,600,000; white, 1,362,560; colored, 237,440. In both Baltimore City and the counties, the colored population constituted approximately fifteen per cent of the total. Baltimore county, with a population of 83,600 led the counties in numbers. Allegany, with 78,000 came next, and Washington, with 67,400, was third. Frederick county, with 52,611, had fourth place; Anne Arundel and Prince George counties, each having 51,000, tied for fifth place. Montgomery with 37,100. Carroll, with 34,600, and Harford with 30,000, were next in order. The county having the smallest population was Calvert, with 9,711.

The colored population in the individual counties ranged from less than one per cent in Garrett county to forty-six per cent in Charles and forty-nine per cent in Calvert county.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

The Road To Health

If the K. of P. carnival did nothing more than return the smiles and good health of Elzie G. Naylor, the members of the lodge would be well repaid for the trouble. Since the K. of P. picnic was postponed, Mr. Naylor hasn't been the same and it looks as if someone hadn't "done right by him". Col. Bell has diagnosed the reason. Each year Mr. Naylor took unusual delight in giving away blankets at the blanket booth, and when he wasn't called upon to do this on Labor Day, he has worn away to a frazzle.

But lately he has been improving and Hallowe'en will find him back to normal. The acompanying picture, taken at the picnic last year by Col. Bell, who foresaw the predicament today, shows him just as he handed out a baby blanket to James Towler, or was it Ed. Offutt.

Perfectly Happy

Why

Archibaldson, the pressman in the back room, says "If it doesn't pay to advertise, tell me, why are all the successful guys ar edoing it?"

Not Alone This Time

Although several weeks ago it was published in Facts that McGlone rode alone, he evidently changed his mind. He and other lovers of nature inspected the forests and sugar camps of Garrett county on Saturday. McGlone didn't get much kick out of the party until they got to Swallow falls. There he began to gaze and smile and he spent the remainder of the afternoon in meditation. Col. Bell, hearing of his actions, snapped him as he was admiring the limbs from the trees of virgin timber.

Just McGlone and Nature

It has been rumored that Soldier Halsey is preparing already for Armistice Day.

Getting In Trim

An advance picture of the Knights of Pythias carnival was taken yesterday by Col. Bell. The members of the parade committee, Alvey Martin, Dr. McComas, Wade Hinebaugh, and Guy Yutzy, will have to lead the procession, and since Wade, Doc, and Alvey are all experienced riders, it was up to Guy Yutzy to do a little training beforehand.

He was riding up and down Liberty street and Col. Bell got him as he passed the studio.

A Bigger Horse Needed

Col Bell tried to get Jerry Stanton, Bill Browning and Jim Kerins together for a group picture, all of them to carry disgusted countenances. This was for an advanced picture of the election results, but instead of a dissatisfied look, they all smiled. It seems they just won't believe it until they see the figures after election, so the picture will be withheld as it would be against Scoop's policy to show anything untruthful.

MONEY FOR MOUNTAINOUS LAND TO BE REQUESTED

Maryland Forest Reserve, Endorsed by Citizens, Planned—$1,000,000 Sum To Be Asked

The plan of the Maryland Department of Forestry to obtain an appropriation of one million dollars by legislative action with which to purchase 200,000 acres of mountain land in the Western part of the State for State forests was endorsed at a meeting of the Isaak Walton League, Frederick, on Saturday.

The Chamber of Commerce of that city endorsed the plan and business organizations and civic bodies of Hagerstown and Cumberland and other Western Maryland towns will be asked to take similar action.

In this capacity, H. C. Buckingham, district forester, spoke at the Rotary club at its weekly meeting last Friday night at the William-James Hotel in Oakland.

In his address Mr. Buckingham said the Department desired the sum of $1,000,000 available in annual amounts of $100,000 for ten years. The money, according to the bill which is to be presented to the Legislature, will be expended by a commission and under the Forestry Department, in the purchase of 200,000 acres of land situated in Frederick, Washington, Allegany and Garrett counties.

The four counties have approximately 400,000 acres of forest land. The plan is to develop the growth of timber, provide a recreation center and stock streams and forests with fish and game. Mr. Buckingham estimated that some of the mountain land now waste and selling from $3 to $4 per acre could be made to produce timber worth annually $200 to $300 per acre.

In the event the forest project succeeds, options will be secured on half a dozen purchase units, covering a large territory, from which will be selected the 200,000 acres for the reserves. A maximum price of $5 to $6 per acre will be spent for the purchase of the land.

Brotherhood Meeting Largely Attended.

Approximately eighty men and boys were present at the first meeting of St. Mark's Lutheran Brotherhood last Thursday evening, which number included men from the Eglon and Accident as well as the Bittinger charges of the Lutheran church.

Refreshments were served. Guy Yutzy, president, was in charge.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday evening, November 8, as the regular meeting night falls on election day.

Fire Department Called Out Last Thursday Afternoon

The local fire department was called out last Thursday afternoon to extinguish a blaze which had ignited a garage at the residence property of James L. Pollock on Second street. Some children had been playing in or about the building and had ignited a mass of leaves which spread into the building. The fire department arrived promptly and by use of the chemical equipment the blaze was extinguished in a very few minutes.

MORE EVENLY MATCHED BOWLING TEAMS WANTED

Competition and Interest Would Be Greater, Manager Says

Stronger and more evenly matched teams in the Bowling League is the desire of William L. Gibson, manager, who is now perfecting his plans for the opening of th ethird annual series on Monday, November 5.

"More evenly matched teams will make the competition very much stronger and the interest keener," he said, "and that is what we want. The third season of play should be the best of all."

During the past week the three alleys in the Recreation have been sandpapered and scraped down to the bare wood and have received several coats of shellac so as to preserve them in the best possible manner.

New pins have been purchased and everything is in readiness for the bowlers pleasure during the coming winter season. Inquiries concerning the league have come in thick and fast, according to the manager, and there is evidence of much interest.

HOOVER GIVEN GREATEST OVATION OF THE CAMPAIGN

Demonstration In New York Exceeds All Others When He Delivers his Final Eastern Speech

Herbert Hoover received Monday night in the home town of his Democratic opponent the greatest ovation of his campaign for the presidency. A throng that jammed Madison Square Garden gave the Republican presidential candidate two big ovations; the first marking his arrival at the Garden and the second his appearance before the microphone to deliver his final campaign speech in the East. Twenty minutes after Mr. Hoover had entered the Garden the demonstration was still going strong.

Mr. Hoover began his speech by saying, "No man can fail to be moved by the warmth of the welcome I have received in the home of my distinguished opponent.

"This campaign now draws near a close," he said. "The platforms of the two parties defining principles and offering solutions of various national problems have been presented and are being earnestly considered by our people.

"After four months' debate it is not the Republican party which finds reason for abandonment of any of the principles it has laid down, or of the views it has expressed for solution of the problems before the country. The principles to which it adheres are rooted deeply in the foundations of our national life. The solutions which it proposes are based on experience with government and on a consciousness that it may have the responsibility for placing those solutions in action."

Mr. Hoover spoke briefly on Republican responsibility, constructive measures, national prosperity during and after the war, war and peace, boards and commissions, "log rolling," false liberalism, protection of industries, our wealth and income, resources, Republican freedom, policies of government, greatness of country, the home and family, and finally pledged himself to high ideals and high purposes.

MACHINERY FOR FACTORY EXPECTED HERE SHORTLY

Dr. R. R. Roth Invents Repair Link for Auto Chains

Machinery and equipment for the manufacture of the Handy Link, an invention perfected recently by Dr. R. R. Roth, Thomas, W. Va., who has located his factory in the West Building on Railroad street in Oakland, will be here in a few days, it has been announced by those interested in the enterprise.

The company, to be known as the Handy Link Company, will manufacture and sell repair links for automobile chains. Dr. Roth, being a user of automobile chains, found that there was no satisfactory repair link on the market and he devised the Handy link.

The advantages of this little invention as set forth by Dr. Roth, cover the many needs that are required to make a repair link really handy for the user. It closes itself on hard roads, is easily closed by common pliers, is simple and cheap; ends drop out when worn through; accessible, closed from front; link surface next to road wears evenly; closes uniformly; better traction in mud and on ice and many other advantages are claimed for it.

The repair links are to be sold to customers at a reasonable price, it was stated, and knowing the condition of the roads in and about Garrett county the members of the company feel that there should be considerable as well as outside demand.

Three Garrett County Jail Breakers Are Recaptured

D. Casteel and his deputies. Two of the men were caught Friday and the other the following morning.

Those captured include William Stains Harley Clegg, and Dave DeWitt. The names of the other escaped ones will not be given until they have been recaptured. Sheriff Castel said.

FARMER IS CHARGED WITH CAUSING DEATH OF WIFE

Somerset County Man Held for Murder of Former Garrett County Woman

Arrested on a charge of murder after attending his wife's funeral at Avilton, Garrett county, William R. Keller, a farmer of Jerome, Pa., is held in the Somerset (Pa.) jail for a hearing. He is accused of being responsible for his wife's death in an automobile accident near Meyersdale, Pa., on Saturday, October 13.

Say Couple Quarreled.

Rumors of a quarrel between the pair during their ride near Meyersdale became prevalent and prosecuting Attorney James B. Landis of Somerset, and Detective Darr made an investigation after the inquest. Another story was that another man was riding with Keller and his wife until within a mile or two of Meyersdale. This story was to the effect that Keller accused the man of being too familiar with Mrs. Keller and compelled him to get out of the machine and walk. This is said to have resulted in a stormy quarrel when the wife remonstrated with her husband for his action. During the dispute Mrs. Keller was thrown or fell out of the car.

She and her husband and children were traveling to Avilton to visit the parents of Mrs. Keller over the week-end when the occurrence resulted in the woman's death took place. She was taken to a hospital in Meyersdale where she died as a result of a fracture of her skull.

Husband's Story.

Keller told officers that one of the children in the rear seat of the car attracted his attention by crying as the machine entered the subway at Meyersdale and that as he turned his head to see what was wrong the right front door swung open, causing his wife to fall from the machine to the pavement over which they were traveling at high rate of speed.

At the inquest a verdict of accidental death was rendered. The body was taken to the Garlitz home at Avilton where funeral services were held at ten o'clock Tuesday, October 16, Rev. J. J. Brady, Meyersdale, officiating.

Organization Effected at Frederick—County Students Elected

A permanent State-wide organization, known as the "Future Farmers of Maryland Association," was formed at the first annual meeting and banquet of vocational school students at Frederick last Thursday night. After adopting a constitution, officers were elected as follows: Edward Cissel, Howard county, president; John Hull, Frederick county, vice-president; Ernest Hauser, Friendsville, secretary, and Wilbur Guegy, Oakland, treasurer. The primary object of the association is to enthuse boys in the possibilities of agriculture as a vocation.

NEW AND OLD CASES ARE WANTED AT CLINIC HERE

Recent Sufferers From Infantile Paralysis Will Be Given Thorough Exam On Saturday

To give all recent sufferers from infantile paralysis a thorough examination, to examine all new orthopedic cases in the county which may have been overlooked in the past, and to re-examine old patients, are the main reasons for the third Orthopedic clinic, to be held at the Court House, in Oakland, on Saturday, Miss Rhesa M. King, public health nurse, stated.

Dr. George Bennett, orthopedic specialist of Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, will be in charge. He will be assisted by Miss Karcher, a specialist on massaging, who will teach the art to parents whose children are in need of such care. Miss Mary E. Church, executive secretary for the Maryland League for Crippled Children, will also be present.

"I certainly hope that all parents of children recently afflicted with infantile paralysis will see that their children receive the examination," the health nurse stated. "There will be no charge for the examination, and it may be the means of preventing serious trouble in the future."

The clinic will start at ten o'clock a. m. In connection with the clinic a meeting of the Orthopedic society, Garrett County chapter, will be held, Dr. W. E. Gattens presiding. Plans for future work will be discussed.

Garrett County Boy Places In Tri-State Potato Exhibit

Short talks by county agent, McDowell, Somerset county, Pa., O. T. Graser, Oakland, and Mr. Red, Preston county agent, W. Va., were included in the program.

Those present from Oakland were Mr. Graser, William Spiker, Harland Ridder, Lawrence Bittinger, and William Friend.

This year was the first year that Garrett and Preston counties had attempted to foster potato clubs, and there are only ten members for each club. Somerset county has a membership of 28 and is on its second year as an organization.

EXPECT MAMMOTH CROWD AT HALLOWE'EN CARNIVAL

Knights Add A New Feature To The Midway—Line of March For Mummers' Parade

With several new features added to the midway, the line of march for the mummers' parade decided upon and the more than twenty prizes offered by business men and ready for delivery to the winning contestants, the plans for the big street carnival and mummers' parade on Hallowe'en, October 31, are about completed, and all that remains now are the erection of the stands and the last minute details of preparation, A. R. Martin, manager of the parade committee, announced yesterday.

Plans call for the forming of the parade on Alder street, beginning at the Court House hill and extending toward Seventh street. The procession will get under way promptly at seven o'clock and will take the following route: Seventh to Oak; Oak to Third; Third to Crook street; Crook to Second; Second to the downtown district and through the midway. The parade will disband at Alder street and the prizes will be awarded at the midway shortly afterward

All mummers participating in the parade must remain in it until it is disbanded at the point above indicated or they will be ineligible to receive prizes as the judges will be stationed at various points along the route. The list of prizes as published in The Republican last Thursday include many valuable articles, besides a number of cash prizes, and it is thought that as a result the parade will be participated in by many dressed in costume.

Reports from other towns indicate that there will be large delegations in Oakland on that night and that many of the visitors will take part in the parade.

Keep Cars at Home.

Mayor Lawrence Fraley has requested the people of Oakland, if possible, to leave their cars at home on the afternoon and evening of the celebration so as to give the people from other communities a chance to park. "This will facilitate matters in taking care of all those expected from out of town, and it is a small inconvenience which the people of Oakland should not mind."

The street carnival will occupy Second street between Liberty and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad crossing, as it has been found that the space between Liberty and Alder streets will be too small a space for their needs. The celebration will begin at 12 o'clock noon and there will be plenty of amusements prepared by the members of the Knights of Pythias, under whose auspices the carnival is being held.

"We want everyone to have a good time at the celebration, and the way things look now, everybody in Oakland and people for miles around are planning to enjoy themselves to the utmost," Mr. Martin said.

Survey of Maple Sugar Industry To Be Made

A survey of the Garrett county maple sugar and maple syrup industry will be completed within the next few weeks, according to County Agent J. L. McGlone, who, in company with H. C. Buckingham, district forester for the State of Maryland, began the work of the survey this morning.

F. B. Trenk, also of the State Forestry Department, is assisting in the survey. The reason for this survey, Mr. McGlone said, is to devise ways and means of bettering the financial condition of the producers and of producing a better grade of sugar and syrup.

It is also planned to encourage the producers to put the sugar and syrup on the market as a Garrett county product and not ship it to Vermont, there to be labelled as having come from that section.

Miss Jessie L. Snow To Speak In Oakland.

Miss Jessie L. Snow, executive secretary of the League of Nations, will be in Oakland on Tuesday, October 30, under the auspices of the Oakland Civic Club, and will speak at the high school auditorium at 2:30 o'clock.

Her subject will be, "The League of Nations; a Machine for International Peace." The public in general is invited to attend the meeting at the school building.

Veterinarian Makes Tuberculin Re-test of Cattle.

An inspection of the farms and a tuberculin re-test of cattle among the herds of Garrett county where a reactor was found in the recent tuberculin test, have been made during the past two or three days by Dr. C. E. Poe, government veterinarian, assisted by J. L. McGlone, county agent. The result of those tests will not be known until tomorrow, it was said at the office of the county agent yesterday.

The purpose of the test, Mr. McGlone said, was to see if any cattle which had been exposed to the reactors in the spring have contracted the disease.

During the spring test of a total of 3,246 dairy cows was made for tuberculosis and in that number only 21 had been found to be afflicted with the bovine plague. These reactors were slaughtered and the barns formerly housing them disinfected. The re-test during the present week was only a precautionary measure against a possible spread of the disease.

George Smith, veterinarian, was also here during the past few days testing accredited herds.

SENATOR BRUCE WINS WIDESPREAD PRAISE

Senator William Cabell Bruce, Democratic candidate for re-election to the United States Senate, has been accorded more recognition for his knowledge, ability and courage than any other Maryland Senator for many years. Here are some of the expressions by fellow-Senators, others in public life and leading newspapers:

By His Colleagues of All Parties

Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri (Democrat).

"Senator Bruce, of Maryland, * * * made * * * the ablest presentation of the anti-prohibition case, submitted by any public man, since the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment." (New York Times, April 6, 1926.)

Senator Wm. H. King, of Utah (Democrat).

"The eminent Senator from Maryland, a lawyer of ability, and a historian of recognized standing, has reached the eminent station occupied by him* * * by energy and genius and courage and ambition." (Congressional Record, February 3, 1928, p. 2507.)

Senator Wm. E. Borah, of Idaho (Progressive Republican).

"Senator Bruce is one of the ablest men in the United States Senate. He is a man of intellect, of great culture, and of magnificent courage." (Debate with President Butler, of Columbia University, p. 33).

"A few days ago the able Senator Bruce from Maryland addressed the Senate upon the question now pending (World Court). I think we will all agree that this scholarly address is one of those in this debate which will likely be referred to in future times." (Congressional Record, January 22, 1926, p. 2555.)

Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota (Farmer-Laborite).

"The Senator from Maryland (Mr. Bruce), who is a man of very notable character, has a very charming personality, and is recognized as having one of the keenest and ablest minds in the Senate at the present time." (Congressional Record, February 11, 1927, p. 3499).

W. CABELL BRUCE

By Others of Prominence

Hon. James M. Beck (former Solicitor General, United States, now member of the House of Representatives).

"I have known the senior Senator (Mr. Bruce) for years and know him to be a man of equal courage and integrity. When he, with his profound knowledge of American history and Constitutional law, reached a different interpretation of the Constitution than that which I have suggested, it makes me wonder whether my interpretation * * * may not be erroneous." (Address before the Eastern Shore Society of Maryland, March 9, 1928).

Hon. John Sharp Williams, ex-Senator from Mississippi.

"I think he (Governor Ritchie) and Senator Bruce represent an element in present-day American politics that is worthy of all praise. Unlike the average politician, they are not lacking in political courage, and that means a lot in this day and generation." (In an interview with Mr. L. C. Speers of the New York Times.)

By Leading Newspapers

Baltimore Sun (Independent).

"Mr. Bruce has the distinction of rising to the height of comprehension and leadership on a subject of immense national importance (Taxation). * * * Mr. Bruce's patriotic vision and understanding promise to lead it (the Democratic Party) once more into the promised land of success. We have a right to be proud that a Maryland Senator is putting Maryland to the front in a situation so vital to the country and to the Democratic Party." (Editorial.)

New York Times (Independent Democrat).

"By such frank and explicit utterances Mr. Bruce confirms the good opinion of those who maintained * * * that his election would be an honor to the State of Maryland and a strong reinforcement for the United States Senate." (Editorial.)

New York Herald-Tribune (Independent Republican)

"It is no news to Maryland voters that they have in Senator Bruce a representatives of high capacity and courage."

New York Evening Post (Republican).

"Senator Bruce is evidently a man who knows what he thinks and is not afraid to let the country know." (Editorial.)

New York Commercial.

"The country needs more men in the Senate like Senator Bruce." (Editorial.)

Chicago Journal of Commerce.

"Mr. Bruce is an honor to the Senate and an honor to Maryland." (Editorial.)

Philadelphia Public Evening Ledger (Independent.)

"Senator Bruce of Maryland * * * has, by the courageous exercise of a little political common sense, lifted himself into a position of intellectual leadership which makes him a force to be reckoned with."

Philadelphia Inquirer (Republican).

"It is the voice of a Democrat of the old school. These words might well have been uttered by sturdy Grover Cleveland himself."

Frederick William Wyle, Washington Evening Star (Independent).

"Senator William Cabell Bruce, Democrat of Maryland, is a master of the English language, as becomes the man now generally regarded as the scholar of Congress."

Greenville, S. C., Democrat-Sun.

"The Senator from Maryland is like one of those giants of pre-Civil War days, who thought of their country, first and last and all the time. (Editorial.)

HERBERT HOOVER
AND WHAT HE HAS DONE

Was born the son of a village blacksmith at West Branch, Iowa; left an orphan at the age of seven: earned his own way from the time he was thirteen.

Worked his way through Stanford University at Palo Alto, graduating in 1895; after serving a short engineering apprenticeship in this country, he accepted a chance to go to West Australia.

Spent several years as chief enginer of large mining ventures in Australia and China; was caught with Mrs. Hoover in the Boxer seige of Tientsin, where he organized his first food relief. distributing rations to besieged Europeans and friendly Chinese.

At thirty he had become one of the world's foremost consulting engineers with offices in the United States and abroad.

Went to London in 1914 in the interest of the Panama-Pacific exposition held in San Francisco the following year; organized the relief committee which aided 160,000 Americans stranded in Europe at the declaration of war.

American authorities in London asked him to take charge of Belgian relief; under his direction 10,000,000 innocent war victims in the occupied zones were fed through four years, at a total cost of $1,400,000,000.

Returned to U. S. at our entry into the war, became food administrator; secured the voluntary cooperation of producers and consumers, instead of forced planting and rationing effective in Europe.

Created U. S. Grain Corporation and Sugar Equalization Board, financed by the government, as protective measures to safeguard American producers against the consolidated buying program of the Allies; maintained fair prices at home and banned speculation and profiteering.

Under his guidance exports of food to the Allies increased from 6,500,000 tons to 21,000,000 tons per annum. American foodstuffs valued at $9,000,000,000 were purchased and sold through the food administration.

Farm products, at Hoover's suggestion, were purchased at prices determined by independent commissions representing the farmer. At the close of the war the entire capital used by the food administration through its various agencies was returned intact to the U. S. Treasury.

Went to Europe after the war to induce the Allies to permit enormous surplus of food accumulated in this country to be sold to former enemy nations. Succeeded after four months of discussion, maintaining wartime price of agricultural products until the farmers could liquidate their heavy loans through sale of 1918 crops.

Since the World War has divided his time between great humanitarian service and extension of the activities of the Commerce Department, of which he was the head for more than seven years.

Organized food supply service for central European and liberated countries, assisted their rehabilitation; 10,000,000 destitute children were fed during 1920-22 by the American Relief Administration, which Hoover organized and for which he raised $80,000,000.

Went into Russia at the famine outbreak in 1921, fed 12,000,000 people, saved hundreds of thousands from death by disease.

Reorganized the Department of Commerce from top to bottom; increased efficiency of every division; built up foreign trade service, aiding more than 2,000,000 merchants and manufacturers annually.

Reduced distress incident to post-war business slump through a national conference on unemployment; outlined plans to increase construction and stimulate production, which ended the unemployment crisis in six months.

Has pointed the way to elimination of industrial waste and simplification of products, saving manufacturers billions of dollars annually.

Initiated the Better Homes movement in which 4000 communities now participate; since it was started 3,500,000 new and better homes have been built.

Directed the Mississippi Flood Relief, by which 650,000 victims were rescued, cared for and rehabilitated.

Impressed by what he had seen in Europe, organized the American Child Health Association to promote health protection for all children, raised the annual cost of $350,000 and has served as its president since formation in 1921.

Has advised three administrations on foreign economic policies; has been a member of the war debt funding commission.

Is the father of two grown sons; short camping and fishing trips are his favorite recreation, and the family embark upon these excursions at a moment's notice; in the open he does the cooking.

Is of Quaker ancestry and was reared in that faith: most of his relatives were farmers and still are.

Advocates relief for agriculture by reorganization of the marketing system, to which he will give the benefit of his vast administrative experience; opposes direct subsidy or any tax or fee to be paid by the farmer.

Has consistently encouraged completion of our system of inland waterway transportation to give all sections of the country a water outlet to the sea.

Says, "If we could secure the lowered transportation charges promised from waterways and thereby restore an additional six to twelve cents per bushel on grain, we would add a very important percentage to the farmers' profit."

Sums up his views on labor in the statement, "I for one am willing to trust the organized American workers to take care of their wages if we can keep our economic system in so healthy a state that there is a job for every man."

Would reorganize the Federal Government to make each independent bureau responsible to some cabinet officer, put administrative duties under individuals, semi-legislative and semi-judicial functions under boards and commissions.

Promises tariff revisions necessary "to provide real protection against the shiftings of economic tides;" would make every effort to give farmers full benefit of American tariff policy.

Speaks for "religious tolerance both in act and spirit," citing his Quaker ancestry.

Stands for maintenance of peace by fostering of international good will, joined with adequate preparedness for national defense.

Has said repeatedly that "equality of opportunity is the right of every American;" would make that one of the objectives of administration policy.

Is himself a true product of American opportunity, internationally experienced, broad-visioned; a master administrator whose human sympathies have never been bounded by national or racial lines.

And, therefore, he is the man best qualified to succeed Calvin Coolidge as President of the United States. In that office he will carry out his plans and ideas which will insure a greater country and more prosperity for all.

SMITH BUTTING A STONE WALL.

When Governor Smith assails the Republican administration as inefficient, extravagant and non-constructive, as he did in his speech of Tuesday night, he enters the realm of the fantastic. It is piffle. It is the veriest twaddle. Intelligent men are fooled by no such nonsense. They know what has taken place at Washington. They realize that the last seven years have witnessed a business management beyond compare. While other nations have been struggling to get on their feet, the United States has gone ahead growing and prospering and leading the world.

A non-constructive administration, eh? Tell that to the multitudes whose taxes have been reduced, and they will laugh at you. Four reductions—eighty per cent of taxable burden lifted from incomes under $10,000 a year and twenty-five per cent from the higher schedules. This is just mismanagement, is it? Nothing constructive in the fact that the National debt has been cut by six and a half billions, while under Governor Smith the expenses of the New York State government has been increased from $78,000,000 to $206,000,000. Nothing constructive in the tremendous growth of our exports which, under the wise direction of Herbert Hoover, have added one billion dollars to our sales abroad. Nothing constructive in the settlement of the debts owed us by foreign nations. Just happened. Oh, what's the use? Al Smith is either not capable of understanding the tremendous labor and efficient management brought to bear upon the restoration of the country after the war, or else he is deliberately deceptive.

The chief complaint of the Governor seems to be that the Government is paying large sums in rentals of buildings for the conduct of its business, notably the postoffices. That complaint has been as old as the everlasting hills. No one would willingly pay rental for a house if he could own it. But the Government is dealing with countless cities, towns and villages. It has always built when Congress would provide the funds. Not so many years ago the "pork barrel" was a favorite institution until it became a national scandal. We do things better these days. Right now there is a constructive program in progress. But it doesn't please the Democratic candidate, or else he has never heard of it. What he seems to promise is a postoffice building for every town right off the bat. But to clean up the situation at once would require a loan of some billions. It would add vastly to the public debt. This fact doesn't seem to have occurred to him. But, considering his own administration in his own Commonwealth, debt and expense are nothing to him.

He complains, too, that while Congress has planned to spend $325,000,000 on the Mississippi Valley developments, the immediate amount appropriated is only $15,000,000. Not being an engineer, and not possessed of any accurate information whatever concerning waterways—he is densely ignorant on that subject—he fails to understand that intricate engineering problems are involved, and that the amount available is sufficient until Congress convenes and is presented with the engineering reports.

However, the Governor pushes in where angels would fear to tread. For isn't he the great I? How often do we hear from the great I? "I will do this" and "I will do that." And so breezily—the way that trained politicians have—"I promise to face all of these problems" and "I will settle them and get them out of the way." We wonder just how. He would settle the farm question by handing it over to a commission. He would settle the tariff in exactly the same way. What a great love he has for commissions upon which he can unload everything!

But it isn't so easy as all that. There is Congress. It holds the pursestrings to the nation's treasure chest. It determines the amounts to be expended, whether for postoffices, floods, waterway developments or other projects. And when the Governor talks airily about reorganizing "the old Government," it might be well for him to remember that he is bucking the methods of a Secretary of the Treasury who has made a record for efficiency that is the marvel of every American at all familiar with the financial operations of the United States and the wonder and envy of foreign capitals.

Which of the two would you prefer to handle the financial affairs of the Nation—Andrew W. Mellon or Alfred E. Smith?

The Governor is butting his head against a stone wall.

PHILLIPS LEE GOLDSBOROUGH.

Former Governor Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Republican candidate for United States Senate, spoke in Cumberland last week, together with Congressman Fred. N. Zihlman and the former Governor Allen, of Kansas.

Great interest attached to the remarks of Mr. Goldsborough, because of his candidacy for an exceptionally important office. Election of a Republican Senate is one of the goals that must be attained to make November's balloting entirely satisfactory. There's an excellent chance to replace a Democratic Senator with a Republican in Maryland this year. Mr. Bruce, despite his rhetorical brilliance, is not regarded as a popular candidate, and he has said much to queer himself with sober-minded independents. Republicans have a candidate of whom they are proud; one who commands respect and admiration wherever he goes and whenever he speaks.

It is not our purpose to say much here about Mr. Goldsborough's qualifications or Mr. Bruce's deficiencies. The contest should be regarded as a party battle rather than one of personalities. Mr. Goldsborough deserves election because he is a 100 percent Republican, who is in thorough harmony with all the prosperity-promoting policies of his party, and Mr. Goldsborough will make a first-class Senator because he is a man of superior intelligence, sound judgment and equitable temperament.

As a highly intelligent man, Mr. Goldsborough is conducting his campaign in a highly intelligent way. He began a systematic itinerary of the State and soon revealed the fact that he thoroughly understood all the issues of the campaign and was able to present the Republican viewpoint in simple and instructive language. His speeches are expository rather than declamatory. He is not given to uniqueness in view or expression, but champions in a convincing way—compactly and explicitly—principles of his party which experience has proved to be essential to the national welfare. Mr. Goldsborough might be described as an orthodox Republican, for he has adhered to the political faith of his youth unwaveringly, and has never had occasion to question its validity. He has observed the rise and fall of several well-advertised Democratic heresies. Meanwhile Republican doctrines have remained invariable. Hence Mr. Goldsborough's experience, coupled with his intelligence splendidly equips him for leadership.—Cumberland Daily News.

THE ROAD AHEAD

The road ahead is jammed with traffic: trucks, machines loaded with luggage and filled with people, flashing roadsters and light sedans. But they all spell one word, that of the little girl who moaned, "Holiday is over."

School or its equivalent is before and, straight or curved or with detours, stretches the road ahead.

That road which might be marked "world of 1928-29" is also jammed. Nineteen twenty-eight has been a year full of events. The tremendous changes in China—to take a country thru which that year wound eventfully—success of the Nationalist party; consolidation of South and North China republics; change of capital from Peking to Nanking; death of the war lord Chang; migrations from Shantung province into Manchuria; detour of relations between Japan and China over Manchuria; new educational movements; advice by her forty year old leaders that Chinese youth should adhere to morality and secure the advantages of scholarships; and many other points in which these are only hills or high lights.

In Europe, and immediately ahead, the meeting at Geneva of the Council of the League of Nations and the discussions there of the Rhineland evacuation, the Dawes plan revision and other political roads to peace.

Also the annual meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations and another session of the Preparatory Commission on Disarmament instituted by the League. These sessions at Geneva will all feel a new stimulus from the reported agreement as to naval limitations between France and Great Britain and the signing of the multilateral treaty.

The multilateral treaty brings one immediately back to America and here shows first of all the ratification of the multilateral treaty by the Senate. Already the questioning word has been sounded; what is the Senate going to do? Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate committee on Foreign affairs, declared that if the treaty on outlawry of war were signed this summer, it would be immediately taken up by his committee when Congress met in December. His subsequent words were such as to hold out promise of favorable consideration.

True a presidential campaign, its trucks loaded with unusual questions, crowds the way; yet a presidential campaign cannot crowd off the road the important matters which must flash by, out of the ruck, and on. No campaign today can stultify progress of thought. Rather such thoughts and developments may prove good hitch-riders, using first one machine and then the other, but always getting on and ahead.

Along with the ratification of the multilateral treaty come the Pan-American Conference, the air service conference, the proposed changes in the State department. These all ally themselves with the cause of peace. Those who desire the outlawry of war permanently may have careful driving ahead of them, for there will be bad places in the road, long detours of discussion and opposition. But it is expected that many questions of the western hemisphere will be settled amicably and justly at this Pan-American conference and that air service may be studied in terms of usefulness and peace, and that the multilateral treaty may become a permanent stone marking the long road which leads at last to world peace.

For this great road those of this generation must be road makers as well as travellers. This is especially true of America and of the road ahead.

COOLIDGE ISSUES ANNUAL THANKS PROCLAMATION

Calls Upon People to Offer Their Thanks Thursday, Nov 29

Washington, Oct. 21—President Coolidge issued his annual Thanksgiving Proclamation today by calling upon the people of the nation to offer thanks on Thursday, November 29, for prosperity in agriculture, industry and commerce, and for the peace of the past year.

The proclamation follows:

"By the President of the United States,

"A proclamation.

"The season again approaches when it has been the custom for generations to set apart a day of Thanksgiving for all the blessings which the Giver of all good and perfect gifts has bestowed upon us during the year. It is most becoming that we should do this, for the goodness and mercy of God, which has followed us through the year deserves our grateful recognition and acknowledgement.

Have Much to be Thankful For.

"Through His divine favor, peace and tranquility have reigned throughout the land. He has protected our country as a whole against pestilence and disaster, and has directed us in the way of national prosperity. Our fields have been abundantly productive; our industries have flourished; our commerce has increased; wages have been lucrative and contentment has followed the undisturbed pursuit of honest toil.

"As we have prospered in material things, so have we also grown and expended in things spiritual. Through divine inspiration we have enlarged our charities and our missions; we have been imbued with high ideals which have operated for the benefit of the world and the promotion of the brotherhood of man through peace and good will.

Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November, next, as a day of general thanksgiving, and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their daily work and in their homes and in their accustomed places of worship devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and seek His guidance that they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

"Done at the city of Washington, this 23rd day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty-third.

"CALVIN COOLIDGE.

"By the President:
"FRANK B. KELLOGG,
"Secretary of State."

MT. LAKE PARK.

Quite a delegation of the members of the United Presbyterian church were here Saturday and Sunday looking over the Park in anticipation of their visit here next summer when the young people of that denomination will gather in annual convention. The party was composed of people from the Pittsburgh district and after attending services in the M. E. church here Sunday morning returned to their homes Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. R. C. Tassie narrowly escaped being injured one day recently when the steering gear of the car in which she was riding became loosened as she was descending the short, steep grade near the Park school house. The car left the roadway and ran into a tree and a heavy shake-up of the occupant was the result.

We are very sorry to learn of the death of Dr. Hugh Carr, son of Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Carr. He was a prominent and successful physician of Fairmont, West Va. Death was due to pneumonia. He spent many of his early summers here with his parents.

Republican Candidate for United States Senator

PHILLIPS LEE GOLDSBOROUGH

Phillips Lee Goldsborough was born in Dorchester County, Maryland, and became interested in politics in his early manhood. When 28 years old, he was elected State's Attorney of his native county and was re-elected at the expiration of his first term.

He was elected Comptroller of the Treasury of Maryland in 1897 and served the term of two years. Continuing his interest in the political affairs of the State, he was Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee during the campaign of 1900 when the State was carried for President McKinley. He served as Collector of Internal Revenue through the administrations of Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft.

Before the expiration of his term, Mr. Goldsborough was elected Governor of Maryland in 1911 and is regarded thruout the State as one of our best Governors. His appointments were of an unusually high order and were generally approved. His administration was one of the most beneficial in the history of the State.

At the conclusion of his term, Governor Goldsborough was elected President of one of Maryland's oldest national banks, situated in Baltimore, which under his guidance has made most satisfactory progress.

During the World War, the abilities of Governor Goldsborough were utilized in various patriotic movements, as he was always ready to give his time and service with enthusiasm. He was Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee for Maryland and was the leader in most of the Liberty Bond drives.

So successful was Governor Goldsborough in his patriotic service to the Nation during the War that he has ever since been called upon to lead the movements in Baltimore for charitable and patriotic purposes. He was chairman of the Committee which organized the Community Fund in Baltimore City. He has willingly lent his aid to every call in behalf of a worthy purpose. His appeals have been irresistible and the success of most of these movements has been due to his wise leadership. Governor Goldsborough has won the admiration and esteem of the great mass of our people throughout Baltimore City and our State and many of them refer to him affectionately as our first citizen.

Governor Goldsborough's popularity is based upon the kindliness of his nature and his disposition of helpfulness toward all our people; without reference to party, race, color or creed. His chief claim, however, to the suffrage of the citizens of Maryland is his record in high public office and his successful business career in this State. The surest way to judge the future is by reference to the past. Based upon this assumption, Maryland may reasonably expect from Phillips Lee Goldsborough, if elected, service in the United States Senate at least equal to any that she has ever received in the past.

"Don't Shoot."

Taking time by the forelock for the coming hunting season which begins November 10, a number of Oakland's nimrods held a council of war last week-end. The meeting was well attended, the crowd present consisting of Jim Painter, Walter Janoske, Bill Browning, "Betty" Dawson (who is on his thrice annual vacation because it is raining, Bill Glotfelty, Harland L. Jones, Dr. Grant and Carlton (Hoot Gibson) McComas. They decided to investigate the old stamping ground and meet on Crook Crest at a point where the editor of The Republican set his rabbit traps about half a century ago (the place is still well marked), and report their findings. They met as planned and Col. Bell, figuring that something was in the wind, was hidden behind a tree with his "old faithful" to snap most anything that might peradventure happen. A slight noise in the tree above caught their attention, and as they all turned to look, the Colonel snapped the picture:

Sidelights of the Carnival.

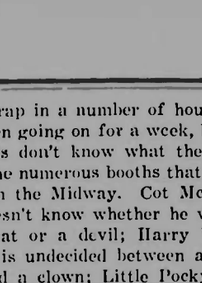
Dave Walter already has a flat tire from overwork—can be seen limping most any time.

Howard Stuck missed his coffee and doughnuts two mornings in succession this week at Glotfelty's restaurant.

Alva Gortner promises to be down town at seven o'clock on the morning of celebration. This alone is sufficient to term the carnival a success in advance, but Alva doesn't say what time he'll be down the morning following.

Judson Loar refused to divulge the secret of how he is to appear in the mummers parade, but he'll be there just the same, otherwise the parade will be a flop. It is rumored, however, that he is going to compete with Charley Sprague for the fat man's prize.



A scrap in a number of households has been going on for a week, because the kids don't know what they want from the numerous booths that will be open on the Midway. Cot McComas, Jr., doesn't know whether he wants a Felix cat or a devil; Harry White's Junior is undecided between a Dutch girl and a clown; Little Pocky Gortner wants either a pumpkin or witch; Paul Nail'er, Jr., would like to have a skeleton, and Turkey Mac, Jr., wants a corner in the Gold Dust Twins.

The Cause of Wrinkles

Colonel Bell completed his arduous week's work when he got a picture of Bill Gibson yesterday morning which shows him in a jovial mood as he thinks of the ease with which he organizes the bowling league. "No worries at all," Bill had to say. But this was followed by such a streak of "blue lightning" that Scoop was made to believe that the smile on his face was a forced one.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

The Guernsey.

The native home of the Guernsey cattle is on the islands of Guernsey and Alderny. These islands belong to the same group as the Jersey islands, namely, the Channel Islands. They are located in the English Channel, 10 to 30 miles from the coast of France and from 50 to 120 miles to the south of England.

The Island of Guernsey is about 9 miles long and 5 miles wide and has a triangular shape. The island is governed similar to the Jersey Island by a Lieutenant-Governor representing the British government and a bailiff acting as president of the local government.

Along with the production of Guernsey cattle the people are chiefly interested in the production of grapes, tomatoes, muskmelons and flowers. These are raised under glass and are chiefly for the London market.

The origin of the Guernsey is somewhat similar to that of the Jersey, of which very little is known, but it is thought they descended from the cattle of Brittany and Normandy.

According to some authorities, it is said that some monks investigated the origin of cattle and reported that the most prominent ancestor is the Brittany breed called Froment du Leon, which is much smaller than the present Guernsey, but has some outstanding markings. The other source was the Normandy cattle, which were much heavier than the modern Guernsey.

The cattle on Alderny Island are believed to have come from the same source as the Guernsey, and for many years the cattle that were sent to England from the islands were known as Alderneys.

The movement for the improvement of the Guernsey cattle is said to date back to 1824, at which time a law was passed prohibiting the importation of all sorts of French cows. This law was passed chiefly to prevent the reexportation of French cattle from Guernsey to England as of the island breed. Another movement to improve the Guernsey breed was said to have started in 1828, when a score card was prepared and used in judging the Guernsey cattle. This card pointed out the ideal type and the animals were bred with the hope of producing the ideal type.

America Introduced to the Guernsey

Reuben Haines, of Germantown, Pa., is given credit of importing a pair of Guernsey cattle from Alderny Island into the United States in 1818. A Mr. Price, of Boston, is credited with importing cattle from Guernsey Island in 1830. Soon after Mr. Price's importation a cow and a bull were shipped to Cow Island, Lake Winnipesaukee, N. H. These two animals were registered in the American Guernsey Cattle Club of 1899. They were known as The Pillsbury Bull 5816 and Pillsbury Cow 11310. From these two animals as the foundation stock have descended some excellent cattle. The next importation of purebred Guernseys occurred in September, 1840. Nicholas Biddle, of Andalusia, Pa., brought over three cows on the schooner Pilot. These were the first registered in the American Herd Book. They were known as Jennie Deans, Fenella and Flora Melvor, and from them came heifers Fanny Ellsler and Fairy and the bull, St. Patrick I.

The characteristics of the Guernsey cattle and some prominent families will appear in next week's issue of The Republican.

TIMBER LANDS IN WESTERN MARYLAND ARE EXPANDING

State Has More Kinds of Trees than Are to Be Found In Any Other Commonwealth

Western Maryland plays a leading role, says State Forester F. W. Besley, in the State program to increase timber resources.

Because Maryland today is dependent upon outside sources, mostly in the South, for 90 per cent of her timber supply, the Southern states will be out of the exporting class at the present rate of cutting in ten years, and forests in Maryland should be developed, Mr. Besley declared recently. Under private ownership the forest lands of Maryland are not providing more than one-third of the crop they are capable of producing under scientific management, but if the 2,228,000 acres of Maryland forest land were fully productive, it would furnish the State's full timber requirements, or value equivalent based on present uses, he stated.

"Private initiative has failed and will continue to fail to meet our lumber requirements. It is the duty of the State to lead the way in safeguarding our future timber supplies. State forests are the answer and should at least constitute 10 per cent of the total forest area. The bulk of this area will be in the mountainous section of Western Maryland, though considerable land should be acquired in Southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore as demonstration forests," said Mr. Besley.

Among the points stressed by the State Forester were: State forests serve as timber growing areas in using land unfit for other purposes which a private owner is unable or unwilling to hold for future timber crops; state forests serve to stabilize and maintain wood using industries and the prosperity of local communities on a sustained yield basis; they serve as areas for camping and other recreational uses; for enjoyment by people of the State, as protection forests for conserving stream flow due to maintaining a perpetual forest cover, as a shelter and breeding place for game, portions of the forests to be reserved as game refuges, a use not inconsistent with timber growing; and also they serve as demonstrations of practical forest management.

Maryland has gone farther than any other State to help private owners of forest land, but this is insufficient; there must be State forests, Mr. Besley declared.

In the past 22 years the land in State forests has grown from 2,000 acres to 5,000 acres and is easily adaptable for successful growth of timber. Mr. Besley said. In the State there are 157 distinct varieties of native tree species, more than in any other state; the land is near sections where timber is most needed, and there are splendid facilities for transporting it, so that the plans for more extensive state forests are especially feasible. The forest fire problem was spoken of, including fire protection for which 12 fire lookout towers have been located in the State and over500 forest wardens are appointed. The plan of the forestry department is not to "go into the sawmill industry," but to furnish stumpage and take over forest lands for the purpose of making them yield to their fullest extent.

ENTHUSIASTIC MUMMERS CELEBRATE HALLOWE'EN

Immense Crowds, in Gay Costumes, Parade Streets at K. of P. Street Carnival

A crowd of approximately 3500 persons was on hand to take part in the Hallowe'en street carnival and mummers' parade, held last night under the auspices of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias. At least a thousand of these were in costume and participated in a most colorful parade.

Twenty-four prizes, donated by the merchants of Oakland, were awarded to the winners of various events in the parade, and following the parade came the dancing and a general good time. Everybody was out for a good time, and crowds thronged the streets until a late hour.

Cecil Smith was awarded the Chevrolet coach promptly at 11:00 o'clock, when the booth closed.

That this was the best parade and celebration Oakland had seen in a long time was the consensus of opinion of hundreds of people from in town and out of town, and it was felt that the Knights of Pythias deserved credit for having worked and brought to a successful conclusion the celebration. The parade committee also deserves mention for the part which its members played in having one of the biggest and most attractive parades ever to march through the town.

Over Twenty-Five Judges.

The twenty-four prizes were awarded to winners picked out of the throng by more than 25 judges, who were stationed at various points along the route. The list of prize winners by whom the prizes were donated and the prizes are as follows:

E. E. Campbell, of the Lutheran church at Meadow Mountain, in charge. Interment was in the family lot at Rose Hill cemetery, North Glade. Her grandsons acted as pallbearers and flowerbearers.

Grandma Beckman, as she was so well known, will be greatly missed by all who knew her. She was especially fond of helping those in need and in rendering aid to suffering humanity. Her life was a useful one.

49 PERSONS ARE GIVEN EXAMINATIONS AT CLINIC

Eighteen Paralysis Sufferers—Was One of The Most Successful Clinics Held in County

One of the most successful orthopedic clinics ever held in this county took place last Saturday, Miss King, County Public Health Nurse, stated at the close of the day's work. A total of forty-nine patients were in attendance, the largest number ever to be present upon an occasion of this kind.

Eighteen of the persons attending the clinic were recent paralysis sufferers, and 27 were old cases who had come back for a reexamination and four were new ones. Dr. George Bennett, Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, was in charge. He was assisted by Miss Mary Neiberger, orthopedic social worker of Johns Hopkins. Miss Mary E. Church, secretary of the Maryland Society for Crippled Children, was also present. Bruno Wensien, a specialist on orthopedic appliances, took measurements for braces where they were needed.

Miss Karcher, specialist on massage treatments, was unable to be present due to a serious automobile accident in which she was injured the day before, but she will be in Oakland later, Miss King said.

Auspices of Civic Club.

The clinic was under the auspices of the welfare committee of the Oakland Civic Club. This committee consists of Mrs. Milton Sincell, Miss Grace Jones, Mrs. N. I. Broadwater and Mrs. Burruss Moore. Lunch was served at noon by Mrs. F. E. Rathbun, Mrs. H. A. Loraditch, Mrs. A. D. Naylor and Miss Lottie Loar, members of the Civic Club.

It is now the aim of the welfare committee to raise funds to take care of the expenses of Miss Karcher when she comes to Oakland. Mrs. Ralph Weber has consented to be responsible for her lodging, breakfast and dinner. Money for her traveling expenses, salary, etc., will have to be provided.

Due to the lack of organized means whereby some money may be raised, personal subscriptions have been received by members of the welfare committee. Subscriptions received to this date include C. N. McIntire, $25; Edward Offutt, $10; Seventh Grade, Oakland Grammar School, 1927-28, $15.65; Civic Club, $50. Any others desiring to donate can send money to Mrs. C. M. Sincell, Miss King concluded.

COUPLE USE EXCURSION TRAIN TO FOOL PARENTS

Richwood Boy and Girl Start for Washington but Land Here

While the parents of Walker V. Godfrey, 21 years old, and Mildred Irene Lake, 18, both of Richwood, W. Va., had visions of their ofisprings enjoying the beautiful sights of the nation's capital city, the couple were in Oakland anxiously awaiting 12:01 o'clock Monday morning when they could secure a marriage license from the clerk's office and continue their travels on a life-long excursion.

They had wanted to get married for some time, and when the Baltimore and Ohio railroad announced an excursion from West Virginia cities to Washington, on the night of October 27, an excellent excuse for the benefit of their parents presented itself. With a crowd made up of the couple's friends, they were given permission to visit the Washington monument and get up in the air. But when the couple reached Oakland on the excursion train, they bade farewell to the party. Being Sunday, they had to be content to wait until the clerk could legally issue a license which was 12:01 Monday morning.

They rejoined the excursion at 2:15 Monday morning, having failed to get up in the Washington monument but succeeding on the altitude proposition. In fact they were still "up in the air" when they boarded the train.

Head-on Collision Occurs.

A head-on collision between cars operated by Floyd White and Walter Welch occurred last night near the East End Service Station, Oakland, injuring Mrs. Killius, Mountain Lake Park, a passenger in the White car, to some extent, and badly mashing the finger of Blaine Giessman, who was assisting the people in the cars to free themselves from the wreckage.

Lester Yutzy, following White's car, was also wrecked slightly, but none of the occupants of the cars was seriously hurt.

NO REACTORS DISCOVERED DURING CATTLE RE-TEST

344 Herds in Garrett County are now on Accredited List

No additional reactors were discovered in the 16 herds of cattle given the tuberculin re-test last week by Dr. C. E. Poe, government veterinarian. The purpose of the re-test, according to J. L. McGlone, county agent, was to see if any cattle which had been exposed to the reactors on the original test, had contracted the disease.

The outcome of the re-test shows that at the present time there are 344 herds of cattle in this county which have been accredited and marked O. K. Last spring a total of 3,216 dairy cows were given the tuberculin test and only 21 were found to be afflicted with the disease.

Since that time County Agent McGlone has received 134 new requests from all parts of the county for the test next spring. "Plans are being made to have Garrett county an accredited county by next year," Mr. McGlone said, "and as more requests come in each day, by the time we are ready to begin work there should be enough new herds listed to keep us busy for some time and have all the county accredited."

The reactors in the test last spring were slaughtered and the barns housing them disinfected, and the re-test last week was a precautionary measure against a possible spread of the disease.

LIBRARY STILL NEEDING $60.00 TO ACHIEVE GOAL

Voluntary Donations of Citizens Amount to More Than $40:

Bullard; $2 from Harry Miller, Mrs. Raymond Houck, Neil Fraley, Roland Gilbert, James Hart, G. A. Porter; $1 from Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pendergast, Mrs. L. Waingold, Mrs. Paul B. Naylor, Carlton McComas, Harold Harned, Rev. C. A. Shilke, William Gibson, Scott Shirer, Dr. B. F. Selby and Hamill's Book Store.

GRANTSVILLE HI SCHOOL WILL HOLD ANNUAL FAIR

Second Exhibition of Vo-ag Students Thursday, November 8.

Plans are now being perfected by the students of the Vocational Agriculture and Home Economics departments of Grantsville High School for the second annual fair and exhibition of their work, to be held on Thursday evening, November 8, G. Emerson Bishoff, agriculture instructor stated yesterday. All patrons of the school and the general public are cordially invited to inspect the various exhibits on that evening.

The agriculture departments are preparing exhibits of grain, hay, vegetables, fruits and poultry, and eight valuable educational demonstrations are to be given for the benefit of the students and visitors. The judges will be J. L. McGlone, County Agent, and several farmers of the community.

The girls of the home economic department, under the direction of Miss Eva Falkenstein, instructor in this department, are preparing and will exhibit needle work, canned goods, pastries and other homemaking ideas and will give demonstrations in cooking and home making.

Two short plays, appropriate to the occasion, will be presented. A small admission fee of ten cents will be asked to help defray the expenses of the fair.

The students of the branches having the exhibit in charge, are taking a keen interest in this work, Mr. Bishoff said, and they hope to have something that will interest everyone who may be present.

NIGHTS OF PLAY FOR THE BOWLERS ARE CHOSEN

Monday and Thursday Evenings Selected—To Begin Monday

Monday and Thursday nights have been selected as the nights on which matches in the third annual bowling series will be played, Bill Gibson, the manager, said yesterday. "These evexnings were chosen after carefully considering the activities of other organizations, and it was thought that Monday and Thursday would interfere least with any other organized body."

The league season will begin next Monday night and the teams who will compete that night will be announced Friday or Saturday on the blackboard in the Recreation. There will be eight teams in the League, according to present plans, and the schedule which will be followed throughout the season will he made up in a few days.

An organization of the Oakland Junior Bowling League has been effected by Mr. Gibson, and these teams will compete in the afternoon after school hours.

Only One Person Becomes Disorderly at Hallowe'en.

Only one person was arrested last night during the celebration for undue hilarity, he being David Beckman of near Oakland. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly and will be given a hearing this afternoon.

Upon complaint yesterday, Harry Davis, of Oakland, was arrested for violating a recent town ordinance prohibiting the solicitation of couples desiring to get married. His hearing will also occur this afternoon.

Oakland High School Notes.

Lecture

Miss Jessie L. Snow, executive secretary of the League of Nations, a non-partisan association of Maryland under the auspices of the Oakland Civic Club, gave an interesting talk in the school auditoruim Tuesday afternoon to an audience of 200 persons. Her subject was "The League of Nations" and was of particular interest to students of history.

To Take Census.

The Oakland High School faculty will be occupied after school hours this week taking the census. The teachers will appreciate any help the parents and guardians of children may give in securing the needed information. The census will be taken of children up to eighteen years of age.

Straw Vote Taken

The three civics classes of the High school held a mock election Tuesday on whether Hoover or Smith should become President. Hoover won with 79 votes, while Smith received 19.

Forty-three Million Men and Women Qualified to Vote at Election—7669 in Garrett County

Forty-three million men and women, the largest number ever registered, have qualified to vote at the presidential election next Tuesday, November 6. The total marks an increase of nearly 14,000,000 over the vote cast in 1924.

Maryland Has Share in Increase

Maryland has its share in the enormous increased registration, the State having 663,732 eligible to vote. 7,669 of these are Garrett countians. The greatest increase in registration, in proportion, was shown in Baltimore City, while in keeping with the general trend noted in compiling the national figures, Maryland counties in which the larger cities are located showed the most impressive increases.

Hoover Expresses Pleasure

"The enormous increase in the registration of voters throughout the country is one of the most wholesome developments in our political system," Herbert Hoover said. "Everyone interested in our public affairs hopes it may continue in the future for the good of the nation at large. The enormous enrollment of women in every State in the Union is both amazing and gratifying."

Official Ballot Published.

The official ballot which Garrett countians will vote next Tuesday is printed in this issue of The Republican and shows that votes should be cast for the following:

For president and vice-president of the United States; for electors of President and Vice-President of the United States; for United States Senator; for Representative in the Seventy-first Congress of the United States; for or against the Constitutional Amendment regulating the compensation of the members of the Legislature; for or against an act providing for the purchase and maintenance of a farm in Garrett county for care of public charges.

Three Marks To Vote National Ticket

Three cross marks are all that will be necessary to vote for President and Vice-president, Senator and Representive. A cross mark in the box opposite the names of Hoover and Curtis carries with it a vote for all eight electors, while a mark opposite the names of Mr. Goldsborough and that of Mr. Zihlman indicates a vote for each of these party nominess.

The notice of election and where the polls will be open is also published in today's Republican. The polls will open at six o'clock and remain open until seven o'clock in the evening.

Oakland High Booters Defeat Grantsville High

Oakland High School soccer team, playing excelent ball, defeated the strong Grantsville team 1 to 0 at the Fair grounds in Oakland last Friday afternoon. A few days previous the Grantsville booters had held Barton, considered one of the best teams in Allegany county, to the low score of 2-0.

This victory wiped out the defeat handed the Oakland team earlier in the season at Grantsville. Friday's game was witnessed by quite a crowd who saw the local soccerites perform as a team should.

Donald Porter, a dark horse, played fine ball, taking the ball through the entire team at least three times. Forrest Warnick, with his deadly blocking and long kicks, and Clyde Gnegy, with his fighting qualities, showed Oakland at its best. Andrew Gonder registered the only score of the game. Casteel, Oakland's captain, was not in the contest, but will be able to play tomorrow, when they meet Accident High soccer team at Accident.

The season will close on Friday, November 9, when Kitzmiller plays Oakland at the Fair grounds here.

West Virginia Dairymen to Meet November 8 and 9.

The Seventh annual meeting of the West Virginia Dairymen's Association will be held at Martinsburg, W. Va., on Thursday-Friday, Nov. 8-9, and all in this section who are interested are invited to attend, it has been announced.

Important questions concerning dairying will be brought up and discussed and another feature of the meeting will be a tour of two counties in the State of West Virginia. All the agricultural activities of that region will be seen.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop

Vote for Hoover.

"This country will be slow until Smith is elected—then it will be SLOWER." At least that is what Joseph Ash, McHenry, told Scoop on Tuesday morning when he called at The Republican office.

On account of the numerous pictures taken this week by the illustrious Col. Bell, there will be little room for reading matter. But look out for all the mud-slinging election news from now on.

Advance Dope.

An advance picture of the result of the election was developed in the studio yesterday by the Colonel and is the first real news as to the outcome of the struggle. It is that of Bill Browning reading the account of Mr. Hoover's election on the morning following the balloting. He is about ready to round up the members of the State Central Committee of the county and stage a "whoop-ee" party and then resign as a Democrat.

A Real Landslide.

Light Wines and—

One of the electors of president and vice-president on the Democratic ticket is named Eugene H. Beer. So Archibaldson, the pressman in the back room, has it all figured out that whoever votes for Smith votes for beer.

Was It a Coincidence?

Not the least of Hallowe'en's tricks pulled last night was the removal of the "man and beast" drinking fountain from the Court House walk. This was a real service. But there were a lot of people disappointed. The fountain was set up on Green street, between Hinebaugh's and the alley, with a sign on it, "Free Booze."

Leading the Parade

Heading the Hallowe'en parade last night were the illustrious winners in the avoirdupois prize awards, Wade Hinebaugh and Guy Yutzy. They were badly shaken by their troublesome horses during the procession, but as they had "weighed in" before starting, they were adjudged the winners. Charley Sprague would have given them a close race had he not laughed too heartily yesterday afternoon and lost six inches of his waistline.

The Biggest First

Handing Them Out.

Harry Stemple worked so hard yesterday handing out chances on the Chevrolet coach that he was a total wreck this morning. After a medical inspection he was proclaimed a physical wreck, having had both arms almost pulled out of their sockets and having shrunk almost two inches as a result of over-exertion. It will require weeks for his complete recovery.

Rest Cure Needed

Casualty Number One

The only casualty of last night was Sherman White, who took Raymond Houck's pet from the filling station and entered in the parade. Officer Bun Nethkin had to arrest Whitey for parading for a reason that is obvious. The Colonel got the picture as usual. It he had been chained it would have been different, the officer stated.

Without a Costume.

BITTINGER.

Last week brought us a series of cold, wet days, which greatly hindered the work of the farmers in their fields.

The usual confusion and competition among stock buyers in this section has now begun for the season's purchase of the local marketable lambs.

Benj. H. Wiley and family, of Baltimore, returned to their city home last Monday after spending a week with relatives here.

Mrs. Thomas B. Wiley, of Grantsville, spent the week-end with relatives in and near this village.

Mrs. Dennis Detrick, of this place, is spending several days with her son Elmer Detrick at his home near Uniontown, Pa.

Miss Leola Brenneman, who is employed at Terra Alta, W. Va., spent Sunday with her parents here.

Messrs. C. E. Ellithorp and A. J. Orendorf made a business trip to Meyersdale, Pa., last Saturday.

J. F. Bittinger, of Hagerstown, Md., spent the week-end with relatives in this section.

Herbert Hoover

A Produce of America

And What He Has Done

Was born the son of the village blacksmith at West Branch, Iowa.; left an orphan at the age of seven; earned his own way from the time he was thirteen

Worked his way through Stanford University at Palo Alto, graduating in 1895; after serving a short engineering apprenticeship in this country, he accepted a chance to go to West Australia.

Spent several years as chief engineer of large mining ventures in Australia and China; was caught with Mrs. Hoover in the Boxer seige of Tientsein, where he organized his first food relief, distributing rations to besieged Europeans and friendly Chinese.

At thirty had become one of the world's foremost consulting engineers, with offices in the United States and abroad.

Went to London in 1914 in the interest of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, held in San Francisco the following year; organized the relief committee which aided 160,000 Americans stranded in Europe at the declaration of war.

American authorities in London asked him to take charge of Belgian relief; under his direction 10,000,000 innocent war victims in the occupied zones were fed through four years at a total cost of $1,100,000,000.

Returned to U. S. at our entry into the war, became food administrator; secured the voluntary co-operation of producers and consumers, instead of forced planting and rationing effective in Europe.

Created U. S. Grain Corporation and Sugar Equalization Board, financed by the government, as protective measures to safeguard American producers against the consolidated buying program of the allies; maintained fair prices at home and banned speculation and profiteering.

Under his guidance exports of food to the allies increased from 6,500,000 tons to 21,000,000 tons per annum. American foodstuffs valued at $9,000,000,000 were purchased and sold through the food administration.

Farm products, at Hoover's suggestion, were purchased at prices determined by independent commissions representing the farmer. At the close of the war, the entire capital used by the food administration through its various agencies was returned intact to the U. S. Treasury.

Went to Europe after the war to induce the allies to permit enormous surplus of food accumulated in this country to be sold to former enemy nations. Succeeded after four months of discussion, maintaining wartime price of agricultural products until the farmers could liquidate their heavy loans through sale of 1918 crops.

Since the World War, has divided his time between great humanitarian service and extension of the activities of the Commerce Department, of which he was the head for more than seven years.

Organized food supply service for central European and liberated countries, assisted their rehabilitation; 10,000,000 destitute children were fed during 1919-22 by the American Relief Administration, which Hoover organized and for which he raised $80,000,000.

Went into Russia at the famine outbreak in 1921, fed 12,000,000 people, saved hundreds of thousands from death by disease.

Reorganized the Department of Commerce from top to bottom; increased efficiency of every division; built up foreign trade service, aiding more than 2,000,000 merchants and manufacturers annually.

Reduced distress incident to post-war business slump through a national conference on unemployment; outlined plans to increase construction and stimulate production, which ended the unemployment crisis in six months.

Has pointed the way to elimination of industrial waste and simplification of products, saving manufacturers billions of dollars annually.

Initiated the Better Homes movement in which 1,000 communities now participate; since it was started, 3,500,000 new and better homes have been built.

Directed the Mississippi Flood Relief, by which 650,000 victims were rescued, cared for and rehabilitated.

Has advised three administrations on foreign economic policies; has been a member of the war debt funding commission.

Impressed by what he had seen in Europe, organized the American Child Health Association to promote health protection for all children, raised the annual cost of $350,000 and has served as its president since formation in 1921.

Is the father of two grown sons; short camping and fishing trips are his favorite recreations, and the family embark upon these excursions at a moment's notice; in the open, he does the cooking.

Is of Quaker ancestry and was raised in that faith; most of his relatives were farmers, and still are.

Advocates relief for agriculture by reorganization of the marketing system, to which he will give the benefit of his vast administrative experience; opposes direct subsidy or any tax or fee to be paid by the farmer.

Has consistently encouraged completion of our system of inland waterway transportation to give all sections of the country a water outlet to the sea.

Says, "If we could secure the lowered transportation charges promised from waterways and thereby restore an additional six to twelve cents per bushel on grain, we would add a very important percentage to the farmer's profit."

Sums up his views on labor in the statement, "I for one, am willing to trust the organized American workers to take care of their wages if we can keep our economic system in so healthy a state that there is a job for every man."

Would reorganize the federal government to make each independent bureau responsible to some cabinet officer, put administrative duties under individuals, semi-legislative and semi-judicial functions under boards and commissions.

Promises tariff revisions necessary "to provide real protection against the shiftings of economic tides;" would make every effort to give farmers full benefit of American tariff policy.

Speaks for "religious tolerance both in act and spirit," citing his Quaker ancestry.

Stands for maintenance of peace by fostering of international good will, joined with adequate preparedness for national defense.

Has said repeatedly that "equality of opportunity is the right of every American;" would make that one of the objectives of administration policy.

Is himself a true product of American opportunity, internationally experienced, broad-visioned; a master administrator, whose human sympathies have never been bounded by national or racial lines.

And, therefore, he is the man best qualified to succeed Calvin Coolidge as President of the United States. In that office he will carry out his plans and ideas which will insure a greater country and more prosperity for all.

Who Will Solve the Farm Problem?

IT is easier to shed tears over the farmer's plight than to study his problems and work out remedies based upon FACTS—not upon a city politician's impressions.

Promises are free as air—good intentions are worthless unless backed by both experience and understanding.

In short, the man best fitted for the job is

Herbert Hoover —he knows how

Give him a chance to do it.

Republican Working Program

1. Tariff Protection "An adequate tariff is the foundation of farm relief . . . The domestic market must be protected. Foreign products raised under lower standards of living are today competing in our home markets. I would use my office and influence to give the farmer the full benefit of our historic tariff policy."

Hoover Acceptance Speech, Aug. 11, 1928

2. Lowered Transportation Costs "A large portion of the spread between what the farmer receives for his products and what the ultimate consumer pays is due to increased transportation charges . . . These increases have been added to the cost to the farmer of reaching seaboard and foreign markets and result therefore in reduction of his prices . . . Nature has endowed us with a great system of inland waterways. Their modernization . . . would mean so large an increment in farmers' prices as to warrant their construction many times over. There is no more vital method of farm relief."

Hoover Acceptance Speech, Aug. 11, 1928

3. Marketing System "An outstanding proposal of the Party program is the whole-hearted pledge to undertake the reorganization of the marketing system upon sounder and more economical lines . . . the creation of a Federal Farm Board of representative farmers . . . especially to build up with Federal finance farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from the depressions and demoralization of seasonal gluts and periodical surpluses."

Hoover Acceptance Speech, Aug. 11, 1928

"In the past seven and a half years Congress has passed more than a score of constructive Acts in direct aid of the farmer and the improvement of his marketing system. They have contributed greatly to strengthen the agricultural industry. Our party has undertaken to go farther than this and to still further reorganize farmers' marketing systems, placing it on a basis of greater stability and security. I may repeat these proposals. We stand specifically pledged to create a Federal Farm Board of men sympathetic with the problem, to be clothed with powers and resources with which not only to further aid farmers' cooperatives and assist generally in solving the multitude of different farm problems which arise from all quarters of our nation, but in particular to build up with initial advances of capital from the government, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from depressions and the demoralization of summer and periodic surpluses. Such an instrumentality should be able to develop as years go by on the constructive measures necessary to solve the new farmers' problems that will inevitably arise. It is no proposal of subsidy or fee or tax upon the farmer. It is a proposal to assist the farmer onto his own feet into control of his own destinies. This is not a theoretic formula. It is a business proposition designed to make farming more profitable. No such far-reaching and specific proposal has ever been made by a political party on behalf of any industry in our history. It marks our desire for establishment of farmers' stability and at the same time maintains his independence and individuality."

Hoover Elizabethton Address, Oct. 6, 1928

4. Government Cooperation "I have steadily endeavored to build up a system of cooperation between the government and business . . . without interference or regulation . . . have secured progress in the industries, remedy for abuses, elimination of waste, reduction of cost in production and distribution . . . and more stable employment and profit . . . I should wish to apply the same method to agriculture . . . I am convinced that this form of action, as it has done in other industries, can greatly benefit farmer, distributor and consumer."

Hoover Acceptance Speech, Aug. 11, 1928

5. Increased Exports "We realized that we must energetically promote the sale of our farmers' surplus abroad . . . We set out upon a definitely organized campaign to build up the products . . . of the American farm . . . On any calculation our exports have increased by over one billion dollars during the past seven years . . . Foreign trade . . . is a vital contribution to the welfare of the . . . American farmer. I propose that we shall continue this service to our people."

Hoover Newark Speech, Sept. 17, 1928

The Democratic Program

Don't Know "When the farmer stops sitting on top of the world and begins thinking and keeping the rules of economics, he will begin to help himself . . . . I can't think of any way of really helping the farmers. If they could bring me a good suggestion, I should be glad to adopt it. The fact is, they are the only ones who can save themselves."

Smith Speech at Albany, N. Y. Jan. 26, 1927

"A Commission" ". . I have pledged myself to name a non-partisan commission of farm leaders and students of the problem to work out these details."

Smith Speech at Omaha, Neb. Sept. 18, 1928

Hoover's definite, workable plans, based upon long experience and sympathetic understanding, are infinitely better than vague promises without comprehension—and with the menace of an Underwood tariff free list on agricultural products lurking in the background.

Elect Hoover and Curtis—both long identified with farm relief, and both by birth and training thoroughly familiar with its details—to solve the farm problem. They know how!

TWENTY-TWO LICENSES WERE ISSUED THIS WEEK

Fifteen Permits Granted Saturday But None Thursday.

With the issuance of fifteen marriage licenses on Saturday, the number of licenses for the week ending Monday at noon was 29, a gain over the previous week, according to A. G. Ross, deputy clerk of the Circuit Court.

Last Thursday was unusual for employes at the Clerk's office as not a single couple applied for a marriage license on that day. This is a rare condition but it was offset on Saturday when the number applying was fifteen.

With the week's record of 29 the total for the month of October including Monday was 107. One license issued was marked don't publish."

SENATOR JOE ROBINSON ON HERBERT HOOVER.

At the close of the Mississippi flood relief campaign, directed by Herbert Hoover, he was given a great public ovation by the citizens of Arkansas. Senator Joe Robinson, now the Democratic candidate for Vice President, in introducing Mr. Hoover, as reported by the Arkansas Gazette, said:

"Few men in the history of mankind have exemplified exceptional talent in supplying the necessities and in relieving the suffering of their fellow beings.

The guest of honor at these ceremonies, Mr. Herbert Hoover, is noted as the world's greatest relief administrator.

"His career, apparently, has not yet reached the climax; but it is already distinguished by many unusual experiences and praiseworthy achievements. The outstanding triumphs of Mr. Hoover's efforts consist in the organization and direction of tremendous relief forces in periods of appalling calamity or national peril.

"He did not lead armed troops to battle during the late world conflict, but he was called to assume a responsibility of equal, if not greater, importance. His task was to mobilize to nation's food supply and to restrain the greed and avarice of profiteers.

"Bearing the commission of our great chief and wartime President, Woodrow Wilson, Mr. Hoover opposed and halted the deadly advance of hunger, pestilence and famine following the late war in Belgium, Russia and other foreign lands. Hospitals for the sick and wounded! Food and clothing for the victims of hate and wrath! Among the suffering and the dying he bore aloft a banner, saluted with respect and love in every civilized land—the banner of the Red Cross.

"How often do generous deeds go unacknowledged! How quickly are they forgotten! The State of Arkansas, rising in her pride, sings a song of new glory. The storms have abated, the clouds have disappeared. Our people are moving forward with courage and determination to repair the damage which came from the flood. In a few months the industries of the State will have passed the high mark they had reached when the disaster came. We have not forgotten. We will never forget the heroism, the kindly spirit, the friendly sympathy, the effective aid which Mr. Hoover and his associates brought in time of strain and need."

This high commendation of Mr. Hoover and his great abilities by Senator Robinson is well worth reprinting

A Former Resident of Garrett County Opposes the Purchase of a Farm and the Erection Thereon of a Home for the Indigent Poor Who Are Now Supported by the Taxpayers.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I was interested in reading in The Republican the discussion by the Oakland Civic Club concerning the proposed poor house for Garrett county. The Civic Club is to be congratulated in doing constructive community work.

The election on November 6 will be the most important election ever held in Garrett county. It will decide the fate of many old people, not only of this generation but for many generations to come. Once public money is invested in land and buildings for this purpose it will be difficult to change the system.

The Civic Club's report from Garrett county sates that there is a list of twenty men and sixteen women cared for, along with fifteen families and three couples at a total cost of about $8,000 each year. Allowing four persons to each family there would be one hundred and two persons cared for at present at an expense of $8,000 per year. The expense of keeping one person at that rate is $72.42 per year, or $1.51 per week. Does any one think that Garrett county can build, equip and maintain buildings and pay salaries to officials and helpers, and feed and clothe the poor for less than $1.51 per week each?

At the last sessionof the Maryland Legislature there was a bill introduced by Hon. John McFarlane, of Allegany county, creating a Maryland Old Age Pension Law. The bill passed and became a law. The chief argument in its favor was that it would be a more economical way of providing for the poor than by the poor house system.

But there is another angle from which to view the question. We not only have pocketbooks. We have hearts. The Chinese worship their ancestors. The kind-hearted people of Ireland treat their old with great consideration. Australia and many European countries have old age pensions, but America, America the beautiful, America the promised land, America, God's country, America, the hope of humanity, America upon whom nature has lavished her choicest gifts, America which God has prospered beyond the dreams of man America whose wealth, excluding South America, is greater than the combined wealth of all the rest of the world. America sends her old people to the poor house.

And what do the old people themselves think of it? A few months ago an old man in Westmoreland county, Pa., near Greensburg, died. For twenty years he had lived alone upon his farm since the death of his wife. The sheriff came and posted sale notices on his buildings. The poor house stared the old man in the face. He took his gun upstairs to his room to shoot himself. Before he fired the fatal shot his heart mercifully failed and he died. An old person will live upon a very small pension before he will submit to the stigma and degradation of going to the poor house.

A man may spend his life earning for his family. A woman [illegible] for her family. The more generous and unselfish they are, the more likely they are to become dependent. Shall we compel them to eat the bitter bread of charity in a poor house in their old age?

Let us not wait until we die and go to heaven to be happy. Let us make heaven of this hard old earth. Let us help to answer our own prayer: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

STATESMEN NEEDED IN CONGRESS

The Washington News, an independent newspaper published in Washington, D. C., which has been supporting Hoover for President, last Wednesday, October 24, editorially endorsed the election of David J. Lewis, Democratic nominee for Congress from the Sixth District.

The News published the following:

MARYLAND SIXTH DISTRICT

If the Sixth district of Maryland wishes to serve the country's welfare as well as its own, it will elect David J. Lewis to Congress.

The former mine boy who became the father of our national parcel post system, and who served so long and so well as a member of the Tariff Commission, should be put once more in a position to give the country the benefit of his intelligence and experience.

Statesmen are sorely needed in Washington.

PHILLIPS LEE GOLDSBOROUGH

Republican Candidate for

U. S. Senator

Election, Tuesday, November 6th

Phillips Lee Goldsborough was born in Dorchester County, Maryland, and became interested in politics in his early manhood. When twenty-eight years old, he was elected State's Attorney of his native county, and was re-elected at the expiration of his first term.

He was elected Comptroller of the Treasury of Maryland in 1897 and served the term of two years. Continuing his interest in the political affairs of the State, he was Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee during the campaign of 1900 when the State was carried for President McKinley. He served as Collector of Internal Revenue through the administrations of Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft

Before the expiration of his term, Mr. Goldsborough was elected Governor of Maryland in 1911 and is regarded throughout the State as one of our best Governors. His appointments were of an unusually high order and were generally approved. His administration was one of the most beneficial in the history of the State.

At the conclusion of his term, Governor Goldsborough was elected President of one of Maryland's oldest national banks, situated in Baltimore, which under his guidance has made most satisfactory progress.

During the World War, the abilities of Governor Goldsborough were utilized in various patriotic movements, as he was always ready to give his time and service with enthusiasm. He was Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee for Maryland and was the leader in most of the Liberty Bond drives.

So successful was Governor Goldsborough in his patriotic service to the Nation during the War, that he has been ever since called upon to lead the movements in Baltimore for charitable and patriotic purposes. He was Chairman of the Committee which organized the Community Fund in Paltimore City. He has willingly lent his aid to every call in behalf of a worthy purpose. His appeals have been irresistible and the success of most of these movements has been due to his wise leadership. Governor Goldsborough has won the admiration and esteem of the great mass of our people throughout Baltimore City and our State and many of them refer to him affectionately as our first citizen.

Governor Goldsborough's popularity is based upon the kindliness of his nature and his disposition of helpfulness toward all our people; without reference to party, race, color or creed. His chief claim, however, to the suffrage of the citizens of Maryland is his record in high public office and his successful business career in this State. The surest way to judge the future is by reference to the past. Based upon this assumption, Maryland may reasonably expect from Phillips Lee Goldsborough, if elected, service in the United States Senate at least equal to any that she has ever received in the past.

HOW MARYLAND MOTHERS CAN HELP HEALTH CAUSE

Must First Have Children Protected Against Diseases

"How can mothers help to prevent the spread of the catching diseases among children at school?" is asked and answered in a bulletin issued by the U. S. Public Health Service, to which Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the Maryland State Department of Health calls attention.

Mothers are advised, in the first place, to have their children protected against certain diseases, particularly smallpox and diphtheria, before they are enrolled in school. In this connection, Dr. Riley points out the fact that the Maryland law makes it compulsory for parents to have their children vaccinated against smallpox before they can be received in the public schools of the State. Clinics for immunization against diphtheria have been held in a number of schools, and arrangements for such immunization can always be made, Dr. Riley said, through the Deputy or County Health officer or through the Public Health nurse.

But how about the other diseases? If a child seems droopy on any particular day, how is the mother to know whether or not to send the child to school? For her guidance, in making her decision, two principles are laid down: first, the interest of the child; second, the interest of the children of the neighbors, considering all fellow-patrons of the school as neighbors.

For the child's own sake, as well as to prevent what may be the beginning of a catching disease from spreading to the other children, the child should be kept at home and the family doctor sent for if any of the following symptoms are present:

Fever, sore throat, diarrhea, severe abdominal pains, earache, discharging ears, discharging sore eyes, paroxysmal cough, especially if coughing spells are followed by vomiting and always if followed by whoop, severe colds even when no fever is present, the presence of an eruption not due to scratches, hard soap, to some other condition, or in the older children to acne (pimples).

"No child can study to advantage," the bulletin continues, "if ill enough to have fever, sore throat, a severe cold, or, if he has earache, discharging sore eyes, diarrhea, or severe abdominal pain. Indeed under such circumstances, attendance at school may be a positive danger to the child itself, and if the symptom is the manifestation of a beginning contagious disease, as some of the symptoms often are, there is danger that the child may give the disease to some of its playmates before the disease is recognized."

The danger to everybody concerned from some of these symptoms is better understood when it is explained that what seems to be "just a cold" may be the beginning of an attack of measles and a discharging ear may indicate the presence of some other contagious disease.

THE HEALING MINISTRY OF THE CHURCH.

Proverbs 17:22—A merry heart doeth good like a medicine; but a broken spirit drieth the bones.

There is a healing influence intrinsic in the Christian religion, and wherever that religion is preached and practiced, that influence must be felt—unconsciously, perhaps, but none the less effectively.

The word "gospel" means "glad tidings," "good news." The message of the Savior came to the weary souls and heavy-laden lives of the ancient world as it comes to us today, a message of faith and hope and love and therefore a message of joy. Or it came to them with the freshness, the charm, the power of something surprisingly new. The early Christians had not been inoculated against the contagious enthusiasm of the gospel as many modern disciples have been, by previous prophylactic Sunday school doses. Christ came, the Light of Life, bursting an effulgence of glory unspeakable, through the gloom and cynicism and hopelessness of the Roman Empire. The apostles who carried the message were men of radiant personality; and the tired, disillusioned devotees of pagan shrines, who called in vain to dead gods who did not hear, could not resist the contagion of their joy.

No wonder we read that the blind received their sight, the lame walked, the lepers were cleansed and the sick were made whole.

And today, when the gospel of Christ is preached and practiced in its fulness and power, it is still the glad tidings. There is no question about it: Jesus Christ has brought more genuine happiness and [illegible] than all other causes put together.

[illegible] that one of the most potent medicines in the pharmacopoeia is simple human joy. Every physician knows that a radiant smile and cheerful "good morning!" do the patient as much good as the pink pills which he leaves to be taken every two hours.

What is true of doctors is even more true of nurses. An indomitable cheerfulness is a more important asset for a trained nurse than a mastery of the technique of her profession.

A noted scientist says: "There is no tonic so uplifting and renewing as joy, which sets into active exercise every constructive power of the body." Which is a simple paraphrase of the scripture text: "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine; but a broken spirit drieth the bones."

In her youth, Elizabeth Barrett was thrown from a horse and received a serious spinal injury. A bed-ridden invalid, her frail body gradually wasted away. Her friends grieved, for they knew soon her gifted pen would cease forever to write. Then it happened that another poet, Robert Bronwing, came to see her. Between Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning there was born one of the noblest and one of the most passionate romances of history. And then a strange thing happened. Elizabeth Barrett's fragile body seemed to gather new strength. To the utter amazement of her friends, she left the couch to which she had been so long confined and walked again in the open air. Then followed their marriage and the sixteen happy years in Italy. A new joy, born of a wonderful love, had rescued her from the grave that yawned before her.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

PNEUMONIA AFTEREFFECT OF WHOOPING COUGH

Danger to Babies and Young Children from Neglected Colds

Speaking of the danger to babies and young children from neglected colds, and to the frequent occurrence of pneumonia as an after effect of measles and whooping cough, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said: "Contrary to the old ideas of the disease, pneumonia is now recognized as an infectious disease and as much care should be taken to prevent it from spreading to others as is taken in nursing cases of diphtheria or of any of the other communicable diseases. Young children are particularly susceptible to it and should never be exposed to it. Underweight children and children who are convalescing from illnesses are more likely to be attacked by the disease than are the children who are in normal health.

"Some idea of the prevalence of pneumonia among babies and very young children can he gathered by referring to the records of sickness and death that are kept by the State Department of Health and by comparing the deaths from pneumonia with those from the digestive diseases, which are usually thought to exceed all others in that age group. During the first eight months of the present year, there were 195 deaths from pneumonia among children under five years old in the counties of Maryland; 138 among babies under a year old, and 57 among children from one to four years old. During the same period, there were 161 deaths among babies and young children from diarrhea and enteritis; 129 among the babies and 32 among children from one to two.

"Nearly all of the deaths from diarrheal diseases occurred during the summer, while those from pneumonia occurred during the winter months. As the cooler weather comes, bringing with it the season for pneumonia, the need for protecting children from sharp changes of temperature and from the fall and winter 'colds' becomes more and more apparent. A child with an acute cold or with symptoms of influenza accompanied by fever should be kept in bed and should remain in bed for several days after the temperature becomes normal. The family doctor should be sent for when any suspicious symptoms are observed.

"The best way to safeguard a child's health is through regular supervision by the family doctor. Well children under three should be taken to the doctor two or three times a year, oftener if the child is not gaining satisfactorily. In that way conditions that need attention can be detected and cared for and the child's power of resistance against disease can he strengthened."

Who Was The Unknown Soldier?

(From various newspaper editorials)

Under the amber sunset glow of late September the cold outlines of the stone which hides our Unknown Soldier soften. Loosed from the ever-present tokens of love, vagrant leaves caressed by the breeze rustle over the granite. From the Capitol drifts the murmur of the tide of life at the home-coming hour.

Shuffling feet of age timidly approach the stone, and from beneath the Romany shawl which covers the gray hair, dark eyes filled with pain and longing, strive to see beyond the sealed portals and a withered hand makes the sign of the cross. Shadows fall across the stone and Rachel, leaning on the arm of Jacob, mourns and will not be comforted.

The step of vibrant womanhood and a boy's questioning voice, "Do you think he might be daddy?" A stifled sob and the answer, "Hush, dear. Nobody knows—only God." Pure passion lays a rose upon the stone, and in the last rays of the sun its crimson warmth seems to touch the stone as gently as the first kiss of love.

—o—

Who was this Unknown Soldier? Jew or Gentile, Protestant or Catholic? Or one of those who found life and service religion enough and the glory of God greater than the glory of creed? One thing we know—that he gave all that he had and was and hoped to be in order that "this government of the people, for the people and by the people should not perish from the earth."

Never do the loving ones who press close to his last resting place raise the question, was he Jew or Gentile, Protestant or Catholic, because love leads them there—and love is kind.

—o—

When he, whose couch now marks the trail's end for the feet of the nation, stood at attention in the ranks for the first time, did lifted eyebrows mark his declaration of religious faith? Or, when in the silent watches of the night he crouched in cramped fashion with death at his elbow in the "listening post," were those he guarded doubtful because of his religion?

When the sergeant's whistle shrilled at the "zero hour" and our unknown Soldier charged through the flames that seared in "No Man's Land," did any hesitate to lead or to follow him because he had learned his childhood prayers in a different fashion? And when his soul had passed on into the purple mists of glory and stood before its Creator did God ask, "Are you Jew or Gentile, Protestant or Catholic?

—o—

And yet—and yet, to our shame—today a man's fitness for high office is being questioned, not because he is mentally unprepared or morally undesirable—but because he is a Catholic.

Alfred E Smith, Democratic candidate for President, with an inspiring record of twenty-five years in the service of his State and people, and endowed with the God-given quality of leadership which has brought to his support progressive people in all parties—is unfit and unsafe to guide the destiny of this nation—because he is a Catholic.

What a commentary upon our Protestantism which has existed for hundreds of years! How easily we barter the birthright Thomas Jefferson gave us—for a mess of political pottage * * *.

—o—

What is more serious, if that is possible, are the ceaseless and senseless accusations made against this man Smith by women, wives and mothers, from whose lips little children must get the foundation of their knowledge of right and wrong, and all because Smith is a Catholic. Can there be any greater injustice done to childhood than to teach it to hate when the very being of a child demands love?

—o—

The constitution of the United States says: "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."—Article VI.

To my Brother and Sister Methodists and all who Love Truth:—

I have been a sincere Methodist for 33 years and have always voted dry and never tasted moonshine. Next Tuesday I mean to go into the election booth and before the eyes of my God and Maker vote for Al Smith.

Because I have taken this stand for the man who I honestly before God believe will enforce prohibition as Hoover would never enforce it, I have been ridiculed by my community. My fellow Methodists have never come to me and said, "Come, Brother Moon, let us reason together." They have put unsigned communications in my mail box and papers in which are downright lies about Smith. This shows the un-Christian spirit abroad.

Can I conscientiously support anyone for whom lies have been circulated to elect him? I have sincerely investigated to find out whether things said about Al Smith are true. The supposed oath that he would take as a Knight of Columbus has been proven false. This bogus oath is in the Congressional Record, but a lot of people don't know how it got there. It was used in a Pennsylvania campaign against a Catholic candidate for Congress. He contested the election before the Congressional Committee on Elections and gave this false oath used to defeat him as evidence that libelous statements had been made agninst him. The people who now circulate this oath do not give the words of the committee, which appear in the same copy of the Congressional Record. "This committee cannot condemn too strongly the publication of the fake and libelous article referred to—which was the spurious Knights of Columbus oath, copy of which is appended to this paper."

People who are afraid of Smith's election do not spread the news that a committee of eminent Masons in Los Angeles, consisting of a judge, a distinguished lawyer, a bank president and one of the leading dentists investigated the Knights of Columbus carfully and reported that it "can find nothing in the entire ceremonials of the order that to our minds could be objected to by any person."

Could I expect to stand before my God and hear His "well done, thou good and faithful servant," if I did not live by the light He gives? I firmly believe that God is not back of any political party that has to depend on lies for its power.

I honestly believe that the Republicans have not tried to enforce prohibition. I believe that Al Smith is honest and will try. Who would expect enforcement from Andrew Mellon, the man who has been a great whiskey distiller liar who now is in charge of enforcement of the Volstead Act? I am willing, before my God, to give Al Smith a chance to show that he mean what he says on law enforcement.

HON. FREDERICK N. ZIHLMAN, Member of Congress

FREDERICK N. ZIHLMAN, son of Nicholas Zihlman and Julia Etzel Zihlman, was born at Carnegie, Pa., on October 2, 1879. His father was one of the early settlers of the western part of Pennsylvania, having made his home near Pittsburgh in the early sixties. In 1882 he moved to Maryland, where with his two brothers he became engaged in the glass business.

At the early age of eleven years Mr. Zihlman obtained employment in a glass factory and there learned the trade of glass blowing. He contined in this employment until 1912, when he engaged in the real estate business in Cumberland, Md., his home town.

Elected to State Senate

The people of Allegany County, having recognized the sterling quality and faithful service rendered by Mr. Zihlman to the people of his trade, elected him to the State Senate, in which body he served during the sessions of 1910 and 1912 with distinction and zeal. He introduced and succeeded in having passed the first Compulsory Workingmen's Compensation law effective in this country, and which was known as the Miners' and Operators' Co-operative Relief Bill. He introduced a bill abolishing the contract labor system in penal institutions of the State, and, aided by the labor group of the State, he made such a determined fight for this bill that the Finance Committee of the Senate was forced to concede as a compromise measure the bill creating an investigating committee, which latter unearthed the horrible conditions which existed in the State penal institutions, and brought about, in part, abolition of the contract labor system in Maryland.

Mr. Zihlman was the first member of the Maryland General Assembly to declare for a direct vote for presidential candidates in the primary, which is now a law and in operation in the State.

The bill providing for the creation of a Public Utilities Commission for Maryland, the reorganization of the State Roads Commission and many other constructive measures found in him a ready champion and supporter.

In 1913 he was renominated by his party and triumphantly re-elected State Senator During the sessions of 1914 and 1915 he was the Republican floor leader of the Maryland Senate. Of his work the Baltimore press said: "He won an enviable reputation and became one of the leaders of the Senate."

In 1914 during the period of the first Wilson Administration, Mr. Zihlman was the Republican candidate for Congress and was defeated by David J. Lewis by a majority of only 742. Mr. Zihlman would have been elected had it not been for the many votes which were lost as the result of faulty marking on account of directions misunderstood by those working for his victory. In Frederick County alone, by actual count, Mr. Zihlman lost 245 ballots by reason of a mistake.

Elected To Congress

However, in 1916 he was again the Republican nominee for Congress. This time he was elected by a plurality of more than 2,700, and took his seat as a member of the 65th Congress at the extraordinary session called by President Wilson on April 2, 1917.

Four days after he took his oath of office our country was plunged into the throes of war. The Sixth Congressional District being in close proximity to the City of Washington, thousands of Maryland citizens went to Congressman Zihlman for aid and counsel. He rendered a service to his people in their hour of need. He attended to the needs of his people whether the task was great or small; he aided in the mobilization of the boys into the service; he visited them in the camps and was constantly at the beck and call of their parents and relatives, whose gratitude have already been shown by the constant re-election.

Congressman Zihlman interested himself immediately in the welfare of the Civil War Veterans and their widows, and the McPherson Post, No. 20, G. A. R., of Maryland, in a letter of commedation and appreciation publicly set forth:

"After expressions of endorsement and appreciation of your earnest, faithful and continued efforts by vote and voice in the support of all measures in the interest of our comrades of the Grand Army and their widows, it was unanimously resolved that we extend you our thanks for past services." * * *

It is a great source of inspiration to a man who has dedicated his life to his constituents to know that people in all walks of life express themselves in a spirit of appreciation for the many things done in the interest of that constituency.

Hundreds of organizations in all parts of the great Sixth District of Maryland endorsed Congressman Zihlman for his activities in behalf of legislation which relieved the heavy burdens of mankind. Congressman Zihlman has been active in the enactment of legislation liberalizing the provisions of the Teachers' Retirement Act, and the Board of Education of the District of Columbia through the President of Administrative Principals' Association, and Chairman of the Teachers' Legislative Committee, heartily endorsed the candidacy of Congressman Zihlman when he said:

"We sincerely trust that the voters of the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland will realize your abiliay as a statesman and return you to Congress where you may continue your splendid work in behalf of their interests, as well as the interests of the country as a whole. I am sure that they realize that they are honored, as well as benefited, by sending you."

The National Women's Party said of the Congressman:

"You have, indeed, been a strength to the woman movement during the time you have been in Congress and we feel that all women should be made aware of the service which you have so generosuly rendered."

The legislative record of Congressman Zihlman, as made up by the American Federation of Labor, shows the Congressman to have been at all times 100 per cent in favor of labor legislation.

Congressman Zihlman's work has been so outstanding that it is pleasing to note the very high words of praise and commendation in his behalf from the lips of Hon. John J. Davis, Secretary of Labor:

"From my personal knowledge of the man, I can say that Congressman Zihlman stands high in the estimation of labor men. His understanding of industrial problems and his ability as a legislator is generally recognized.

"He has always supported humanitarian measures and good legislation generally As Chairman of the District of Columbia Committee he has repeatedly demonstrated his duty towards labor legislation, and he assisted very materially in securing the Workmen's Compensation Law for the District of Columbia during the present session of Congress. This Bill was supported by the American Federation of Labor. * * *

"I am glad to testify to his work and worth and to commend his candidacy to the men and women of his District who have time and again indicated their confidence in him by electing him to Congress with overwhelming majorities."

Other members of Congress, both in the Senate and in the House, have come to look upon Congressman Zihlman as a man of great power. Senator Capper, of Kansas, chairman of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia, says: "You have always found time for District affairs, and have assisted in securing legislation such as the mother's aid law, the child labor law, and the workmen's compensation law—all of great importance locally and nationally. I appreciate, more than I can say, your valuable assistance and fine cooperation. You have rendered a fine public service, of which any man might be proud."

Congressman Zihlman, as Chairman of the Committee of the District of Columbia, has demonstrated a most remarkable understanding of city government. He is looked upon as a friend of the City of Washington, interested in its welfare and beautification, and has always received the approval and endorsement of the civic organizations of the District of Columbia. As chairman of that important Committee Congressman Zihlman commands a very high position and can render noble service to his constituency. This fact has been appreciated by the citizens of the Sixth Maryland District by re-electing Congressman Zihlman constantly with very big majorities from 1916.

He is first, last, and all the time, a humanitarian. He is the stalwart type that represents Republican principles and policies.

On the floor of the House, October 2, 1919, he made a figurative speech on Labor and Capital, stating: "I contend that during the critical times through which the country is now passing that he who deliberately precipitates an industrial conflict rather than counsel with the men who man his factories and furnaces is equally to blame with those who preach the doctrine of industrial revolution and who hope to bring about chaos in the hope that thereby they will be elevated to positions of power and responsibility."

March 17, 1920, when the House had under consideration a bill to declare Lincoln's Birthday a legal holiday, he made a speech on the floor of the house favoring the measure, emphasizing Lincoln's far-seeing wisdom, and a matter concerning the great President very deeply and to which he gave a great deal of thought, "the constantly growing number of commissions and boards within the Federal Government," which speech he concluded by saying, "Sane economy and efficiency demand early recognization. Let us hope that the return to sanity and constituted and responsive authority is at hand."

Congressman Zihlman as a Republican has served faithfully eight years in the Maryland State Senate and nearly twelve years in the Congress of the United States. He is a worker and follows religiously his creed to make it possible to give every American his chance to succeed.

Under Congressman Zihlman's leadership there was passed a bill providing for reciprocity between Maryland and the District of Columbia. As Chairman of the Committee on Labor, Congressman Zihlman has always worked for the relief of the unemployed and for the abolition of the contract labor system in penal institutions.

His long legislative experience, his ability and indefatigable industry, splendidly equip him to further serve his people, and a vote for Congressman Zihlman is a vote for a deserving public servant who gives his time, money, energy and effort to benefit his constituents and to promote their welfare and happiness.

The Anti-Saloon League of Maryland has endorsed unqualifiedly the candidacy of Mr. Hoover, Mr. Goldsborough and Mr. Zihlman.

Do not fail to vote for Congressman Zihlman and return him to Congress by the largest majority ever given in the Sixth Congressional District.

HOOVER VICTORIOUS IN 40 STATES

HOOVER LEADS IN STATE WITH MAJORITY OF 73,000

Goldsborough and Zihlman Defeat Democratic Opponents for The Senate and House

With 11 of the 1295 precincts of the State unreported and all but two of the counties of Maryland complete, the tabulation of the result of the election Tuesday shows 296,502 votes for Mr. Hoover and 222,970 votes for Governor Smith. Garrett county's contribution to this total was, Hoover, 1359; Smith, 1151. Ten counties that gave Democratic majorities in the last two elections added Tuesday to Hoover's lead.

Senator W. Cabell Bruce, one of Maryland's two Democratic United States Senators, went down to defeat under an avalanche of 40,000 plurality for Phillips Lee Goldsborough, successful Republican candidate. Mr. Goldsborough received a plurality in Garrett county of 2212, his vote being 3215 to 1113 for Senator Bruce.

Democratic Counties Switch

Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Caroline, Harford, Howard, Kent, Montgomery, Talbot, Wicomico and Worcester counties joined the Hoover group on Tuesday although in 1924 they had been counted in the Davis column on the presidential election. Smith predominated in Queen Anne's and St. Mary's counties.

The vote of 1281 of the State's precincts gave Senator Bruce 215,075 and formr Governor Goldsborough 255,738.

Zihlman's Majority Over 10,000

In the Sixth Congressional District, with six Allegany county precincts missing, Fred. N. Zihlman, candidate for re-election, had 45,942 votes to 35,519 for David J. Lewis, his Democratic opponent. Zihlman carried Garrett county, his vote being 3292 as compared with 1693 for Lewis.

High School Football Squad Receives Invitation to Game.

The football squad of Oakland High school has accepted an invitation from H. A. Stansbury, director of athletics for West Virginia University, Morgantown, to attend the West Virginia-Oklahoma Aggies football game at Morgantown on Saturday, November 10.

Coach Foster Speicher and the following boys will make the trip by bus: L. Winters, C. Dodge, E. Spoerlein, M. Butler, C. Gongy, F. Warnick, E. Maroney, W. Casteel, A. Gonder, D. Moore, D. Porter, E. Wolfe, K. Graves, R. Stemple, R. Glaze, W. Bowen and W. Killius.

Each year it is the plan of the athletic director to have the football squads of West Virginia high schools as guests at one of the home attractions, and the Oakland squad considers itself more than fortunate to be among those invited. This is the second time they have accepted the invitation, witnessing the Carnegie Tech-West Virginia game last year.

Game Tomorrow To Close Soccer Season.

The Oakland high school soccer team will play Kitzmiller high hooters tomorrow at the Fair Grounds in Oakland, in the last game of the present season. Oakland was defeated 10 to 0 when the two teams met a few weeks ago at Kitzmiller. Kitzmiller is leading in the Garrett County League and a victory tomorrow for that team would assure its championship. A defeat might tie the champions with Grantsville.

Last week Oakland and Accident played a scoreless tie at Accident.

Little Boy Breaks Arm

Little John Grant, the second son of Dr. and Mrs. Wm. W. Grant, Second street, while playing with a child's wagon in front of his home yesterday fell from it to the pavement and sustained a fracture of his right arm below the elbow. The fracture was reduced by Dr. McComas.

GARRETT COUNTY BRINGS VICTORY TO REPUBLICANS

Constitutional Amendment and Act Providing for County Home Probably Defeated.

With all of Garrett county's twenty-two precincts tabulated (unofficially) this morning, Mr. Hoover, Mr. Goldsborough and Mr. Zihlman came well to the forefront of victory in a ballot success that is almost unprecedented. Never before has there been such a large percentage of voters who came to the polls on a national election day, it being estimated that eighty per cent of the men and women qualified to cast their ballots exercised that privilege. In Garrett county more than 5500 votes were cast from a qualified list of 7,669.

Amendment and Farm Defeated

Along with the success of the Republican ticket in this county comes the probable defeat of the Constitutional Amendment regulating the compensation of the members of the State Legislature, and also the act providing for the purchase and maintenance of a tarm in Garrett county for care of public charges. All districts, however, have not reported on these two questions.

Hoover and Goldsborough carried every precinct in the county while Lewis was victorious over Zihlman in the third precinct of District No. 8 and in District No 13, both mining centers.

Zihlman had over 7000 majority in Allegany county and Mr. Goldsborough 7500. Mr. Hoover was still further ahead with approximately 10,000 in that county. In the Sixth Congressional District all three rolled up big majorities.

Zihlman defeated David J. Lewis, Democrat, whose strenuous but personal campaign did not appeal to the voters because of the overwhelming popularity of Zihlman.

ANNUAL RED CROSS ROLL CALL BEGINS ON MONDAY

Campaign Will Continue Until Thanksgiving, November 29.

The twelfth annual Red Cross Roll Call for Garrett county and the nation will begin November 11 and continue until Thanksgiving, November 29. Mrs. Joseph Fahey, Grantsville, chairman for this county, has announced.

The American Red Cross has appealed to the American people for a minimum membership of five million men and women. An affirmative response to this appeal will serve as an endorsement of the work which this great humanitarian organization is doing today, both in our own nation and throughout the world.

Of even greater importance will be the guarantee which such a response will give that this service to humanity will continue unabated through the coming year.

Two Arrested For Violating School Attendance Law

Two persons were fined during the past week for violating the school attendance law, in that they kept their children out of school. Joe Bittinger, near Jennings, was arrested last Tuesday on the charge and given a hearing before J. B. Emory, justice of the peace. Bittinger. He was fined $20 and costs.

William Beeman, Bear Hill, was arrested on Friday, November 2, on the same charge. He was given a hearing before Justice E. I. West, Oakland, who fined him $25 and costs. In default of the payment of the line he was given a jail sentence.

The school attendance law in part reads as follows: "Any person who induces or attempts to induce any child to absent himself unlawfully from school, or employs or harbors while school is in session any child unlawfully from school, shall be deemed guilty of a mi-demeanor, and be fined not more than fifty dollars.

Other warrants for people on similar charges are being served according to school officials, and this law is going to be enforced to the letter, they said. "All parents should see to it that their children are in school."

WILLIAM C. WALSH TO BE ARMISTICE DAY SPEAKER

British Howitzer to be Dedicated at Ceremonies on Monday

Hon. William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, will deliver the Armistice Day address on the Court House lawn, Oakland, on Monday, November 12, was announced by I. R. Rudy, post commander, Proctor Kildow Post, American Legion, under whose auspices the celebration is being held.

Mr. Walsh will deliver an address appropriate for Armistice Day and the occasion of the dedication of the British Howitzer, which will take place at the same time. The ceremonies will begin at 2 o'clock p. m.

Immediately following the dedication ceremonies there will be a matinee at the Maryland theatre showing George Sidney and Patsy Ruth Miller in "We Americans." The picture program will be repeated at 7:30 p. m. and the entire program will be for the benefit of the Legion.

The address and dedication ceremonies will be held in the Maryland Theatre if the weather is bad, it was stated.

All stores will close at 1 o'clock on Monday, so that all may participate in the services. Banks will be closed all day.

YOUTHS HELD ON CHARGE ROBBERY AT DEER PARK

Information Sent to Oakland Leads Officers to Stop Freight Train and Make Arrests

Having received word in Oakland Friday afternoon that Warnick's store, Deer Park, had been robbed and that the suspected culprits would be through on the next freight train, Sheriff W. D. Casteel and Mayor L. M. Fraley, assisted by a number of others, arrested Ray Kline and Victor Natter, youths, of Grafton, W. Va., and Charles Long, of St. Louis, Mo., on the charge of train riding until a further investigation had been made.

Henry Schmidt, a track foreman, saw two youths along the Baltimore and Ohio tracks near Deer Park station, and after following them to a place in the woods bordering the right of way, discovered a quantity of goods which had been taken from Warnick's store. He sent word to the railway officials here who notified the officers and when the train had been stopped they were placed under arrest.

The boys, accordingg to their story, were only trainriding. They had come from Grafton that morning and were returning to their home town when apprehended. Long was released, as it was obvious to the authorities that he had nothing to do with the matter.

The two boys are being held in the County Jail pending a hearing before Justice Gonder.

Sheriff Casteel is highly gratified with the co-operation of officials of the Baltimore and Ohio and also of the Western Maryland Railway both of which carried notice of the robbery in their bulletins and gave other assistance where needed.

Has Been Wanted for Four Years

Charles Johnsen, who has been wanted by the authorities for more than four years, was arrested Saturday at a point near Wilson Station on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, by Sheriff W. D. Casteel and Deputies Seymour and Grillith. Johnson is charged with the sale of liquor. He is also wanted, it is said, on a more serious charge by West Virginia authorities, and in all probability will be turned over to them in a few days. Sheriff Casteel said. Pending the decision as to his disposition he is being held in the Garrett County Jail.

Youths Sent Home.

Paul Harding and Harry Nine, both of Cumberland, neither of whom are more than fourteen years of age, were picked up on the street Sunday by Sheriff Casteel, and after questioning them put them on a train bound for Cumberland. The boys were in the act of committing a deed which might have caused serious trouble when they were apprehended. The boys, it is said, left the train at Keyser, West Va.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES FAR AHEAD OF DEMOCRATS

Have 111 Electoral Votes To 87 for Opponents—Late Returns Increase Popular Vote

Closing tabulations of Tuesday's presidential election have continued to reinforce the tremendous popular vote by which Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis have amassed majorities in states having 111 electoral units and left Alfred E. Smith and Joe T. Robinson leading in other states having only 87 electoral votes.

Late returns have served only to emphasize the immensity of the Republican sweep that embraced the entire west and most of the east and also extended into four traditionally Democratic states of the South—Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and the Texas empire.

With less than a hundred one-fourth of the national precincts remaining unreported, the Hoover majorities have rolled up in 40 states. Smith held the lead in eight others, six of them in the South and two in the East—Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Five Million Majority.

With more than three-quarters of the popular vote had been counted to a total exceeding 30,000,000 Hoover was pulling away from Smith with a margin of approximately 5,000,000. The electorate likewise increased that party's majorities in the two houses of Congress and gave the Republicans a lead in most of the 31 gubernatorial contests.

Following a trend established early on election night, the Hoover advantage swung steadily along in every section. It soon brought from Governor Smith a concession of his defeat, followed by his announcement that after a quarter of a century in politics he expected never to run for office again.

At his California home, Mr. Hoover relaxed in the elation of victory and prepared an expression of his gratitude to the public. His victory was looked upon as a vindication of great issues and a determination of the true road of progress.

BATTL EOF NORTH POINT, FOUGHT 1814, RECOUNTED

Capt. John A. Webster, In Letters to Mayor Brantz, Baltimore, Gave Account

The following account of the Battle of North Point, the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of which was observed this month, was written by Capt. John A. Webster to Mayor Brantz, of Baltimore.

Mayor Brantz, who was the second president of the Maryland Historical Society, asked Captain Webster for his own account of the conflict and the officer replied in two letters relating his own experiences and impressions of the battle, of September 13 and 14, 1814, says the Baltimore Sun of last Sunday.

The manuscripts of these letters are now in the possession of Arthur B. Bibbins, 2600 Maryland avenue, Baltimore.

Describes Battle.

The letters, giving a notable and graphic account of the fighting, follow:

"Harford Co., July 22nd, 1853.

"To Brantz, Mayor, Esqr.:

"Dear Sir—I now accede to your wishes in regard to my services during the war with Great Britain and Mexico, as near as my memory serves me.

"I will remark in the first place, at the commencement of the war with Great Britain I was appointed by Commodore Joshua Barney a third lieutenant on board the privateer Rossie. We captured and destroyed a great many of the enemy's vessels, one of which was the Princess Amelis, packet ship. She fought hard and did not strike her colors until her commander and two lieutenants were killed. We lost several killed or mortally wounded.

"At the formation of the flotilla at Baltimore Commodore Barney procured for me a warrant as sailing master in the navy. I was placed in charge of one of the barges during the whole period of their existence, or until they were burned near Pig Point at the head of the Patuxent river, on the approach of the British toward Washington. I was in all the different engagements with Commodore Barney, and during the attack we made on two British frigates at the mouth of St. Leonard's creek I had two men killed on board my barge. One was Midshipman Aisquith, of Baltimore, and one a seaman. Inclusive of several others during the engagement we lost in that attack on board the different barges about nine killed and about sixteen wounded, some of whom died afterwards.

At Bladenshurg.

"At Bladensburg I was ordered by Commodore Barney to ride to the field of battle from the Navy Yard at Washington and take charge of the seamen nttached to his flagship, the Scorpion, and also the seamen attached to my barge. When we met the enemy about one and a half miles from Bladensburg, our seasmen attached to the flotilla included my command.

"Commodore Barney ordered our forces to be flanked abreast of his cannon to the right of the old brick yard. When the enemy were advancing on us, our army was then in full flight rapidly moving toward Washington. Our fire immediately commenced on the enemy, both from the long 18-pounders under the immediate command of Commodore Barney and the different detachments belonging to Commodore Barney's flotilla, and commanded by his officers of the same grade as myself, one of whom, named Warner, was killed at one of the large guns; also two petty officers and several seamen. Our seamen, who acted as infantry, including those under my command, fought most nobly, which they continued to do until our ammunition became expended and most of us were nearly surrounded. When it was necessary to replenish the ammunition, we discovered those in charge of the ammunition wagons had run off with the contents. That being the fact, it then became necessary to make our escape, and in so doing in double-quick time, I passed near where Commodore Barney's guns had been taken possession of by the enemy. Commodore Barney had been wounded in the thigh and he at that moment, was being supported by a British officer and one of the commanders of the flotilla, Captain Hamlin. I think, as well as my memory will serve, we had in all killed upward of thirty-five and as many wounded, some of whom died at the Lazaretto, in Baltimore.

Narrowly Escaped Death.

"I had during that engagement my horse shot through the head and my hat shot through the crown, which I lost, not taking time to pick it up. After that memorable battle all had to retreat, ns the most of the nrmy did, to Montgomery Court House. I will remark that on my retreat with the number of about fifty seamen I had collected together, and passing the capitol, I found directly in front of it four 18-pounders mounted. I ran down to the Navy Yard and there found eight horses belonging to some wagons and already harnessed. These horses I took possession of. I had with me a petty officer named John Frazier, now a resident of Baltimore. I hitched the horses to the field pieces and went on. Passing in front of the President's house, I found a brass 6-pounder mounted and abandoned. I attached that to the others and continued on, and that night about 11 o'clock halted about three miles from Georgetown.

"Early next morning, as we passed near Taneytown, one of the 18-pounders broke down, which I then had spiked and left it on the road; the other two I took on to Montgomery Court House. The following morning I found all the horses had been stolen by our militiamen. I then had to march on to Baltimore with as many seamen as I could collect.

Took Short Rest

"That night about 12 o'clock we arrived at Ellicott's Mills, where we laid ourselves down on the porch until daylight, when we again took up the line of march and breakfasted in Light street, at Mr. John H. Barney's hotel, the old Fountain Inn. I then reported myself at the Lazaretto to Dr. Solomon Rutter, next in command to Commodore Barney, of the flotilla, as soon as the British were known to be approaching Baltimore. Dr. Rutter appointed me, by the request of General Smith, to take charge of the six-gun battery with seventy-five men, where I was engaged."

This is followed by a note of August 10, 1853.

. . . "On the 10th of September, 1814, I was detailed by First Lieutenant Rutter, of the flotilla, with seventy-five men, to take charge of the six-gun battery situated on the ferry branch between Fort McHenry and Fort Covington. During the general between this and the 14th, my officers, my men and myself were employed in preparing the battery in as secure a manner as circumstances would permit of. I had two master mates or midshipmen, one named Edwards and the other named Andrews. The battery was open and exposed, except a breastwork of dirt thrown up about four feet high, a magazine in the rear about sixty feet off, composed of a hole dug in the side of a hill as security for the ammunition. When the bomb vessels hove in sight off Fort McHenry, much anxiety and interset was manifested, all hoping to share in the fully expected conflict. Day and night we were on the alert, anxiously expecting an attack until hopes were nearly extinct.

Bombardment Renewed.

"On the night of the 13th, about 11 P. M., the bomb vessels appeared to renew their fire at least double, it being dark and raining quite fast and cold for the season. The rapid discharge of bombs from the enemy's shipping created much anxiety and vigilance among my officers and men. I had the cannon doubly loaded with 18-pound balls and graps shot. I took a blanket and laid down on the breastwork, being much exhausted. About 12 midnight, I could distinctly hear a splashing in the water; the attention of all hands was aroused; we were sure it was the sound of barges and their oars. Very soon after we could discern a small glimmering light at different places. I was sure it must be the matches on board the barges, which at that time did not appear to be more than from two to three hundred yards off. Some of the lights were above me next to Fort Covington. As rapidly as possible, I mounted the cannon with my breast over the aprons of the guns and examined the priming as it was then raining fast. All being right, I trained the guns to suit my own views before firing. When I opened on them my fire caused the boats to cease rowing. A rapid fire followed from the barges as well as ourselves. I could distinctly hear the balls from our guns strike the boats. My men stated to me they could hear the shrieking of the men.

Fort Opens Fire.

"Soon after I commenced, Fort Covington opened on them, although they had not got quite up to it. During the firing of the enemy I could distinctly see the barges of the enemy by the explosion of the cannon, which was a great guide to me to fire with more precision than I could otherwise have done. The enemy had a large schooner with them, which they had propelled up by sweeps. This had an 18-pounder on board and should have done much execution, but not a man was injured by the enemy. They fired mostly too high and in the bank in front of my cannon.

"Soon after the commencement of firing I dispatched Midshipmnn Andrews to Lieutenant Budd at the circular battery for my men I had loaned him the day previous. To my great annoyance and disadvantage neither midshipmen nor men were returned. The officer passed on to the town and made report that I had abandoned the battery and the enemy had landed. The following morning Lieutenant Budd informed me he had detained my men to work his cannon in case of my retreat. That night's work I had to perform with much energy when I had my right shoulder broken by a hand spike and subsequently broken over, which rendered me a perfect invalid.

Laid Out Seaman.

"During the fight I had an obstinate Englishman as a seaman who attempted to lay a train of powder to the magazine. Without thought, I laid him out for dead with a hand spike. He, however, came to and crawled off before the fight ended. He and Andrews were ever after among the missing.

"On the retreat of the barges, which was about four o'clock of the fourteenth in the morning, there were rockets fired from them and immediately after large fires were made in front of our army and in the different points of the Patapsco Rives. As the barges passed Fort McHenry, on the opposite shore as they retreated, the fort opened a fire on them. During the forenoon of the fifteenth we were occupied in cleaning up and preparing for any further emergency and interested in digging out of the hill in the rear as well as the front of my battery upwards of twenty 18-pound shots, with which I loaded all my cannon, having a wish to return the enemy their own coin, as well as their own property. I have many times regretted I did not preserve the balls they were so polite to send me.

"I remained at the battery about ten days, after which I was taken down seriously ill with bilious fever, as well as the suffering with my shoulder, and confined to the bed and house until Christmas following. Some of the officers and men were discharged from the navy with three months' extra pay for the clothing burned and lost in the barges near Pig Point on the approach of the British Army on the day previous to the battle of Blandensburg.

"Now, my dear Sir, I give you all the particulars as near as I can recollect them, all of which are facts, hoping you may glean something that may satisfy your wishes and views to the full extent. I have nothing of my publications that I can lay my hands on, having placed on file in Washington many documents to strengthen my claims as Navel Officer, and when General Taylor came in power, and now when I want them, I find they have been mislaid at the Treasury Office, and but few of these documents I have taken copies of. You will find in a publication called The Olive Branch, by Mathew Carey, some interesting accounts. Also you will find in that volume my wound mentioned.

Spiked Capital Cannon.

"I will remark that the cannon I took from the front of the Capitol at the time of the retreat of the army were four 18-pounders. Two of them I spiked with rat-tail files, the other two I took off, as stated in my first letter to you.

"I will also remark that when I was sent from the Lazaretto to take charge of the six-gun battery there were but three days' provisions or rations issued for us. The consequence was my officers and men were two days after the battle without rations and had no alternative but to broach on a garden directly alongside the battery, consisting of corn, cabbage, etc., belonging to Mr. Prestman, and his widow has during the last winter called on me to aid her in securing remuneration. The unwelcome articles we had to live on after the battle caused the death of several of our number, as well as my severe spell of sickness.

TWENTY-TWO LICENSES WERE ISSUED THIS WEEK

A Good Start for November Made With 14 Licenses Issued

A good start for the month of November was made during the past few days, fourteen marriage licenses having been issued since the last of October, at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit court. One hundred ten licenses will have to be granted to break last November's record of 109. In 1924 November had 126 permits granted.

A total of 22 licenses were granted during the past week ending Monday afternoon, six of these being given out on Saturday. For the month of October, just past, 115 licenses were granted, 28 less than for the same month last year. Two licenses issued this week were marked "don't publish;" three were refused licenses and one permit was withheld awaiting parents' consent.

Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles

THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in.

Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free Inspection Service at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A checking-up by experienced mechanics, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

If you watch your expense you will find that motor maintenance costs are cut when you use this oilier oil— for it holds its body stays put and resists friction like no other

"Standard" saves A. B. & W. Rapid Transit 50% of its shop costs

The A. B. & W. Rapid Transit, operating with its subsidiaries, 30 big motor buses and 19 Yellow cabs in and about Washington, D. C., has used other oils for years. About 16 months ago a change was made to "Standard" Motor Oil. At the end of the first 6 months, Mr. R. L. May, proprietor, stated his records showed "Standard" had reduced maintenance and repair costs exactly one-half. "The record also showed," says Mr. May, "that our buses are now averaging 83 miles per quart of oil while our gasoline mileage averages 6.1 miles per gallon. We consider this most satisfactory. My only regret is that we did not decide to use 'Standard' several years ago."

"STANDARD" MOTOR OIL

"Standard" Greases, Transmission Oil and Gear Compound are made with the same care as "Standard" motor fuels and motor oils.

STANDARD

How much do you spend for gasoline? How much for tires? When did your battery last have water? The "Standard" Motor Record will tell you. Ask your "Standard" Service Station or dealer for a free copy.

WE HAVE ELECTED A PRESIDENT!

(Cumberland Daily News)

Herbert Hoover was elected President of the United States yesterday in such decisive manner that it leaves no doubt that he is "The People's Choice." Nominated by the Republican party without a dissenting voice, held in high esteem by Republicans and Democrats alike, The Daily News forecast when he came here last week and when we greeted him in these columns as "The next President of the United States," was not amiss.

But the particular point is that Hoover was elected. The country will now settle down to business as never before—under Hoover. His election re-establishes that business confidence which has maintained the prosperity of the country under Coolidge and which, we most firmly assert, will continue under President Hoover.

A man of vast experience in the executive field of Big Business, with eight years of cabinet service—and this latter did more to lay the foundation for the political career of Herbert Hoover than was done in his romantically successful business performance, or by the enduring fame of his war exploits.

We have elected a President of the United States—the orphaned Iowa farmer boy who rose before 1914 to lead perhaps the greatest single combination of mine engineering and mine management by outstanding professional skill which soon attached internation imp rtance to his personality.

An early story about Hoover comes from Portland, Ore., a real estate man there who employed him in early life, being quoted as saying:

"Bert Hoover was a darn good office boy."

It was back in 1888 when Hoover got this job as office boy. And the man who gave "Bert" his start in life, says this of him:

B. S. Cook, Portland real estate man: "Bert was the best office boy any firm ever had. He never fussed around and he stayed home nights and he knew where everything was in the office. And he knew, too, just when anybody would want anything in the office. Yes, Bert was a smart lad—and how he could talk when he got started. . . Bert was always industrious and I was among those who recommended Bert Hoover for his first employment as a mining engineer. He went to Australia with an English company. I think he got $6,500 a year, an awful lot of money in those days. They say at Stanford University, from which he graduated and began his career as a mining engineer, that Bert was the highest paid of any student just stepping out of the University."

Merely a phase of the career of the newly elected President of the United States, but rather remarkable.

Herbert Hoover, elected President of the United States, will be President of the whole people. The strife is over—the scars of battle will quickly heal—the American people are good sports, to put it that way, and the elected President of the United States IS President of all the people and esteemed and regarded as such by ALL the people.

The nomination of Herbert Hoover made the result foreseen. There never was a doubt as to his election, only as to the majority he would carry to success. This does not mean that his opponent, Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, did not wage a good fight. He did—he was a remarkably energetic campaigner, undouhtedly the strongest nominee the Democrats had at their command.

The fight Smith waged—and lost—was that of a man of great combative ability. He represented his party in the campaign field in a manner that may give comfort to the Democrats because of the fact that Gov. Smith started out to win—fought to win—and that he did not win calls for a sportsmanlike recognition from all quarters. It was the Governor of a great State, backed by his party, versus a great man practically invincible, on his record.

And so, we have elected Herbert Hoover President of the United States. We—all the people, may rest easy and assured that th egovernment of the country is in good hands. We can "quiet down" now, forget our excitement and wrangling—remembering that we are all one people—all friends and neighbors,—and that Thanksgiving is in the offing with Christmas following.

We have elected Herbert Hoover President and we feel like singing that good old hymn:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Miss Snow's talk was given in the High school auditorium and was listened to by more than two hundred students, the faculty and members of the Civic club. The ladies of the club were entertained after the meeting at the home of Mrs. A. D. Naylor. The club has been invited to hold its next meeting, November 27, at the home of Miss Lottie Loar.

A fair representation of officers, teachers and membbers of various Sunday schools in the county were present at the annual convention of the Garrett County Sunday School Association held on Saturday, November 3, at Crellin, who attended the three sessions that day.

The morning session was opened by Dr. Robert Davies, president of the State Council. Two other addresses were made. Col. Joseph H. Cudlipp spoke about the objectives of religious education and Miss Martin, of Baltimore, gave methods of conducting a Sunday school.

Addresses in the afternoon were given over entirely to the problems of religious education. A separate conference was conducted by Dr. Davies on standard teacher training schools and on vacation Bible schools.

The evening session was devoted to reports from Rev. E. E. Campbell, Rev. C. A. Shilke and Rev. Arthur Scrogum concerning the World's Sunday School Convention.

Rev. Campbell was reelected president of the association. Others named by the nominating committee were E. Ray Jones, vice-president and chairman of finance; Coral McRobie, secretary; Rev. Shilke, secretary of religious education; Rev. W. B. Brock, assistant; Mr. Lohr, adult department seretary; Miss Esperance Ashby, young people's secretary; Mrs. Benj. H. 2. That we express our thanks to the people of Crellin and those of the church in which we are assembled, for the hospitality shown us in the use of their church and the entertainment so graciously and bountifully provided for us in their homes;

3. That we hereby express to our State officers our appreciation of their presence in our conference and the help which they have given us and pledge to them our hearty co-operation in the program they have outlined;

4. That we express our appreciation for the untiring efforts of our President, Rev. Campbell, during the past year and hereby pledge him our encouragement and loyal support during the coming year;

5. That we give sincere thanks to the individuals who, by their pledges of financial support have enabled us to meet in full our pledge to the State organization.

6. That we ask the co-operation of the various localities of our county in the establishing of standard training classes and also in the establishing of vacation Bible schools during the summer.

The convention closed with a camp fire service arranged by the young people's division.

Prizes Awarded in Potato Club Competition.

William Friend was awarded first place in the Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club competition from among a group of ten Oakland boys who earlier in the season had taken the responsibility of raising a half acre of potatoes each in return for seed furnished by the railway company. A prize of $4 and a ribbon was presented in connection with the Father and Son banquet last Friday night.

William Friend, the winner at a cost of 37 cents per bushel, had a yield of 135 bushels to the half acre. Spiker's half acre yielded 110 bushels at a cost of 48 cents per bushel. ### Driver Averts Accident

Ralph Dotson, driver of one of the Monongahela Transport Company's busses, narrowly everted a serious accident Tuesday afternoon, October 23, when the bus he was driving stalled on the railroad tracks at Caddell. A freight train hit the bus, scraping one side of it and tearing away one of the fender and bumper. Several passengers were on the vehicle when the accident occurred and considerable excitement ensued, although no one was injured.

Dotson was driving the bus which arrives in Oakland about two o'clock and was descending the hill at Caddell when a lady arose in her seat. Dotson, thinking she wanted to alight at the railroad crossing, stopped the bus and then the woman decided she wanted to go on for a short distance further.

There was no train in sight, according to the passengers. The motor of the bus stalled just as it reached the track and a freight train rounded a sharp curve. With quick presence of mind the driver swung the bus to one side and the engine went by, striking the vehicle sufficiently to tear off a fender and a bumper.

Meshack Browning's Book Donated to Washington Library

A copy of Meshack Browning's book, "Forty-four Years of the Life of a Hunter," has been purchased by the Oakland Civic Club and has been sent as a gift to the library of General Federation of Women's Clubs headquarters in Washington, D. C.

The Washington library is made up of gift books from every club in the Federation. The Browning book has just been published in its third edition, the first edition having been published seventy years ago.

The record of early days in Garrett county is worthy of a place beside the exploits of Davy Crockett, Daniel Boone and other American frontiersmen and pathfinders. It is difficult to realize the conditions existing less than a hundred years ago. The Browning records the story of hunting big game in the mountains of this county wherein the hunter killed during his experience more than two thousand deer, four hundreds bear, fifty panthers or mountain lions and scores of wolves.

In searching for a copy of this book is was learned that it is now more in demand than ever before.

Between Two Loves

By DUFORD JENNE

(Copyright.)

"RUTH, I don't believe it!" Gladys said quickly, startled and shocked by her friend's words.

"But it's true Gladys, and I thought I ought to tell you. If Elmore doesn't love you enough to take care of your mother, I don't think he is worthy of you; for we all know of the love between you and your mother. Yes, I was in the office, and Elmore was chatting with Blake; and I heard him say distinctly: 'I don't know what to do with Gladys' mother.' And the fact that you have been engaged for three years shows something, too. He has been making a fair salary right along—what is he doing with it?"

After Ruth had gone Gladys sat alone in her room and pondered the situation, and as she thought her mood darkened. Something was wrong. It had been a long engagement, and when, out of her longing to have Elmore with her, she had suggested in indirect ways that she wished they could have a home together, he had evaded her suggestion.

"Not even Elmore is dearer to me than you, mother dear, and between you and him, I can make a quick choice," Gladys thought to herself. "But I don't—I don't want to give him up!" her heart told her.

The rest of the afternoon the problem raced back and forth in her mind. It seemed so logical, the explanation of Elmore's action on the basis of what Ruth had heard. Yet Gladys had never dreamed that Elmore had ever thought of separating them. They had been so happy together over the many years.

"If mother knew that such a thing as this was happening it would break her heart," Gladys warned herself, "and I must not let a hint of it reach her. I will talk with Elmore, though."

That evening when her fair-haired, smiling lover held her in his arms just before leaving after his visit, she ventured to touch upon the subject that was troubling her.

"Dear, is there any reason—any real reason why we can't have a home together now? I hate to ask you this way," she said gently, "but I want you to be frank with me."

His gray eyes grew suddenly sober, and his manner changed. "In good time, sweetheart, in good time. It's the waiting that bothers, I know, but we'll work it out. Now, you leave it to me."

She stood in the doorway long after he had vanished into the fragrant dusk. He was keeping something from her, and the swift change in him when she sought to find out the real reason for the delay—that was significant also. There could be just one reason—he did not want her mother in their home.

Troubled in mind and in heart, she did not know what to do. But by the end of the next day she had reached her decision; and, alone in her room, she wrote Elmore a brief note telling him what she had heard and informing him that she could not bear to think of leaving her mother or living apart from her after their long years of companionship. Then, after effort, she added the sentence that broke the engagement between them.

As she slipped down the stairs, her mother came into the hall.

Gladys, Elmore telephoned that he was coming over," her mother said smiling, her gentle, motherly face brightened with pleasure.

Gladys stopped short. "Mother, please tell him not to come. I really don't want to see him."

"Why, child, is—is there something wrong?" her mother asked with sudden concern.

"Nothing, much, mother mine. Just 'phone him," Gladys said hastily, slipping out. "I'm going to the mail box."

When she returned she slide into her room, her heart too full to risk even meeting her mother. As she sat beside the window she heard Elmore's voice and her mother's in the garden.

"She is worried, my boy, over something," her mother's sweet voice was saying.

"I don't blame her. I guess we might as well let her into the secret. The house is about finished, anyway—your rooms are O. K., and Gladys and I can get along. How'd you like the rooms?" Elmore's cheery voice asked.

"Oh, so much. It will seem like heaven to be with you and Gladys—"

"And we will be sure glad to have you! What a family we will make!" he broke in gaily. "Now I'll hunt up Gladys. She ought to have come by this time."

Gladys was athrill with her discovery. She knew now. He had been building a house for them. Her mother was in the secret; and it was to be a surprise. But when he came in and gathered her in his arms she made him tell the story over again; and then she asked: "But didn't you tell Blake that you didn't know what to do with mother?"

"Ah! I see—I see what put the shadows in your brown eyes, Honey," he said, slowly. "Listen. Blake is a house designer, and I said something like that to him, because I wasn't sure how to give your mother some privacy and yet have her one of us; but Blake told me. You see?"

Gladys nodded his blonde head down to hers and kissed him. "Oh, my dear—I do—I do!" And with the words that came from the depths of her heart the shadows of doubt vanished. Instead of choosing between two loves she could keep both.

HEALTH BOARD WARNS AGAINST RABBIT FEVER

Advises Handlers to be on Guard Against Infected Animals

With the rabbit season opening in a few days, Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health, advises handlers and hunters to be on guard against sick or infected animals, carriers of the disease known as "tularemia" or "rabbit fever." The disease is also known in some parts of the country as "deer fly fever."

Three cases of rabbit fever were reported to the State Department of Health during the first six months of this year, one each from Washington, Talbot and Kent counties, and four from Baltimore City. There were probably others, Dr. Riley said, that were not recognized as "tularemia."

"Tularemia," Dr. Riley said, 'gets its name from Tulare county, in California, where it was first studied in 1910 by Dr. G. W. McCoy, of the U. S. Public Health Service in connection with an investigation of a plague-like outbreak among ground squirrels. In 1919, Dr. Edward Francis, also of the U. S. Public Health Serive, and his assistants, while investigating an outbreak of "deer fly fever" among the residents of certain sections of Utah, found the disease that was affecting human-kind to be identical with the outbreaks previously investigated among squirrels.

"Incidentally, while engaged in the study, Dr. Francis became infected and contracted the disease himself. He recovered and has continued his studies of the disease in various sections of the country. His discovery of the sources of the disease and the methods of transmission have won recognition for him as the outstanding authority on the subject. At the recent meeting of the American Medical Association in Minneapolis he was awarded the gold medal annually conferred for the most important contribution of the year to medical science.

The animals susceptible to tularemia include in addition to wild rabbits, hares and squirrels, rats, field mice, the chipmunk, opossum, woodchuck and others of the smaller animals. The infection spreads from animal to animal and is carried from animals to human beings in three ways—by the bite of ticks with which these animals are frequently infested; by the bite of certain species of fly and by direct infection from diseased animals. The majority of the cases that have been investigated have been traced directly to the handling of infected animals by hunters or in dressing infected rabbits for the market or for the table. Of twenty-two cases that occurred in the City of Washington, the records of the U. S. Public Health Service show that 17 of the patients had dressed wild rabbits bought or sold in the market; 4 had dressed rabbits shot nearby, and one had dressed a rabbit killed with a club.

"The disease in human being is accompanied by a typhoid-like fever of two or three weeks duration with great prostration and slow convalescence. Usually an ulcer develops at the site of infection, accompanied by enlargement of the lymph glands which drain the ulcer. The diagnosis may be confirmed by a blood test. Should suspected cases be found in the counties of Maryland, the laboratory of the State Department of Health is prepared to make the necessary tests and will do so at the request of the local or deputy State health officer or the family physician.

"First discovered in California in 1910, the disease has since that date been reported in 39 States and also in Japan. In this country, New York, Delaware, the New England States, Washington State and Wisconsin, are the only sections in which it has not been observed. About 500 cases have been reported with 20 deaths. The disease occurs principally among wild rabbits. It has not been found among rabbits raised in rabbitries. Thorough cooking of the meat destroys the disease germs. Thoroughly cooked rabbit is accordingly harmless."

PEACE AND GOOD WILL AMONG MEN

LESSON TEXT—Rom. 12:1, 2, 9-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Treating Each Other Right.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Treating Each Other Right.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Promote Good Will.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Message and Program of World Peace.

I. The Christian's Relation to God (vv. 1, 2).

He is dedicated to God. He consciously presents his entire being to God.

1. The basis of this dedication (v. 1). "The mercies of God." The grand reason for the dedication of ourselves to God is because we are recipients of the mercies of God. The dynamic which makes possible our yielding to God is the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation. Our union with Christ makes us willing and able to give ourselves to God.

2. The nature of the dedication (v. 1).

(1) An act of the free will. Those who voluntarily present themselves to God, He consecrates to His service. (2) It embraces the whole man (v. 1). By "bodies" is meant the entire personality—spirit, soul and body (1 Thess. 5:23). (3) It is a living sacrifice (v. 1). In the Old Testament the victim was slain before being placed upon the altar, but in our case God wants our bodies as living instruments of service. (4) It is for rational service (v. 1). The logical outcome of our union with Christ is an intelligent service for Him.

3. The obligation of the one dedicated to the Lord (v. 2). It is nonconformity to this world. The one who has handed himself over to the Lord will not be fashioned by this evil age (I John 5:19).

II. The Christian's Relation to His Fellow-Believer (vv. 9-13).

1. Love without hypocrisy (v. 9). We should not pretend to love people while hating them in our hearts. Feigned love is disguised hate.

2. Abhor the evil and cleave to the good (v. 9). God's children must be like Him. God hates wickedness of all sorts, so His children will have the same attitude toward sin that He has.

3. Be kindly affectioned one to another (v. 10). Real brotherly love is that which passes between those who are of one blood—members of the same family. In Christ we are really members one of the other.

4. In honor preferring one another (v. 10). This is most difficult. It is natural to claim the best places for ourselves. Christ pleased not Himself.

5. Not slothful in business (v. 11). This refers primarily to spiritual affairs—to the church life which is to be characterized by zeal, energy and warmth, being regarded as service to the Lord.

6. Rejoicing in hope (v. 12). Afflictions will surely come to the Christian, but in all trials he should be filled with hope of future glory.

7. Patient in tribulation (v. 12). This blessed hope will make possible a life of patience.

8. Continuing in prayer (v. 12). Only by constant and persistent prayer shall we be able to live above our circumstances and fix our hope upon Him whose coming shall bring deliverance from all our trials and transform us into His glorious likeness.

9. Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality (v. 13). It is obligatory on Christians to aid fellow Christians who are destitute.

III. The Christian's Relation to Unbelievers (vv. 14-21).

1. Do good for evil (v. 14). We are to bless those who persecute us.

2. Be sympathetic (v. 15). We should rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep. This was pre-eminently fulfilled in Christ while on earth, and in heaven now He enters into our joys and sorrows as our sympathetic High Priest.

3. Find points of agreement (v. 16). We should seek for points of agreement in all things.

4. Live honestly before all men (v. 17). Our manner of life should be that which will commend the grace of God in Christ.

5. Live in peace (v. 18). We should exhaust every means to bring about reconciliation. If the other party will not yield we should see to it that it is not our fault.

6. Be not vindictive (vv. 19-21).

Instead of demanding eye for eye and tooth for tooth, we should heap coals of fire upon our enemies by deeds of kindness.

Jesus at the Door

If Jesus Christ is at this time knocking at the door of your heart, the fact is that He is on the outside. And if He is on the outside, there is but one person who can let Him in, and that is yourself.—O. B.

Live Right

While you live right, nothing goes wrong; a soul at peace with God cannot be greatly disturbed by the world, for it hath its pleasures in God and its blessings from God.—Jackson.

DR. J. H. MASON KNOX REPORTS ON TRIP ABROAD

Represents A. R. C. and A. C. H. In Intrnational Congress for Protection of Infancy

Health activities for mothers and children in countries of northern Europe, are described by Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, Jr., chief of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene, in a recent report to the State Board of Health, in connection with a report of the proceedings of the International Congress for the Protection of Infancy, held in Paris in July, which Dr. Knox attended as a representative of the American Red Cross and the American Child Health Association.

Commenting on some of the outstanding developments in public health in France, since the World War, Dr. Knox said "One of the most noticeable changes was in the increase in public health nurses. During the war, this activity was almost unknown. Now, there are 1500 full-time public health nurses, the majority of whom have had training based upon that given in our country. Another noticeable advance was in the increase in full-time health service. Of the 89 Departments in France, 52 now have full-time health officers. The government has also undertaken numerous child health projects and has made appropriations to many private agencies, such as maternity homes, day nurseries, vacation colonies and preventoria, in latter for the benefit of children threatened with tuberculosis.

"There is a growing interest in open air schools, for both under-weight and for normal children and schools of this sort are spreading rapidly throughout Europe. Reports presented at the Congress showed that children were in better health, learned more rapidly and lost fewer days from illness when attending schools of this sort.

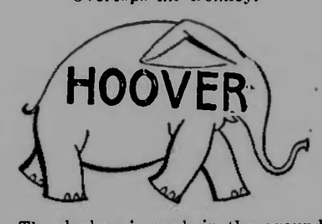
"Going on to Holland, we visited the child health stations provided by the city, in Amsterdam. Each station is conducted by a physician, several nurses, a midwife and a social worker. Cases requiring treatment are referred either to the family physician, or, if unable to pay, to the city health department. Instruction in personal hygiene and the prevention of disease forms an important part of the plan and this educational work is largely responsible for the high standard of health noticeable among the children.

"In Denmark we found that so-called breastfeeding stations have been maintained in Copenhagen for twenty years. They receive only the infants who are wholly or in part breast fed. These babies are brought back at frequent intervals, are weighed and examined and the mothers instructed. Each mother is given an allowance of milk daily for her own use, as long as she complies with the rules. Bottle fed babies are not received.

"In 1925 a comprehensive law, called the Child Welfare Act, was passed for the purpose of providing, on a nation-wide scale, for the needs of children. Under this law, every parish in Denmark constitutes a child welfare district. There is a child welfare council in each district which is responsible for the care of dependent or abused children in that section, many of whom are cared for in supervised foster homes. A large proportion of Denmark's population belongs to insurance societies with sick benefits. These include care before, during and after childbirth.

"Sweden is divided into about 2,000 sanitary districts. In each of these is a children's committee on which the local physician, minister, school teacher and some selected citizen serve. The local physician, usually a part-time health officer, is the acting head. The child health of the community and the supervision of dependent and problem children are under the charge of this committee.

"Sweden has given special attention to the control of infectious diseases. The infectious disease hospital in Stockholm is a model of its kind. I was told that everyone in Sweden with an infectious disease was expected to go to a hospital. The government is partly supporting 7,000 beds in the hospitals in the larger cities and rural districts, practically one bed for every thousand people.



"Norway has a similar system of sanitary districts with a sanitary council presided over by a medical officer, usually a practitioner appointed by the state. This officer has charge of all public health activities, including the control of epidemics, medical assistance to those unable to pay for it, care of the insane, etc. For care in childbirth the country is divided into a thousand districts, each with its official midwife.

"In general, the public willingly supports the sanitary administration. In 1926, out of a total appropriation by the state of approximately $218,000,000 for all purposes, nearly one-thirtieth of the whole sum, or about $7,000,000 was given to the department of health."

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

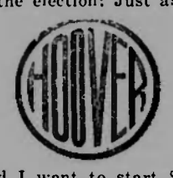
By Scoop

Overtops the Donkey.



The donkey is sunk in the ground; hence the Col. couldn't get his photo. But who cares about that now?

A Certainty.

Mr. Burt Wilson, of this county, had the following to say on Saturday concerning the election: Just as soon as is elected I want to start South for the winter, so please change my address on The Republican.

The height of Col. Bell's photographic work was reached Tuesday night when he caught a picture of the Democratic parade which filed down Second street about ten o'clock. It was a flashlight picture and every modern method of photography was brought into play to make it a success.

The Fade-out.

The "X" marks the spot where Bill Browning slunk down a side street for Kerins Garage where he could hear the consolation speech of Smith over the radio.

It is only justice to say that Harvey Gortner, Jefferson Ralston, Jerry Stanton, Harvey Andrew Loraditch, and the Kerins boys left the parade before it turned into the main street. And don't let us forget A. G. Moon. What Col. Bell snapped was the remainder of the procession as it celebrated the election of Hoover as president of the United States.

Well anyway, they certainly dry cleaned Smith with a Hoover on Tuesday.

Thomas and Mauser, socialists; Foster and Gitlow, workers; and Reynolds and Crowley, labor candidates, picked up a few votes here and there.

Governor Alfred E. Smith also ran.

Since the election is over, it is not Herbert Hoover, the Republican, but Herbert Hoover, president of the United States (this includes both Republicans and Democrats.)

For The Sheriff.

Since Sheriff Casteel has become a golf enthusiast he has kept the stores in Oakland busy ordering golf balls for his use. Therefore, the Colonel had a picture taken of one, enlarged it to twice its normal size and presented it to the Sheriff after he had lost two dozen in one day at the Deer Park links. This present is calculated to save Bill some 189 minutes each day which would otherwise be taken up in searching for the lost ones, for every time hecameto . aL time he lost one he had to come to Oakland and secure a search warrant from Justice Gonder.

CHEVROLET

CONSTANT EXPANSION

—to serve Chevrolet owners better

SINCE January 1st more than a million new Chevrolets have been delivered to owners—making the Chevrolet Motor Company, for the second consecutive year, the world's largest builder of automobiles!

This outstanding achievement has been attained not only because of the quality and value of Chevrolet cars—but also because there has been a constant expansion of Chevrolet service facilities.

In order to bring these mammoth facilities of the Chevrolet factories to Chevrolet dealers and owners everywhere, there have been erected 26 huge parts warehouses in the principal centers of distribution. This expansion program is continually going on—for four great additional warehouses will be in operation by January first and seven more by the summer of 1929.

Into the service departments of all Chevrolet dealers, Chevrolet has brought special tools and shop equipment—designed under the supervision of Chevrolet engineers. This equipment definitely assures maximum speed and precision and the lowest possible cost in the performance of every Chevrolet service and repair operation—which are charged for on a flat rate basis.

Furthermore, all of these tremendous facilities have been made available to 15,000 authorized service stations manned by skilled mechanics, over 25,000 of whom have been factory trained to efficiently handle every repair operation on a Chevrolet car. In addition, there are over 4,000 other points where genuine Chevrolet parts may be obtained.

Uniformly efficient, uniformly reliable and within easy reach of everybody everywhere—this great service organization is maintaining at peak efficiency the fine performance for which Chevrolet cars have always been renowned.

We cordially invite you to come in and see how our service facilities reflect the influence of this great national service program.

ANOTHER M'NEILL RANGER ANSWERS FINAL ROLL CALL

William D. Hoye, Formerly of Deer Park, Passes Away at Richmond, Virginia, Home

William D. Hoye, formerly of Deer Park, where he resided for more than thirty-five years, much of which time he occupied the position of Justice of the Peace, died at the R. E. Lee Camp, Soldier's Home, Richmond, Virginia, on October 23. Mr. Hoye had been an inmate of the home for several years. His death resulted after a long illness following a fall in which he sustained a broken hip.

Mr. Hoye was aged 87 years, was never married and was the last of a family of twelve, being a son of the late John and Nancy Hoye, and wa born at Hoyesburg, near Fort Pendleton, on the Northwestern Turnpike, twelve miles southeast of Oakland. He was a grandson of William Hoye, pioneer settler of this county and a lineal descendant of Paul Hoye, representative of the historic Salisbury Land Company, London, England, in the early part of the 18th century. He was also descended from Colonel Wm. Deakens of the staff of Gen. George Washington during the Revolutionary War.

Of his relatives residing in Garrett county at the present time there are comparatively few, among them beeng Mrs. T. C. Hinebaugh and Mrs. A. T. Matthews, of Oakland, and Mrs. W. C. Dunnington, of Mountain Lake Park.

Mr. Hoye, at the outbreak of the Civil War, entered the ranks of the Confederate Army and was attached to McNeill's Rangers. He was with this command at the time Generals Crook and Kelly were captured at Cumberland, Md. His death leaves only two surviving members of that daring band of 48 young Confederates participating in the capture of the two Federal generals. Another member of the band whose death was recently noted was the late John B. Fay, one-time editor and publisher of the Mountain Democrat.

Funeral services for Mr. Hoye were conducted with simple military honors at the chapel of the Soldier.' Home, his comrades in gray being pallbearers. The Rev. E. R. Smith, Episcopal chaplain, assisted by the deceased's cousin, Rev. Joseph H. Balthis, presiding elder of the Washington District, M. E. church, conducted the services.

Relatives and friends residing in Washington, D. C., motored to Richmond and were present at the burial service.

Slides Shown at Pleasant Valley Grange Meeting.

A short but interesting meeting was held at Pleasant Valley Grange on Thursday night, at which time slides on cow testing association work were shown. Music was furnished by Albert Kitzmiller and accompanists.

Tonight a special meeting is being held for all who are or were at one time members there. There will be no grange work, but will spend the time in a get-together meeting. A program is also being arranged for the next regular meeting on November 15, and it is urged that all members attend.

OUTRANKS FICTION.

Even when measured by age-old standards and confined to age-old emotions, life holds about as much romance as it ever did.

Where in the pages of history can one find a more curious or more sensational experience than that of the young woman who claims to be the Grand Duchess Anastasia and who is about to bring suit for the fortune of the late Czar Nicholas?

True or false, here is a tale that outranks the most preposterous fiction. If Anastasia is not Anastasia we have an impostor that puts Perkin Warbec and the Tichborne case to shame. If she is Anastasia we have an escape more remarkable than that of Louis XVII.

This young woman was not only marked for death with her father, her mother and the rest of the royal family at Ekaterenberg but was left for dead with them. Thanks to the miscarriage of a bullet, she survived the firing squad, was saved by an ex-soldier whom she later married, only to become a widow a short while afterward, wandered to Berlin, where she was fished out of a canal after trying to commit suicide, to be identified by uncles, cousins and other relatives as she recovered in a hospital. Now she is in America, where so many refugees have found a chance to breathe in safety and to recover their lost rights.

HORRIBLE EXAMPLE

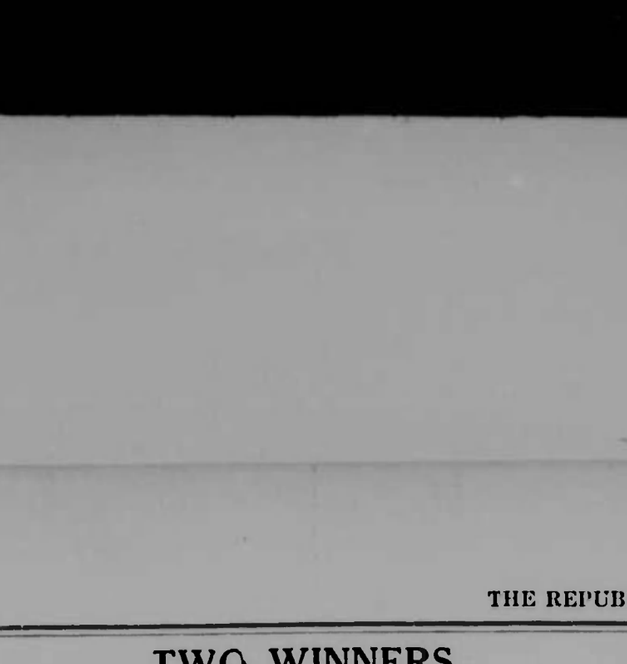
When Loeb and Leopold, collegians who foully slew young Franks, a schoolboy, were in 1924 given a prison term, a record was set for miscarriage of justice.

Their excuse was in part that the deed was a scientific one, a venture in experimental psychology.

The District Attorney, during the trial, asked some alienists whether the slaying was the herald of more scientific killings.

Science was dumb on that point but the answer has been furnished from Oglethorpe University, Georgia, where a couple of students bored by gratification of every whim have also been murdering for the sake of the thrill.

Shall we chalk up the crime as a black mark against higher education or merely blame it on the vagaries of human nature?



Not pausing to argue that point, why did not some psychological sharp discover what was going on in the minds of these two youths?

We shall hear a great deal about their mental condition from now on.

It occurs that had not Loeb and Leopold, the Illinoisans, so easily escaped condign punishment Harsh and Gallogly, the Georgians, would not now be in the toils.

SECOND VOCATIONAL FAIR HELD AT GRANTSVILLE

Exhibits at High School Unusually Fine in Agricultural and Home Economics Departments

The second vocational fair of the agriculture and home economics department of the Grantsville High school, held on Thursday afternoon and evening, under the direction of Miss Eva Falkenstein and Emerson Bishoff, instructors, was a splendid success.

The vocational demonstrations in agriculture and home economics were given during the evening by the girls and boys at the various booths, which were attractively decorated.

A very entertaining program was given including songs by the glee club, two short plays, "Hiram's Hired Hand," by the Sophomore agriculture class, and "Bachelor's Dilema" by the Junior and Senior home economics class; songs, "Kitchen Mechanics," by three boys; "Oh, McDonald Had a Farm," Dorothy Edwards and Clyde Miller.

The judges were: Mrs. H. P. Miller, Mrs. J. U. Stanton, Mrs. Hayward Broadwater, in the home economics; County Agent J. L. McGlone, H. P. Miller and Wm. Winterberg in agriculture.

In the home economics room the exhibit of canned fruits, vegetables, jellies, candy and cakes, was neatly displayed, and the art needle work, done by members of all the classes, could not be excelled. The combination of colors and quality of material used were excellent. The health and food posters which decorated the room added much to the attractive display.

The agriculture exhibits were displayed in the agriculture room. The corn, grain, vegetables, poultry and shop work exhibited by the boys was of the finest quality and was admired by all. The interest shown by the pupils has increased since last year and the display of exhibits shows marked improvement.

SCHEDULE FOR POULTRY SCHOOLS IS ANNOUNCED

W. H. Rice, Specialist, To Give a Series of Lectures.

A schedule for poultry schools, to be conducted by W. H. Rice, poultry specialist, University of Maryland, in four high schools of Garrett county, has been announced by J. L. McGlone, county, agent, for November 19-21.

These schools or lectures will cover the subjects of housing, feeding, management and the breeding of poultry, and will be open to anyone interested in the subject of poultry. The schools will be under the direction of the agriculture instructors in the various high schools and will be held in the school auditoriums or assembly rooms. It is requested by County Agent McGlone that at least fifteen students in each school be enrolled in the course.

The schedule is as follows:

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS OBSERVE ARMISTICE DAY

Soccer Team Ties Kitzmiller High Friday—Other School News

Students of the Oakland high school observed Armistice Day by attending the Armistice Day celebration held in the Maryland Theatre Monday afternoon.

Booters Tie Kitzmiller.

The Oakland high soccer team ended its season last Friday at the Fair grounds, Oakland, by tieing Kitzmiller, champions of the county, 2-2. This has no bearing on the lead which Kitzmiller had established over all its rivals earlier in the season. Oakland ended the season with three games lost, two games tied and one game won.

The volley ball team ended the season suffering a defeat, but playing its best game of the year.

Chemistry Room Improved.

The chemistry room has been greatly improved by the installation of necessary new equipment.

Oakland high school opened this year with an enrollment of 307 students. This number exceeds the enrollment of last year. Ten years ago the school building was erected to accommodate 150 pupils. The auditorium and even the book office are now used for study halls, hence with twice the number of students intended to be accommodated, conditions are congested to a large extent.

Both boys and girls of the school are planning on having basketball teams the coming season and with a little cooperation from the people of the community they should do well. A county league for boys, composed of teams from Friendsville and Oakland, has been formed and they will meet four times.

The O. H. S. boys' soccer team journeyed to Morgantown, W. Va., last Saturday and witnessed the West Virginia-Oklahoma Aggies contest on the football field, which the former won 32-6. The boys, accompanied by Foster Speicher, coach, and Arthur Humberson, made the trip in Gortner's bus and were the guests of the West Virginia Athletic department during the afternoon.

Library Fund Grows $30 Having Been Donated This Week

The sum of thirty dollars was added to the increasing fund of the Oakland Free Public Library during the present week, bringing the total for the present to $140.50. The Oakland Rotary Club donated $25 and Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, $5.

"It is indeed gratifying," J. M. Jarboe, treasurer, said, "when both people and organizations come to the rescue so nobly. It shows a wonderful public spirit for the betterment of the community."

Anyone having a donation will receive due credit and heartfelt thanks from Mr. Jarboe or one of the members of the committee. Expenses of maintenance of the library go on all the time, hence money is required to meet these charges, so give!

COUNTY RED CROSS DRIVE OPENED ON ARMISTICE DAY

Canvass For Members Will Be Made Throughout County—Mrs. J. F. Fahey Is Chairman

The twelfth annual Red Cross Roll Call for the nation and for Garrett county began on November 11 and will continue until Thanksgiving Day, November 29.

One hundred per cent enrollment is the aim of the Red Cross workers of this county. Mrs. Joseph Fahey, of Grantsville, is chairman, and local chairmen have been appointed in each community in order that the work may be carried on to its fullest extent.

In Garrett county the Roll Call is being put on by a house-to-house canvass by the various district chairmen. A membership card, a membership button and a window flag will be given to everyone for the minimum sum of $1.

If an official worker does not call at the home the membership card can be obtained from the following persons: Rev. C. A. Shilke, Oakland; Miss Nina B. Peck, Accident; Mrs. J. W. McCullough, Friendsville; Mrs. Carolyn Wilson, Kitzmiller; Mrs. J. F. Fahey, Grantsville.

"Red Cross explains itself," Mrs. Fahey said, "and it is unnecessary to enumerate again in detail the many demands made upon our most splendid organization during the past year. Do you know that Herbert Hoover is president of the American Red Cross? Garrett county went 'over the top' with Herbert Hoover at the election polls. Let us again work together and 'go over the top' with this great humanitarian organization. Join the Red Cross a hundred percent today."

Machine Guns and Other War Material Being Exhibited

Machine guns and other war material, including captured trophies of the World War, have been on exhibition in a vacant room of the Nally building on Alder street during the present week. The exhibit is owned by the local post of the American Legion, having been shipped to Oakland from the Raritan Arsenal about ten days ago. The exhibit consists in part of a Colt machine gun and tripod and a Lewis machine gun and tripod, both of which pieces are American arms; one French Hotchkiss machine gun and tripod, one body armor, one plain bayonet, two buckles with "Gott mit uns" cast upon them, one infantry canteen, one medical canteen, one howitzer cartridge, 150 mm.; one German machine gun maxim, 1 Uhlan helmet, 1 ornamental eagle, 4 German rifles (two of them Mannluker and two Mauser), one saber, one cartridge box, one grenade throw, 1 cartridge case 210 mm.; one shell 170 mm.

All except the first three machine gune were used by the Germans in the war and were captured from them by members of the A. E. F.

Maryland Tuberculosis Association Clinic.

A clinic for diseases of the chest will be conducted in Doctor Nedrow's office, Friendsville, Wednesday, Nov. 21, at 10:30 o'clock.

Individuals complaining of any of the following: Cough, expectoration of blood (spitting), tired feeling, loss of weight and appetite, indigestion, hoarseness, etc., should see their family physicians and obtain permission to attend clinic at the place announced above.

FIRST GRADE TEACHERS IN THIS COUNTY NUMBER 153

An Increase of 22 Over Last Year Shown in Report of F. E. Rathbun to State Superintendent

An increase of first-grade certificated teachers in Garrett county over last year was reported to the State Superintendent of Schools at Baltimore by County Superintendent F. E. Rathbun recently, and shows that at this time there are 153 as compared with 131 for the same period last year.

Corresponding with the increase of 22 first-grade certificated teachers was the decrease of second and third grade teachers. The number of those holding third grade certificates decreased from 16 to 3 and second graders from 17 to 4.

The Board of Education has been making a determined effort to raise the standard of the teaching force in this county since January, 1922, when the State's educational program called for competent, well trained teachers in hearty accord with American ideals, in every public school position in Maryland so that there may be an equal opportunity for all children in the State.

The requirements for an elementary first grade teacher's certificate was given by Mr. Rathbun as four years of high school work with graduation, and two years of normal school work with graduation or the equivalent. This is given as the reason for the great increase that has been made within the past few years of those attending the normal schools. In 1922 there were only eighteen first grade certificated teachers in Garrett county.

Due to consolidation of schools, the establishment of bus lines, etc., there was a slight decrease noted in the number of teachers in the county over last year. This year there are 198 teachers as compared with 200 for last year. This includes high school as well as elementary teachers. The high school teachers have increased in number due to increased enrollment and the establishment of a new high school at Kempton.

Mr. Rathbun said that it was his wish that in the future every teacher in the county would have a first grade certificate so that the high aim of the State educational program might be carreid out—that of giving every child in the State an equal opportunity to learn.

Addresses Feature Meeting of Pleasant Valley Grangers.

Addresses by Walter Dawson, Chas. Ream, Rev. C. A. Shilke and D. M. Lower featured the meeting of the Pleasant Valley Grange last Thursday night at the Grange Hall. Seventy persons were present upon the occasion.

Mr. Dawson told the members of the organization the importance of the grange and their apparent interest in it; Rev. Shilke spoke on the situation in agricultural lines and the importance of the Grange and Mr. Ream also said a few words that tended to hearten the farmers in their work. Mr. D. M. Lower, master of Pomona Grange, stated that the next Pomona meeting would be held at Sunnyside, December 6.

As the losers of a wager made several years ago, the men of the grange were responsible for the refreshments and according to O. T. Graser, who was chairman of the meeting, they certainly furnished a sumptuous repast. The grange meets again tonight.

SINCLAIR OIL COMPANY WILL BUILD PLANT HERE

Distributing Station to be Erected on Outskirts of Oakland.

Permission was granted the Sinclair Oil Company to erect a distributing plant in Oakland at a special meeting of the Mayor and Town Council held last night at the Town Hall, according to Mayor Fraley.

The permit was granted at the request of Mr. Von Specken, field representative of the company, who was in Oakland one day last week seeking a site for the proposed plant. It will be erected, according to present plans, near the railroad siding at the old pumping station on the east edge of town, and work will be started by the first of the year.

From this plant distribution will be made to dealers in quite a large territory in this section of the country.

1,012 NIMRODS PREPARED FOR SEASON OF HUNTING

Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Licenses Issued to County Residents—Many More Expected

One thousand and twelve hunting licenses for residents and non-residents of the county have been issued from the offices of the clerk of the circuit court, according to E. Z. Tower, who has been busy since the latter part of October in writing the permits.

On Monday at noon there had been 997 resident licenses, 14 non-resident and one State-wide permit issued to ambitious nimrods. The majority of these permits have been issued within the past ten or fifteen days, and since the opening of the rabbit season on Saturday, many more are expected to apply. The prices for licenses are as follows: county, $1.25; non-resident, $15.50; state-wide, $5.25.

Hag Limit Given

The bag limit for hunters is as follows: wild ducks, 25 per day; geese, 8 per day; rabbit or hare, six; squirrel, ten; English or Mongolian pheasant and ruffed grouse, two, and not over six per season. It is unlawful to hunt wild turkey in this county until November 10, 1930, and there is also a closed season on deer.

Necessary to Get License

It is necessary for all who intend to do any hunting to procure a license, Mr. Tower said. Section 14 of the game laws of Maryland states that it shall be unlawful for any person to hunt any birds or animals, which are protected by law, without first procuring a license (except landowners and tenants and their children may hunt on property owned or tenanted by them without a license).

Twenty-four Students are Using Swanton-Oakland Bus

Twenty-four students are taking advantage of the accommodations afforded by the new school bus operated between Oakland and Swanton, and which was inaugurated by the County Board of Education on October 15. The establishment of the bus line was made following the receipt of a petition from a number of citizens of that community at the office of the Board of Education.

Parents or guardians who are taking advantage of the opportunity of sending their children to the Oakland high school by bus include Albert Baker, Milfred Glass, H. A. Schmidt, G. William Friend, Mrs. Elizabeth Filsinger, Mr. Charles Brown, Mrs. E. E. Sollars, Mrs. D. R. Hinebaugh, R. L. Sebold, Alonzo Warnick, D. T. O'Brien, B. Wagner, Jerry Sweitzer, R. D. Wright, Robert Thrasher, G. F Comp, Wm. E. Fitzwater, Charles Pysell, George G. Lee, Herman Landis and Levi Glotfelty. After leaving Swanton the bus passes through Deer Park at which place some of those above named reside.

The bus will be operated every day of the school year and is in line with the board's program of furnishing transportation at low cost to the pupils from the Swanton and Deer Park communities and will be continued indefinitely, Mr. Rathbun said.

Mr. Joseph D. Ashby, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Garrett county, spent the past few days with relatives and friends in Oakland and his home community. For nearly a quarter of a century Mr. Ashby was manager of the National Publishing Company in Washington and recently purchased a large going printing concern in that city which he is now successfully operating.

ARMISTICE DAY SPEAKER MAKES PLEA FOR PEACE

Can Be Had Only Trough Education of Growing Generation, Delbert Davis Tells Audience

A plea for world peace was the keynote of the Armistice Day address, given Monday afternoon in the Maryland Theatre, by Delbert Davis, cashier of the First National Bank, Oakland. Ten years after the signing of the Armistice this fact seems to be forcing itself on the peoples of the world more and more and the question now in the minds of all nations is how to make world-wide peace effective, Mr. Davis stated.

"The only solution which is at all practical," the speaker, said, "is first to feel that peace is wanted and then educate the younger generations to that same idea."

That Mr. Davis impressed his audience with the earnestness of his plea could be readily told by the undivided attention he received during the address, and the very hearty applause at its close.

The Maryland Theatre was packed to hear the address and the dedication of the howitzer placed on the Court House lawn by the American Legion in recent weeks.

Hon. William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, who was to deliver the address, was detained at Keyser's Ridge when his automobile broke down and therefore he could not be present for any of the exercises in connection with the celebration. The program continued, however, with Mr. Davis as the principal speaker.

The Oakland Boys' Band played several patriotic airs in which the audience joined in singing. Miss Karin Stenholm, former instructor in the Oakland high school, sang "Dear Old Pal of Mine."

Special Service in St. Paul's Church.

The Men's Bible class of St. Paul's M. E. church conducted a special Armistice Day service in the church on Sunday evening. The building was filled to overflowing and all listened to Mr. Delbert Davis, who delivered an excellent address on the prospects of world peace.

A male choir sang "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," and led the singing of patriotic airs throughout the service. Walter Dawson read the poem, "Bivouac of the Dead."

At the close of the service, when the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" were heard and sung, the American flag, rippling in the breeze of an electrically made wind, arose to view back of the pulpit.

The sum of approximately $40 was cleared by the American Legion by the showing of the picture "We Americans" at the Maryland Theatre Monday afternoon and evening. An added attraction at the evening show was a vocal solo by Reeves Blandford. He was accompanied by Julius Littman at the piano and Russell Brown, trumpet.

Brotherhood Has Open Forum

An open forum discussion on the advances made for a world peace was the feature of the meeting of the Lutheran Brotherhood Tuesday night at St. Mark's Lutheran church. The discussion was led by Rev. C. A. Shilke, pastor of the church.

Guy O. Yutzy was re-elected president of the Brotherhood; Chas. Reckard, vice-president; George Hanst, secretary, and Alva Gortner, treasurer; Wade H. Hinebaugh and Wm. Gibson, musical directors. Mr. Hinebaugh was also elected a member of the executive committee.

More than thirty members were present to hear the discussions and help devour the refreshments consisting of ginger bread and cider, which concluded the evening's program.

The following committee will arrange for the Christmas meeting: Bert Welch, Floyd Stahl, Wm. Gibson, Daniel Orendorf, Charles Reckard and T. C. Bittinger.

In Jail On Paternity Charge

G. Paul Jones, until recently in the employ of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company, at its office in Oakland, is lodged in the County jail until the December term of Court on a paternity charge preferred by Edith Lewis.

Jones was arrested during the month of August and was given a hearing before E. I. West, justice of the peace, at that time, and would have been committed to jail had not a local merchant given bond. This bond was withdrawn a few days ago and he was taken into custody.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS CONTINUOUS SERVICE IS BOAST OF IMMIGRANT GIRL; PARTY GIVEN IN HER HONOR

Although Seldom Seen on the Street She Is Very Well Known Hy The Residents of Oakland

On the coldest winter day, if you chance to see her, she will be bareheaded, coatless and her sleeves rolled to her elbows. But if you are the least bit slow, you won't even see her as she hurries from her task that calls her to the street to the harder work in the shop which she had left just a few moments before.

It was that way twenty years ago; it is the same today. Never having much to say, yet, when she does say something nine times out of ten you have a laugh coming.

Twenty-five years of continuous service is the record which Karolina Ilenrich, better known to Oakland folk as "Cotalina," now holds. Twenty-five years ago on Tuesday, November 13, Karolina landed in Baltimore from Wurttenberg, Germany; was met in that city by Henry Lauer, her employer, and upon arrival in Oakland that same day she started to work in the Oakland Model Bakery.

Mr. Lauer gave a dinner and party in her honor at his home Tuesday evening at which members of his immediate family were present, and to say that Karolina was happy would be putting it all too mildly. She was all smiles and showed her appreciation in a modest manner by executing what would be called in Scotland the "Highland Fling."

She expects to raise her present record of service to twice twenty-five years.

Ten Years After-The Final Drive

A CORRESPONDENT'S RETROSPECT

by

NEWTON C. PARKE

(Used by permission of the Baltimore Sunday Sun.)

Ten years ago today quiet settled over the greatest battle front the world has ever known and peoples everywhere rejoiced at the coming of peace.

Attacking without cessation for nearly two months along a great curving front that stretched from the English Channel to Lorraine, Allied forces under command of Marshal Foch at last had brought the Germans to their knees. The Kaiser had abdicated and fled. Ludendorff had resigned and fled and war-weary Germany was in the first stages of revolution.

Belgians, British, French and Americans had linked arms in the final, irresistible advance. Each country takes just pride in the role its army played in the closing days of the World War, but Americans must certainly be pardoned if, in the light of what happened in the Meuse-Argonne and of post-war German admissions, they believe that, to put it conservatively, it was the powerful thrust of the green troops from the United States that halted the war before winter.

Through the thick Argonne forest, over ground that for centuries of European warfare had baffled well-trained armies, the Americans had been slowly fighting their way since September 26. Their advance was against the pivot of the whole German front from the North Sea to Switzerland, a threat to the vital enemy line of communications that ran through Sedan. The Germans reacted accordingly. Further north they could give ground to Belgians, British and French, but here they must hold at any cost if their beaten armies were to escape intact from France and Belgium.

So into the furnace of the Meuse-Argonne they poured their best divisions, seasoned veterans, the Prussian Guardsmen who fought bravely and tenaciously until, in the early days of November a crushing blow crumpled their front. Armistice morning found American doughboys looking down upon Sedan from the heights at the outskirts of the city—the goal of this greatest battle in which American troops were ever engaged at last achieved.

In that final thrust to Sedan that began at 5:30 on the morning of November 1 there occurred incidents that probably to this day are not generally known outside army circles. A feat that for sheer audacity ranks with any accomplished on the western front during the whole war was the march by the Ninth American Infantry at night through a woods full of Germans to a position four miles behind the enemy's lines.

In the pell-mell rush to Sedan, when the last German positions had been stormed, a veteran American division, the First, suddenly appeared as from nowhere, rushed across the front of an entire army corps already advancing on Sedan, upset the progress of the movement and threw units into confusion—a mix-up or misunderstanding of orders that to this day never has been satisfactorily explained and will be the subject of debate at American Legion conventions forty years from now.

An American brigadier-general, now Maj.-Gen. Douglas MacArthur, until recently in command of the Third Corps Area, with headquarters in Baltimore, hurrying up with his troops, was arrested as a German spy by the military police of the veteran First division because his officer's cap had been in too many rains, had lost its stiffening and made him look, so the military police explained, "like a queer guy."

The Argonne drive, it may be recalled, had opened on September 26, with, on the whole, splendid results for the first few days. But by October 1 it had slowed down to a walk. The Germans were defending their positions desperately. Some of our inexperienced troops were finding great difficulty in mastering strongly fortified trench systems. The lack of good roads and the weather were other factors.

Throughout October the Americans had kept battering away in limited offensives and local actions, taking this wood here and that village there. It was dreadful business with heavy casualties, but it had to be done. The Germans finally were driven from Grand Pre to the Aire river, where they had long held up the advance of our left. The Kremhilde Stellung trench system, probably as strongly fortified as any on the whole western front, was penetrated and passed. The Bois des Loges, which never received a hundredth part of the publicity that attached to Belleau Wood, finally was taken after fighting that overshadowed the marine combats at Belleau.

Now at last victory seemed to be in sight. The Americans, almost all along the Meuse-Argonne front, were occupying fine jump-off positions for a sweep over the last series of ridges between them and Sedan. In front of them was but one more fortified trench system, the Freya Stellung, which could not compare in strength with others that had been overcome. There were still woods from which the enemy could offer strong resistance, but there were high hopes on every side on the night of October 31 that Germans would indeed be on the run within twenty-four hours.

Seven divisions leaped off on the morning of the first on a front extending from the Aire river, on the west, to the Meuse, on the east. The attack was preceded and accompanied by the most terrific bombardment of the whole Argonne offensive. German positions in the woods were drenched with mustard gas. Their front lines were pounded and when the Americans crawled out of their fox holes to start the attack they followed a dense rolling barrage.

The morning was frightfully cold and foggy. Overhead our planes were seeking to add to the confusion along the enemy front by dropping bombs and machine gunning, but for the first few hours they had difficulty spotting their targets.

Of the seven divisions in line five were National Army or drafted men. They were, moving from left to right, the Seventy-eighth, Seventy-seventh, Eightieth, Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth. To the right of the Ninetieth was the Fifth Regular Army division. In the center and between the Eightieth and Eighty-ninth was the famous Second division of infantry and marines, the spearhead of the attack.

Orders had been given that the advance should be pressed with all possible speed. The Germans were to be given no time to rest or reform their lines. And that is about what happened.

Except on the extreme left the attack was highly successful on the opening day. It was necessary for the Germans to hold there if their retreat was not to be a disastrous rout, and hold they did. There may have been some evidences further north, where British and French were swinging in against the enemy, that German morale was low and seeds of revolution already sprouting, but here in the Argonne they were still battling tenaciously.

The Seventy-seventh and Seventy-eighth divisions on the left had made but little progress during the day, and as Gen. Joseph T. Dickman, who commanded the First Corps on the left confessed, "the situation was disappointing and there was gloom at our headquarters." But when the battle was resumed in the morning these divisions (constituting with the Eightieth, the First Corps) were in full stride, swinging through Buzancy just as the report came that the Kaiser had abdicated.

There was a day back early in October when correspondents pored over maps at Bar-le-duc that Buzancy was an important name. The western edge of the highest of the ridges the American Army must surmount on its way to Sedan and victory rested there. "When we get to Buzancy," staff officers used to say. But now we were at Buzancy and passing it scarcely with a thought of its importance.

So rapid had the German retreat become that our weary infantry in many places couldn't keep up. Motor cycles were ordered in pursuit as an advance guard for motor trucks filled with parties of doughboys in chase ot the Germans. As one may suspect, this produced many thrilling encounters where trucks ran by wooded positions still full of Germans, then became aware of that fact and either had to stand ground and make a fight of it or wheel in the road under hot fire and make a quick retreat.

Roads were congested. frequent rains during November 2 and the night of November 2-3 made them worse and the German artillery, in spite of the retreat, halted long enough after dark to plaster the American front.

There had been no checking the Fifth Corps (on the right of the First) with the Second and Eighty-ninth divisions. The Eighty-ninth were Kansas, Missouri, South Dakota and Nebraska men who had been trained at Camp Funston, Kansas, by Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood and looked man for man taller and broader than any other outfit in the American Army.

Commanding the Fifth Corps was Maj.-Gen. Charles P. Summerall, now chief of staff of the United States Army. "Per Schedule" Summerall they called him because he had the habit of advancing as per schedule. On the first day his corps stepped right out through the woods and up gullies for an advance of nearly six miles through machine-gun infested positions until the Barricourt Heights were in their hands before nightfall. It was the rapidity of the advance made on the opening day by the Second and Eighty-ninth divisions that forced the Germans to relinquish their hold on Buzancy Heights, just to the west, the following morning to escape being trapped in retreat.

The Third Corps, on the extreme right, commanded by Gen. John J. Hines, had but a short advance to make and made it without trouble. With the Texas and Oklahoma troops of the Ninetieth division and the Fifth Regular Army division they simply wheeled eastward against the Meuse river, driving the Germans from one dominant crest and making ready to cross to the east bank of the river at Brieulles.

Meanwhile, cooperating with the Americans, a French army that included in its ranks two American divisions, the Seventy-ninth from Camp Meade and the Twenty-sixth from New England, was sweeping the Germans out of strongholds east of the Meuse, the Seventy-ninth pushing slowly up the slopes of Hill 378, or the Borne de Cornouiller, which it was to take a few days later. Dominating the country for miles, this rounded ridge was the keystone of the German defense system on that side of the river.

The situation was now growing so serious from the German point of view that reserves were thrown into line against the Americans on the third day of the offensive. To the north the enemy was falling back, too, under steady hammering by Belgians, French and British, but despite this fact he had to summon troops from this front to try to stop the American tide. Their appearance did make some impression, but in general our advance continued to roll on.

On the night of November 3 was executed one of the most amazing and at the same time most successful performances of the war. An infantry regiment of the Second division, the Ninth, with a brilliant record at Chateau Thierry and elsewhere, actually marched up a narrow road under cover of darkness with Germans in the wood to the left and right of them and at daybreak of November 4 were occupying a position four miles in the enemy's rear!

This was the open warfare that General Pershing had sought ever since his arrival in France but in the general confusion of the pursuit the story never reached the newspaper public at the time. For that matter, it was long after the armistice that Sergeant Yorks' heroism ever became generally known. "Covering" a fast moving advance is no cinch, as any newspaper correspondent will concede.

The Second division, at the close of the day's fighting on November 3, reached its objective which was the southern edge of Belval Wood. Seven miles away, through the wood, was Beaumont Ridge. Once that position was occupied the Second could swing along to Sedan almost as easily as if it were marching down Fifth Avenue. But Belval Wood was thick with Germans who might hold up not only the Second division but the Fifth Corps and the whole progress of the American advance.

The Second had tried a little adventure in the darkness the night before and had come out on top, pinching off two German positions in a surprise attack. The commander of the Ninth, Colonel Van Horn, sized up the situation before nightfall and decided to risk it. Some officers and soldiers who spoke German were summoned to head the column and gobble up any German outposts along the road. The rest of the regiment was to follow in column of squads.

The mach started just after darkness fell. It was a black night and that helped as the men slid along the narrow muddy trail. A mile up in the woods they encountered a German encampment. Some hundred or more sleeping Germans were made prisoners. A little farther along they ran into a machine-gun position the Germans had set up the afternoon before. The machine gunners were awake and opened fire. There was a brief skirmish and the march continued, leaving some dead Germans beside the road.

The Tuilerie farm was the objeetive of the silent marchers. It was reached at midnight. A German beer-drinking party was in progress. The Ninth surrounded the old stone buildings and took a big party of astonished Germans prisoners. Then they sent back word by runners and before morning other infantry and marine units of the Second and a battery of field artillery came up the road to support them.

There was still danger for the men at Tuilerie farm when day dawned and, with Germans on both sides, they prepared to defend themselves against the expected attack. But it never came. The Eightieth and Eighty-ninth divisions, on the right and left of the Second attacked energetically at dawn. A bewildered enemy, falling back, suddenly found an American force in its very center, blocking its retreat up the road that led to Beaumont Ridge. In other days the Germans might have stood their ground and made things decidedly uncomfortable for the party at Tuilerie farm, but today they gave up the ghost and by nightfall the Second was triumphantly in undisputed possession of the heights of Beaumont.

The backbone of the German defense was now broken, though the retreat, for the most part, was quite orderly, more orderly perhaps than the advance of the Americans, whose forward rush at some points brought confusion that might have resulted seriously had the enemy been in any shape to counter attack. It was an odd sort of advance with artillery at some points crowding close upon the heels of the infantry.

Brig.-Gen. W. C. Neville, of the marines, pushed on ahead with an aide into what passed as a village, consisting of an inn and a couple of houses that had just been hastily evacuated by the Germans, so hastily in fact that they had left some food behind. The general had only recently received from the United States his marine greatcoat, for the weather was getting mighty cold in the Argonne. He dropped it on a bench and with his aide entered the inn to make short work of the food the Germans had abandoned.

Along came an inteligence sergeant of one of the American units, regimental or brigade, it cannot be recaled at the moment. Now a marine greatcoat with a brigadier-general's insignia on the sleeve is not only a sight worth seeing but it was at that time almost an unknown thing in France. The inteligence sergeant gazed in wonderment. General Ludendorff at least must have just left the spot, fleeing so hastily that he left his overcoat. So the sergeant opened his jackknife with trembling fingers, hacked off that whole sleeve with the gorgeous insignia and hustled back to divisional intelligence for report.

Divisional intelligence, so the story goes, was just as much at sea. The sleeve, so some say, traveled clear back through corps to army headquarters before it was properly identified. General Neville? Oh, no, he could never see the joke, though he was famuos as a wit and story-teller thruout the Marine Corps and the whole army.

The advance pushed on throughout November 4 and 5, swinging toward Sedan. Now there began to come complaints from the French on our left that the Americans were encroaching on their territory. Along with this the report ran around that the honor of taking Sedan was to be surrendered to the French, because it was there that, in the war of 1870, had come their great disaster.

But on the night of November 5 the two American corps commanders, Dickman and Summerall, received messages from First Army Headquarters, signed by the Chief of Staff, declaring that the commander in chief "desires that the honor of entering Sedan should fall to the First American Army."

"He has every confidence," the message continued, "that the troops of the First Corps (Dickman's), assisted on their right by the Fifth Corps (Summerall's) will enable him to realize his desire."

So on November 6 the Americans continued to push on toward Sedan while French murmurs grew louder as our troops continued to cross into zones originally assigned to the French, outstepping our Allies in the last lapse of the race.

It was on the night of the 6th, however, that began the famous march of the First division, which had just gone into line in the Fifth Corps. General Pershing's orders to the American Army to capture Sedan were transmitted to the First Division by their corps commander, General Summerall, and without further ado they set out in the darkness and rain to carry out instructions. Swinging directly across the front of General Dickman's corps on the left, they interrupted lines of supply, became intermingled with the troops of other units and created general havoc, while telephone lines buzzed with protests and requests for information as to what it was all about.

The French, who at first had been only severely annoyed, now became exceedingly angry. The Twenty-sixth Infantry, under command of Lieut.-Col. Theodore Roosevelt, not only spread over ground the French expected to cross in their advance but was heading into territory where they expected to lay down a bombardment. The commander of the French Fortieth Division added to a polite protest to the Americans the statement that he expected to fire his artillery according to previous plans. In other words, it was our lookout if any Americans were around when French shells began dropping.

Things were now getting too warm. The Fifth Corps and the First Division were ordered to fall back completely out of the advance zone. The Forty-second Division, hanging on the heights of Sedan, was stopped in its tracks. The word came down from headquarters that the French, after all, would occupy Sedan, and they did.

In the six days since the first American Army had set out on the final dash for Sedan it had broken German resistance and advanced twenty-five miles. Our artillery, playing over the railway line leading south and east from Sedan through Carignan and Montmedy, at last had cut the railway to Metz. For the first time since the beginning of the war rail communication between the group of German armies in the north and those in the south had been interrupted. The Allies were now in position to deal separately with them.

Even before the outskirts of Sedan were reached another great American offensive, which might have outshone the Meuse-Argonne in brilliancy, was under way. The Second American Army had been formed in October under command of Maj.-Gen. Robert Lee Bullard and was striking across the Woevre plain to conquer the Briery iron basin and encircle the fortress of Metz.

Now divisions in the First Army which had advanced in the Sedan offensive on November 1 were joining in this great operation. The Third Corps had wheeled across the Meuse river early in November and was busy cleaning the Germans out of the heights they had held for so many years, with the aid of French troops on their right. The Fifth Division of this corps, after encountering stiff resistance for two days, crossed the river at Dun-sur-Meuse on the morning of November 9 on rafts, canvas boats and even by swimming. And let it be remembered that the Meuse was pretty cold swimming in November.

The next day the Third Corps was extending its successes east of the Meuse, while the Germans were appealing for an immediate armistice, and it continued to step out in the general direction of the Moselle Valley, coordinating its attack with that of the Second Army, advancing northward toward Metz.

It now appeared certain that the war was about to end, but Marshal Foch was urging the Allied forces on everywhere, distrustful of the German overtures for peace and determined to give the enemy no chance to rally his disorganized forces. Consequently, the Fifth Corps, with the famous Second and the Eighty-ninth Divisions, which had done magnificent work in the advance on Sadan, was pressed into action and on the night of November 10 forced other crossings of the Meuse but a few miles southeast of Sedan itself.

For the morning of November 11 still another great offensive against the harassed Germans was to begin. The French, with Americans cooperating on their left, were to strike southeast of Metz. A formidable force of a half a million men was to be launched against the weakest part of the whole German front. Cavalry was ready to follow up the pursuit which it was hoped would scatter the enemy forces and send them in flight clear back to the Rhine.

This last great attack, of course, never came off. On the chill, frosty morning of November 11 came word from Marshal Foch that the armistice had been signed, that the Allied forces everywhere on the Western front were to cease firing at 11 A. M. and were to advance no further beyond the positions they held at that hour.

Virtually on the whole of the American front the guns fired their last shots at 10:55. Some advanced units of the Fifth Corps, however, could not be reached in time with news of the armistice and one regiment of the Second Division is said to have been banging away at the Germans across the Meuse until nearly noon.

Far to the north, where British and Belgians and two American divisions had been pushing a rapid advance, the armistice found the Germans with their backs to the wall of the great Ardennes forest. The French had done their share, too, carrying their line up to Mezieres, and in the general rejoicing over the arrival of peace the little controversy with the Americans near Sedan had been forgotten. To bury the hatchet French officers invited groups of American officers in adjoining units to dinner on Armistice night.

At the hour of 11, odd-shaped German helmets pushed up cautiously from fox-holes and shallow trenches opposite the American lines. Steel-helmeted Yanks stood upright and took a look at their foes. Orders had gone out against fraternizing with the enemy and along the front of the First Army they were generally obeyed. One reason, perhaps, for this was that on the last night of the war, with the certainty that peace could not be many hours away, the German artillery had become suddenly active, disturbing sweet doughboy dreams, and the doughboys still had some feelings about that.

It appeared that on the front of the Second Army, at least at spots, conditions were otherwise. Perhaps officers interpreted the orders more leniently; at any rate, first-line troops on the opposing sides not only crowded out into No Man's Land for friendly talks but swapped cigarettes and souvenirs.

Much has been written about the Armistice Day scenes in the great cities of the world, the ticker-tape showers in New York, the delirious throngs that marched in the Paris streets. Armistice Day and night in the towns and villages of the belt reaching clear across France, immediately behind the front, seem to have been neglected.

Here were tiny villages and cities the size of Nancy, with a population of more than 100,000 souls, where the civilian populace had learned to look with dread upon the arrival of clear, moonlight nights that brought over German bombers. Thousands of little children, infants in arms at the beginning of the war, but now toddling, had never seen a lighted street or shop window at night because lights attracted enemy planes.

To walk their streets on the night of November 11, 1918, was sufficient to know that the war really had come to an end.

Dedication at Fredericksburg Called Inspiration to Nation

Virginia's great place in American history is emphasized in comments on the dedication of the Fredericksburg and Spottsylvania Battlefields Memorial and the address there by President Coolidge.

"The President contributed one of the most graceful and scholarly of his state papers," says the Newark Evening News, which adds that "his tribute to the men of Virginian birth, from Washington to Wilson, and to their deeds and work stints nothing in fair treatment. Mr. Coolidge accords her full merit," continues the News, "to the Mother of Presidents and all for which she stands, nor leaves out even the concession that those who fought in gray upon the fields he was dedicating as a national park were as right, as it was given them to see the right, as those who opposed them in blue."

"Congress last year was awakened," recalls the Buffalo Evening News, "to a very proper appreciation of the fact that an extraordinary amount of national history is concentrated in Spottsylvania county, Va. Here were scenes of both Revolutionary and Civil war activities of the most important character. An appropriation was granted to create a national park in which these historic sites might be preserved and duly marked, and to build a memorial at the Fredericksburg gateway. The fact that the dedication dates came at the height of a presidential campaign was incidental. Mr. Coolidge made the same kind of speech which he would have delivered if there had not been an election in sight within four years."

"The president's speech was a timely reminder, "suggests the Indianapolis News, "that the country had not forgotten its great debt to the men who fought in the Civil war, and that it can, without boasting, stand in the presence of their graves with a feeling of having done its best to live up to their hopes." The News also comments: "The United States now stands foremost for peace, not by sacrifice of position, but with due regard for the men who fell on the four battlefields which the park will include, by maintaining the defense system on a firm basis, while at the same time cultivating the principle that was is a wasteful method of settling international differences."

Though the president "touched but lightly on the Civil war struggle in that historic section of northern Virginia," according to the New York Herald Tribune, that paper is reminded that "there Lee fought four great defensive battles in which his military genius was most strikingly displayed."

The Herald Tribune continues: "The Civil war belongs to the past. President Coolidge chose to speak of the later triumphs of peace, in which both North and South have shared. The South has recovered from its losses and has entered upon a brilliant era of prosperity and progress, * * * In the president's view we are a united, tranquil, prosperous and progressive people, with a future which no one can measure. We are also a people welded and nationalized in a sense practically beyond the conception of the hundreds of thousands who fought on these northern Virginia battlefields in 1863 and 1864."

"Where 700,000 Americans on both sides stained the earth with their blood," says the Por and Oregon Journal, "the era has been consecrated as hallowed ground. Memorials will be erected by congress. Virginia will raise monuments to the heroic dead. Where the bitter battles were, the children of America will find recreation. There is something so fitting and just about this Civil war memorial park that it wakes an echo in every heart. It is something that shou'd have been done, for it conserves for peace the deeply learned lessons of strife."

Referring to a group of Americans, each of which had contributed a share to the growth of the country and was eulogized by the president, the Cleveland Plain Dealer adds: "Here are nine Virginians responsible for practically the entire area of the continental United States. By war, by statecraft and by exploration they were the greatest territory builders. And this means a great deal. Without her immense area the American republic could not be today the greatest and most powerful nation of the world. * * * It was highly appropriate that on such an occasion attention was called to Virginia's tremendous contribution to American expansion. North and South, uniting to commemorate the terrible battles which brought the Civil war to a close were appropriately reminded of Virginia's greatness."

Mr. Coolidge chose a dramatic setting and an arresting hour," in the judgment of the New York Sun, "to remind us that this land is not the creation of the zeal and labor of one man, one coterie of men, one party; that to men of many differing philosophies in the past and in the present we owe our great and numerous blessings. He set forth this truth of history and contemporaneous record vividly and convincingly; the impressiveness of the background against which his words echoed suitably framed the wholesomeness and dignity of his utterance.

So also the Reno Evening Gazette emphasizes the point that "this dedication is a national occasion, for the questions which were at issue on the battlefields were national and out of their decision grew the ability of the United States 'to serve the cause of humanity in 1898' and to perform her part in the World war."

Col. Bell did something far out of the ordinary last Tuesday night about the time the election was conceded to Hoover. Those flowers that Smith and Raskob threw out over the radio to Hoover along with the announcement that the campaign held no regrets tor them, were taken by the Col. with his wonderful new combined television, radio, movie-tone-flashlight-camera. He caught the gentleman Raskob just as he was about to toss them to the air. It is rumored that the flowers went astray and fell into the office of Dr. Kercheval where they will be preserved indefinitely.

World Peace

During the Armistice program on Monday at the Maryland when Delbert Davis was in the midst of his address on World Peace, who should step into the corridor of the playhouse but "Betty" Dawson and Walt Janoske, demanding the reason for not breaking the bottle over the British Howitzer on the Court house lawn.

It has long been known that Walt was especially anxious to have a finger in the dedication and with his able assistant they almost caused a riot.

Col. Bell, of course, heard of the commotion, and he arived on the active front with his "flashlight" and everything else. He caught "Betty" just after the close of the world peace address and Walt Janoske just as he indignantly went up to the gun to do a little christening on his own account.

THE WORLD AND HOOVER

With the single exception of Woodrow Wilson no American President has ever been the center of such world wide interest as Herbert Hoover will be from the moment he enters the White House.

On Wilson humanity pinned a very definite hope. Broken, bleeding and trampled upon by war, it looked to him and his international peace program to save it from anything like that ever happening to it again.

Today the eyes of all nations are on Hoover. Clothed with greater power than any potentate, and head of what has suddenly become the richest and mightiest of all countries, people everywhere are eagerly, and sometimes anxiously, waiting to see what use he will make of his power.

The battle for world trade is on with all the trouble-breeding possibilities which that may mean. Navies and merchant marines have become problems as vital as the same problems were when Britain and Germany bickered over them prior to 1914. War outlawry, co-operation and conciliation between nations, war debts and reparations, the struggle for control of indispensable raw materials and the open door for commerce—these and other questions are to be answered or interpreted by Herbert Hoover, so his attitude will necessarily mean much not only to the prosperity but to the peace of the world.

Great Britain, naturally enough, manifests a special interest in the American President-elect. Sane thinkers both in Britain and America hold that the salvation of white civilization depends largely on Anglo-American relations. Nevertheless there are those, even in high place, who predict almost certain war between the two countries over foreign trade.

Hoover distinctly does not belong to the latter category. Says the Paris Temps: "He works with figures, so there will be no disagreeable surprises with him in office." In other words, he is too practical a statesman to follow a policy which will lead to destructive international friction.

What is even more important, the world, to Hoover, is made up of people rather than of countries. In this may be found the key to his whole foreign policy. He reduces all things to simple human equation. To him markets are people, not places, and foreign trade expension is to be had by improving the standard of living and purchasing power of the people rather than by war for the domination of either countries or trade routes.

Consider China. Co-operating to put China on her feet and improve the Chinese standard of living would not only net both Britain and America billions of dollars profit annually but China herself and the rest of the world would be infinitely better off in the bargain.

Last year, for instance, we sold China's 400,000,000 people only $109,000,000 worth of goods. We sold just as much in Mexico with only 15,000,000 inhabitants. On a Mexican basis the Chinese would have bought more than $3,000,000,000 worth of our stuff.

Viewed in this humanitarian way, there is no limit to trade expansion for all and without clash. By boosting Chinese still further, until, say, they approximated the Canadian level, our annual sales to China would reach the brain-wrenching total of $35,000,000,000 a year, or more than seven times as much as we now sell to the entire world.

Improve the world and we improve ourselves. That is a Hooverism. Hoover works with facts and figures, and thinks in terms of people, as the European press has keenly observed. Which means that he is less concerned with abstract principles, as the French Journal des Debats puts it, than he is with practical results to every-day folks.

Because Hoover thinks these lines, in our opinion, the signs are better today for constructive, international cooperation, with America taking the lead, than they have been in eight years. Though by a somewhat different route, the Wilson dream of a world peace under American leadership or initiative may yet come true, to the everlasting benefit of mankind.

THE BROKEN SOUTH.

The 1928 election will be memorable in Republican party history for the break-up of the Solid South. The Democratic party since 1916 has suffered three tremendous reverses. In one of these—in 1920—a single Southern State, Tennessee, departed from the ancient Southern tradition and cast its vote for a Republican President. This was explained at the time as an accident due to local dissensions having no relation to the Presidential campaign. Tennessee returned to her allegiance in 1924 and the South apparently regained its solidarity. It remained a one-party section. Its vote was the "ace in the hole" of the Democratic party, pledged and deliverable to any nominee whom a Democratic national convention should choose.

Tennessee's vagary was not repeated in 1924. At Houston last summer it was again taken for granted that the South's electoral votes could be mortgaged to any Democratic Presidential candidate, no matter how much his views, outlook and associations clashed with the fundamental beliefs of the Southern Democracy.

That theory was put unhesitatingly to the extremest test in Tuesday's election. This time the Southern voters had to choose between being loyal to their own convictions or being loyal to a party label. Their decision is one of the most notable in current American politics.

Mr. Hoover's candidacy has split the old South almost exactly in two, says the New York Herald-Tribune. He has carried five of the eleven states—Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Florida, with sixty-two votes. Six states are left for his opponent—South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas, with sixty-four votes. But even in states like Alabama and in Georgia the revolt against the Houston ticket has taken on sensational proportions.

The real significance of the result in the Southern states lies in the fact that the protest was made, to a very great extent, within the Democratic party. It would be idle to imagine that Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Florida have become Republican states, or that they ever intended by their votes on Tuesday to declare themselves Republican. But that is aside from the main point. The people of these five states have shown in an unmistakable manner that they no longer recognize the restrictions put upon their free action in national affairs by their traditional confinement within the Democratic national organization. They have demonstrated that they feel privileged to think for themselves on national questions and to let their ballots go along with their judgment and their conscience.

That is the vital meaning of the Southern revolt against a Democratic candidate for President whose opinions were antagonistic to their all along the line and whose leadership they could not accept without humiliation and stultification.

The Southern voters who turned the states of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Florida against Governor Smith manifested high courage and intellectual independence. They have done a good work for the South and for the future of American politics.

Twenty-three marriage licenses were issued during the week ending Monday at noon from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, according to the records in that office. This number brings the total for the month of November to 38, which is below the number for the same period in the month of November of last year.

The number issued on Saturday of last week was far below the average for that day, no more having been issued on that day than for any other day of the week. It is not unusual for fifteen applicants to present themselves at the Court House on Saturday for licenses.

Five licenses issued were marked "don't publish," and one applicant was refused a license on account of the youthfulness of one of the parties.

YOUTHS ARE RELEASED; EVIDENCE INSUFFICIENT

Grafton Lads, After Ten Days in County Jail, Are Set Free

Ray Kline and Victor Nutter, two youths of Grafton, West Va., who have been held in the County Jail in Oakland during the past ten days suspected of being implicated in the robbery of Warnick's Store at Deer Park, were released from jail yesterday and allowed to return to their homes.

An investigation conducted by the officers of the county revealed that there was not sufficient evidence to hold the two boys on the charge of burglary and Justice W. A. Gonder, before whom the boys had had their hearing, ruled that the ten days they had spent in jail was sufficient punishment for train riding, the technical charge made against them when they were arrested in Oakland.

The two boys were taken from a freight train Friday a week ago when it became known that Warnick's store had been robbed and that the culprits were suspected of being on a west-bound freight train.

The story of the boys that they had been train riding was substantiated by their parents in Grafton and Justice Gonder deemed it unnecessary to hold them any longer.

Boys Rob Store.

A news item in the Cumberland papers during the past week related a story of two boys robbing a store at Romney, W. Va. The alleged robbers were Paul Harding and Harry Nine, both of Cumberland, who were picked up in Oakland Sunday a week ago by Sheriff W. D. Casteel, who, after questioning them, put them on a train bound for Cumberland. The boys, it is said, did not ride the train to Cumberland but left it at Keyser, W. Va., and it is assumed that they reached Romney from that point.

First Basketball Practice To Be Held Tonight.

With prospects of a very successful season, the Oakland A. A. basketball team will begin practice this evening in Naylor's Hall, and all who are interested in making the team are requested to report, the manager said yesterday.

Those who desire to enter the Church League are also requested to organize teams and report them to the manager so that a proper schedule may be arranged.

The first game of the season is being planned for the first of December and with four of the five members of last year's team still available and some new material in sight, it is predicted that Oakland will have a team well above the average.

Last year Oakland A. A. won 15 games and lost 7, five of those lost being played away from home.

WHAT THE A. R. C. HAS ACCOMPLISHED DURING YEAR

Has Fed and Housed Thousands and Aided Other Millions

In Porto Rico the Red Cross has a half million homeless and destitute persons under its care, and in Florida there are 50,000 persons looking to it for assistance as a result of the tropical hurricane which swept out of the Carribean Sea in September and cut a path of destruction over a fifteen-hundred mile course. A relief fund of about $5,500,000 has been raised with which the organization is preventing intense suffering and in many instances actual starvation.

During the organization's fiscal year which closed June 30th it gave assistance following 88 disasters, 66 of which were in this country and 22 abroad.

Its workers in nearly 3,000 chapters in the United States have assisted an average of 40,500 service and ex-service men each month, helping them to settle government claims and procure hospital treatment and seeing that their families did not suffer while these claims were pending. At the same time Red Cross workers in camps and hospitals assisted an average of nearly 16,000 men each month and arranged during the year more than 22,000 recreation and entertainment events.

Carrying on civilian relief activities only where there is no other agency to do it—mostly in small towns and rural sections—the Red Cross has assisted more than 10,000 families during the year.

In communities throughout the United States and in our Insular and Foreign possessions, its 745 Public Health nurses have been fighting disease and suffering and improving the health standards of the nation. They have made more than a million visits to homes during the year to care for the sick and protect the well. 847,000 school children have been inspected and given assistance in having their physical defects corrected.

Nearly 60,000 women and girls have been taught in the organization's Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick classes, how to give home care to the sick in their homes and how to prevent sickness by the proper care of the home and the family.

In their fight against malnutrition, the cause of many physical defects in children and adults, the organization has given nutrition instruction to 128,000 persons of whom 122,000 were children.

With 90,000 persons a year dying as a result of accidents, the American Red Cross is waging a nation-wide campaign to reduce this annual loss of life. In the last twelve months it has instructed more than 150,000 persons in the United States in first aid for the injured, while the number of persons enrolled in its life saving corps after receiving intensive instruction in methods for rescuing and reviving the drowning persons, has reached nearly 174,000. During the year it has also given more than 4,000 lectures and demonstrations for the furtherance of this campaign.

In addition to helping with the administrative and other phases of the work, Red Cross volunteers have during the year, produced more than a quarter of a million garments and two and a quarter surgical dressings for use in disaster relief work and other contingencies. They have also transcribed 1,316 volumes into Braille, a system of raised lettering whereby the blind are enabled to read. Practically all Braille transcribing in this country is done by Red Cross volunteers.

The American Red Cross makes no appeals for funds during the year except following great national disasters in which cases all funds contributed are spent for relief work in the disaster for which the appeal is made. This entire program of service is financed from membership dues obtained during the Roll Call. In addition to this the membership funds finance many relief operations following relatively small disasters in which no special appeal is made.

MT. LAKE PARK.

We are now having our third fall of snow for the present season. Children had a fine time Saturday rolling up large snow balls and building them into castles.

A double wedding occurred at the M. E. parsonage here one day last week when Mr. Paul Friend, son of Mr. and Mrs. McClellan Friend, and Miss Mildred Bowers, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Riley, both of Pleasant Valley, and Harry Enlow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Enlow, and Miss Mattie A. Keller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Keller, of near Hoyes, were joined in wedlock by the Rev. I. S. Middaugh.

Another family numbering four persons has been added to the winter population. They compose the family of L. D. Hardin, of Alliance, Ohio. He has rented the cottage of Mrs. Wiley Falkenstine on E street. This makes a total of 78 winter residents.

Rev. Middaugh attended the M. E. district meeting held at Kingwood, W. Va., on Tuesday.

Armistice Day brought out an earnest expression that war had ceased and that it would soon be banished from all lands.

POSTOFFICE CREEPS INTO LEAD IN BOWLING LEAGUE

Merchants Are In Second Place With Only One Defeat

By reason of the loss of one game Monday night by the Merchants, Postoffice crept into first place in the third annual Bowling League games, its members having taken three straight games from the Presbyterians to earn for themselves the percentage of 1000.

Crellin was victorious last Thursday in taking two out of three games from the Lutherans, while on Monday night the Merchants won two of three from the Knights of Columbus, and the Rotary Club trimmed the Metho-

This score gives the Merchants undisputed possession of second place, with the Postoffice out in front by a small margin. Thursday night the Postoffice team, composed of veterans of last year, will meet Crellin and the Presbyterians will oppose the Lutherans.

William Glotfelty, Rotary Club high scorer last week with 163 for one game, topped his own record with a score of 185. Probably another record was set Monday night when the five members of the Lutheran team rolled a total of 605, each member scoring from 113 up.

BRIGGS' WEEK-END PARTY

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

BRIGGS excelled as a publicity agent—for himself. His particular section of the world was never kept long in ignorance of his wonderful achievements. Briggs was the junior member of the law firm of Adair, Townsend & Briggs, but after listening for five consecutive minutes to Briggs you wondered of what possible use the other two members were, since, according to Briggs himself—surely the best authority—he conducted virtually all the business and won practically all the suits handled by the firm.

But Briggs was still young, and in some particulars not half bad, so his senior partners tolerated his inordinate self-conceit and hoped he would outgrow it.

The office force was not so charitable. "Dead in love with himself and hasn't any rivals," was the picturesque way they were wont to describe Briggs. And after a little while it penetrated even Briggs' rather rhinocerine epidermis that he wasn't rated above par by the pretty stenographer, that the switchboard operator never took the trouble to give him the prompt service she gave his associates, and that even the office boy showed little alacrity in answering his calls. Now men like Briggs can no more live without admiration than a fish can live out of water. He began to wonder how he could purchase a substantial chunk of popularity from his office force, so that they would regard him with the respect and reverence they accorded the other members of the firm.

About that time, most opportunely, it seemed, a spinster aunt of Briggs' died and left him a well-stocked fruit farm. It was the season when fruit was superabundant, and one couldn't sell or even give away the abundant supply produced. Briggs reasoned that here was a rather cheap way to win the hearts or at least the gratitude of his office force, and straightway he electrified them by inviting them one and all to a week-end party at his farm for the next Saturday and Sunday, the boat to leave the dock Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The reaction from the office boy to chief clerk was immediate. The pretty stenographer bestowed on Briggs her sunniest smiles, the switchboard operator gave his calls precedence over everybody else, and the office boy looked at him with a very good imitation of respect. Briggs reveled in his newly acquired popularity as a butterfly basks in the August sunshine.

How he gloated over his partners from that time until Saturday. "Going to get the office family together in a week-end party; that's the way to promote esprit de corps; that's the stunt to increase efficiency. Queer you fellows haven't thought of it before. Just wait and see the results."

The trip across the lake was a pronounced success. The eight young folks who "made the wheels go round" at the offices of Adair, Townsend & Briggs, properly chaperoned by Mrs. Robins, the senior member's private secretary, reached the other side in high spirits. A short bus ride brought them to Briggs' farm, and that gentleman, beaming like a mammoth sunflower, met them and played the host in most approved fashion. If their was anything lacking in the menu nobody felt inclined to criticize, for with a sweep of his arms Briggs called attention to the heavily laden apple, peach, plum and pear trees. "The fare I offer you at the table may be simple, but take your dessert right from the trees, eat all you can, and carry the rest home." Literally they prepared to obey his word. All day Sunday when they weren't sleeping they were eating. They would tackle the luscious peaches on one tree, then take a nap; then attack the plums and rest, finishing off with pears and apples. Late Sunday afternoon, after extravagant words of gratitude to their host, they departed for the dock and boarded the boat bound for the city. All went merry as a marriage bell until they were about half way across, then the wind worked itself into a frenzy, and tore around like a hundred madmen. The boat tried to stand first on one end and then the other, and a crowd of miserable human beings vowed never again to trust themselves upon the treacherous waters of Lake Michigan.

Surfeited with good things as Briggs' week-end guests had been, their digestive apparatus rebelled violently and they were soon experiencing heights and depths of misery known only to those afflicted with mal de mer. When the boat docked at 5 a. m. Monday morning a wretched, wild-eyed, forlorn party of eight wended their ways to their respective homes to prepare as best they could for the busy Monday at the offices of Adair, Townsend & Briggs.

If ever there had been a morning when all the members of the office force needed to be alert and 100 per cent efficient it was that particular Monday. Matters of immense moment were pending that day. A big lumber concern, with offices in half a dozen cities, was seriously considering retaining the firm of Adair, Townsend & Briggs as its attorneys and members of its directorate were that morning coming for an important conference, it was believed, to test the desirability of the firm as their permanent legal counsel.

The two senior members were on hand early, ready for the interview. Usually upon their arrival they found all the office force in their places, busily at work. Not so this morning. Not a soul was to be seen. The senior member indulged in violent language. The second member paced the floor and wondered in stentorian tones what in the name of the seven seas had happened. Suddenly the door opened and one by one the eight pale-faced, heavy-eyed individuals crept guiltily to their desks. "What in thunder is the matter with you all? Inquired Townsend, as he viewed with growing wrath what he had often boasted was the finest looking, most efficient office force to be found. As the wan and weary-looking switchboard operator dropped into her chair she murmured, "Week-end party, Mr. Briggs, storm on lake, seasick. Oh, my soul!" and laid her bobbed head upon the desk and wept.

A half hour later Briggs, well groomed as always, jaunty and self-satisfied, walked into the office, having motored around the lake in his own car. He entered with the mien of a man who expects and deserves an ovation, but his merry greeting died on his lips as he viewed the scene. "Fine demonstration of efficiency you've staged for us," thundered the senior member. "Lumber outfit will be here in ten minutes. Pretty lot of assistants we've got to help us on this strenuous morning."

That a night on the stormy deep does not fit one for accurate alert service was proved a dozen times in the following hectic hours, when a leaden-eyed and languid stenographer for the first time in her experience failed to decipher her notes; when a wan, just-about-to faint switchboard operator tangled up the lumber men's phone calls until they were desperate and a panic-stricken office boy couldn't be made to get an order through his head.

When before the end of a two-hours' conference the lumber magnates took their departure with very evident dissatisfaction and no inclination to adjourn the session to some later date there was slamming of doors and the three members of the firm were closeted in the private office of the head. As the office force held its individual and collective breath there floated through the keyhole and transom in the strident, sarcastic voice of the senior member, "Pretty expensive week-end party you've given us, Briggs. Note it on our books as costing about half a million—what in the end the business of that lumber company would have brought us.

"The next time, Briggs," and the senior partner's voice rose to a wild crescendo that sent shivers down the spine of the pretty stenographer, "the next time you plan a social function to promote efficiency and create esprit de corps in the office force of this firm, please consult us and we'll arrange to hire the ballroom of a hotel and engage the symphony orchestra to play for a dance. It will be cheaper than a trip across the lake for a week-end party."

Man Has Found Many Uses for the Nutmeg

The nutmeg tree is one of the most useful trees in the tropic forests. An ordinary tree will yield from 1,000 to 10,000 nuts in a year. All parts of the fruit are in demand for culinary purposes. In Singapore the natives salt the husks, and in drink saloons they are supplied for the purpose of creating thirst. A delicious preserve is also prepared from the husks. The nutmeg is employed in medicine as a carminative stimulant, and fat from the nut—the so-called nutmeg butter—is used as an application for rheumatism. It contains from 3 to 8 per cent of a volatile oil, and the substance myristicin, which possesses narcotic properties. Cases of poisoning as a result of chewing nutmegs have been recorded—a single nutmeg seriously affecting the cerebral functions of man.

The Fjords

In summer the fjords glitter with golden sunshine; purple and green shadows from the mountains lie on them. These may be more lovely than the faint light of winter moons and the snowy pictures of frozen peaks which show on their surface. But before day is half over, out come the stars—the glorious stars which shine like nothing that we have ever seen. There, the planets cast a faint shadow as the moon does with us; and these planets and the constellations, as they silently glide from peak to peak of the rocky passes, are imaged on the waters so clearly that the fisherman, as he unmoors his boat for his evening task, feels as though he were about to shoot forth his vessel into another heaven, and to cleave his way among the stars.—Harriet Martineau.

Echo and the Sea

Up to three years ago, when the wire lead apparatus was still being used to ascertain ocean depths, five miles was the greatest depth which had been accurately reported. By the use of the echo-sounding apparatus, however, there is no limit to the depths which can be plumbed, and in the Eastern archipelago depths of seven and eight miles have recently been sounded by the German survey ship Emden.

Hand-Made Furniture

In the village of Chalford, Eng., a group of craftsmen are making furniture every bit of which is hand made, even the nails. The endeavor is to turn out the most beautiful furniture produced in the Twentieth century.

PURSUING THE MISSING SERPENT

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

"I THINK mother," said long-legged Professor Banker, taking off his glasses and polishing them, "that I will get up early and go to the woods for some snakes. I want them for my classes, and this hot weather should be ideal for getting them."

"Very well, Charley," answered his gentle little mother, "and I will get up, too, and get your breakfast."

"No, I won't allow that. I can eat any time."

"That is just the trouble—you will forget all about your breakfast. Yes, you will! I know you—don't you often go to bed with your glasses on, and didn't you actually dress one day without removing your pajamas? Very well, then," as he still protested. "I will put a box of lunch in the wagon tonight, if you will promise me to eat it on your way to the woods. I have an empty shoe box that will be just the thing, for it will hold a lot."

So, like a dutiful son, he promised and went to bed. When the faithful alarm clock clanged in the early morning the professor dressed quietly, slipped out, hitched up the old horse and drove to the woods.

By the middle of the morning he was quite tired. It had been good hunting for snakes and his cages were full.

His beautiful specimens were stored carefully in the wagon and he was preparing to untie his horse when he spied an enormous black snake gliding under the ferns. It would never do to miss that one!

"Oh, what a beauty!" he cried, "Do wait a minute, can't you? Don't you know I have been looking for one of your family all the morning? Where is there a cage? A box? Anything—ah—that empty box! Not an ideal cage, but it will serve if I keep you cool—there—I have you!"

The professor's long legs had covered the ground rapidly while he talked, and the snake was overtaken and secured, coiled in the box, and the box tied up in less time than it takes to tell it. The box was stowed under the wagon seat and covered with a piece of canvas to keep it cool.

Arriving home, his captor put the box under the side porch in a cool spot until he could get a proper cage; then he went into the house to change his clothes. He came out of the front door with his arms full of books and forgot his most precious find.

Beside his usual forgetfulness there was a reason why snakes should be a minor consideration for the moment. Just as he stepped from the house the professor caught sight of his pretty neighbor, Miss Connell, on her way to the university. He called her and asked her to ride with him.

"You don't mind riding on this high seat, do you? And you are not afraid of the snakes in the cages back there, are you? Fine! Up you go—I have so much to tell you. One thing, you are so different from other girls. Did you know that—" as they drove off.

It was not until some time later that he thought of his prize under the side porch and hurried home to attend to it.

The box was not there.

"Mother," he asked in a peculiar tone, "did you see anything of a box I put under the side porch?"

"Yes, dear, here it is on the kitchen table. I thought you must have forgotten it."

"You didn't open it?"

"Certainly not, dear. You know I never open your things."

"It's a good thing you have no curiosity, for this had a snake in it."

He lifted the lid a tiny bit.

The box was full of lunch!

Mrs. Banker was horrified. "Charley!" she cried. "Your sister Jane has taken that snake to the picnic instead of her lunch! The boxes were similar and were here on the table together!"

"I will ride to the woods and warn them before they have a chance to open the boxes. They would be terribly frightened, and besides I don't want to lose that beauty."

Hoping to make better time, the professor hastily mounted his old bicycle and started after the picnickers, his coat tails flying and his long legs going up and down like the piston rods of an engine.

I believe I intimated before that it was a hot day.

When Professor Banker reached the high hill overlooking the picnic grounds, he was glad to dismount in the shade and fan himself with his hat. Looking eagerly for the young folk, he could see, far below him, the boys chasing a tramp and a farmer in the act of picking up a box from the road. At that distance he could not know that it was the identical one he was searching for.

Warm, tired and panting he walked through the woods, trundling his bicycle, until he came upon the girls, and found to his relief that they had not yet spread their lunch.

They were surprised to see him, but greeted him cordially, and started to set out the refreshments. He explained his errand to the shuddering group, and the contents of the fatal box.

The boys came shouting back, full of their story about the tramp. It seemed that while the girls were gathering flowers for the table, a tramp had sneaked up and stolen some of the boxes. The boys had followed him, and had seen him open one of the boxes and begin to eat. They had descended upon him whooping and yelling to scare him, and had chased him as far as the railroad track.

As the search for the snake had been fruitless among the lunch boxes, they concluded that the tramp must have taken it and clambered down the bank to investigate.

Reaching the place and finding the box gone the professor remembered seeing the farmer pick up a package and drive away.

If he wanted that snake he must ride back to town in a hurry before some one who didn't appreciate snakes should kill it.

Of course the professor did not know the farmer, but had noticed that the horses were poorly matched; one being large and white, and the other small and dark.

On with the chase!

Through the dust and heat—up one street and down another, around corners and in empty lots—behind big buildings, until finally, with the aid of the local policeman whom he had enlisted in the cause, he found the team in the livery stable. The wagon stood outside with the farmer beside it.

"Pardon me for troubling you," panted the tired professor. "But have you seen my snakes? I mean—you picked up a box back near the woods, didn't you? Well, there was a snake in it—" and he told his story.

The farmer, at first incredulous, then amused, laughed. "Here it is," reaching under the wagon seat. "No, by Jiminy! This box has a pair of shoes in it that I intended taking to the shoemaker! I've taken the wrong box! Come on, let's go!"

The excited trio hurried to the shoemaker's. "Have you mended my shoes yet?" shouted the farmer.

"You know I haven't. I told you I was unusually busy today."

"'S a good thing you are busy! There's a big snake in that box!"

"Aw, quit your kiddin'."

"No, honest. Ask the professor here."

"It's true. Where is the box?"

"Isn't it there on the table?" Where did you leave it, Holmar?"

"I left it right here. Has anyone been in since I was?"

"No. Yes, there was, too! Harry Hamilton! and as foolish as a lord. He'll think he's got 'em sure when he opens that box. I was too busy to wait on him, and he just took the box and left."

"Where does he live? We must get to him before he opens it. The fright might be too much for him in his condition."

The four men almost ran to the rooming house where Hamilton lived.

They found him sitting in a rocker in the act of untying the box on his knees.

"Don't open it!" shouted the policeman.

"I felt something move in there," murmured Hamilton.

"Of course you did," cried the professor, "It's a snake!"

But the warning came to late—the box fell open, and onto the knees of the startled man rolled a big, black thermos bottle and a half-dozen doughnuts.

"Where's my snake?' demanded the professor.

"You can search me, professor," mumbled Hamilton, as he rolled over onto the couch for a nap.

Sure enough, where was the poor reptile that had caused all the trouble? Why curled up in the box under the canvas in the wagon where the professor had so carefully left it in the morning.

All day he had been chasing the lunch his mother had prepared, and he had forgotten to eat.

Gold Produced Not Worth What It Cost

Though there is now about $9,000,000,000 worth of gold in the possession of man, it is generally accepted as a fact that the gold that has been taken out of the earth is not worth what has been spent in its pursuit.

Many men have spent lifetimes in the hunt for gold and have never found it. Innumerable shafts have been run into lonesome mountain sides that have never encountered pay dirt. He who wanders among the solitudes of the Rockies, for example, is quite likely to encounter the scars on the hillsides left by prospectors who have worked claims that never produced. The occasional claim has proved to be a bonanza. The occasional strip of sand has yielded its yellow dust most profitably for a time. On the whole, however, more has been spent in the quest for gold than was ever realized from it.—William A. Du Puy in Current History.

Love and Cooking

"Food cooked by an artist will keep a man in perfect health," says Luther Burbank in "The Harvest of Years," "while food cooked by a bungler will drive a man to drink as sure as fate. I've been accused of exaggerating the importance of this, but I don't mind. I declare that a meal prepared by a person who loves you will do you more good than any average cooking, and a person who dislikes you is bound to get that dislike into your food without intending to."

Knew the Make

Walter Anthony, the music critic, had taken his car to the sanitorium for an overhauling. "And while you are about it," said Walter, "you might take out all the promiscuous squeaks."

"Listen, bo," was the reply. "This make of car don't have any promiscuous."

PAUL'S EXPERIENCES IN JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:18-23:22.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How a Boy Helped His Uncle.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How a Boy Helped His Uncle.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Proves His Courage.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Religious Prejudice and Fanaticism.

I. Paul's Vow (21:18-26).

Upon Paul's arrival at Jerusalem representatives of the church there gave him a most cordial reception. In order that the brethren in Jerusalem might graciously receive him, it was proposed to him by the elders that he take a Jewish vow to prove that he was in no way opposed to the law. The effort was to remove prejudice.

II. Paul's Arrest (21:27-40).

How far this act conciliated the Christian Jews we are not told, but it only enraged the unbelieving Jews, causing them to resort to mob law. These maddened Jews on the basis of a supposition seized Paul, dragged him from the temple and beat him mercilessly, intending to put him to death. Paul was rescued from the mob by the Roman guard. The chief captain, not being able to get any information from the howling mob, bound Paul and started for the castle. In order to protect him, the soldiers lifted him upon their shoulders and bore him up the stairs.

III. Paul's Defense (22:1-27).

Paul's chief concern was not his own safety. He used this last opportunity of witnessing for Christ.

1. His just claim for a hearing (vv. 1-3).

(1) His birth (v. 3). He was Jew-born in Tarsus, a city of no mean reputation.

(2) His education (v. 3). He was educated in a school under the tutorship of Gamaliel and instructed "according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers."

(3) His zeal (v. 3). He was as zealous toward God as those Jews who were trying to destroy him.

2. His former attitude toward Jesus (vv. 4, 5).

"I persecuted this way unto the death," so that his attitude was one of hatred as was that of the Jews.

3. How his attitude was changed (vv. 6-16).

This change of attitude was brought about by the intervention of God. While on his way to Damascus with authority to bring the Christians to Jerusalem to be punished, Paul was smitten to the ground by a light from heaven, and the voice of the Lord said, "Why persecutest thou Me?" When Paul inquired as to what he was to do, he was told to go into Damascus where he would be told what to do. Ananias was sent by the Lord to make known His will.

4. The Lord commissioned him to go to the Gentiles (vv. 17-21).

It was not of his own will that he preached to the Gentiles, but by the Lord's direct commission.

IV. Paul Before the Sanhedrin (23:1-10).

The Roman officer, in order to learn why Paul was arrested, commanded the chief council to assemble, and brought Paul before them.

1. Paul's earnest look at the council (vv. 1, 2).

This was a solicitation of their honor to give him a fair hearing, and also a look of conscious integrity and unfaltering courage.

2. Paul's stern rebuke of the head of the council (v. 3).

"God shall smite thee, thou whited wall." This was a just sentence, no doubt directed by the Lord. Paul showed that he had the highest respect for the office, but the man then occupying it was not worthy of it.

3. Paul's appeal to the Pharisees (vv. 6-10).

Seeing that he could not get a fair hearing, and perceiving that the body before him was made up of Pharisees and Sadducees, he appealed to the Pharisees for his preaching and something in common with their belief.

V. The Lord Stood by Paul (v. 11).

He was in great need of grace to sustain him. He may have begun to question the wisdom of his going to Jerusalem, but this assured him that his course was right, and thus comfort was brought to him.

VI. The Conspiracy to Kill Paul (vv. 12-22).

More than forty men banded together for the purpose of getting Paul out of the way. This plot was known to Paul's sister's son (v. 16), who reported it, and thus doubtless saved the apostle's life.

Highway of Holiness

The highway of holiness is along the commonest road of life—along your very way. In wind and rain, no matter how it beats—it is only going hand in hand with Him.—Mark Guy Pearse.

The World's Condition

The world is in a sick condition today because the Bible says: "In the beginning, God" and the world is saying: "At the last, God."—A. W. Tozer.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

Farmers Urged to put Lime on Their Fields

With the heavier and more urgent farm work of the year out of the way, farmers should begin to think of the application of lime to their land, it is declared by L. E. Erdman, soil specialist for the University of Maryland Experiment Station. Lime may be put on the land at any time of the year, it is said, but the next few months seem to be the most advantageous from the standpoint of labor.

Because of the constant leaching of Maryland soils it has been found that at least seventy-five per cent of the farm lands in the State will respond to liming in one form or another. Moreover, it is pointed out that this situation is ceratin to become more acute as intensified farming increases.

Of the reactions resulting from the application of lime to the land the most important probably is that of sweetening the soil. Clover and alfalfa which will not produce good stands in soil because it is "sour" or acid often respond to lime. Lime will also make plant food more available and in this way really act as a fertilizer. It also promotes the growth of beneficial bacteria.

There is no one form of lime which is better than another, it is declared, for experiments have been made at the University which show that all forms are effective. Either burned limestone, ground limestone, marl, or oyster shells can be used with satisfactory results. The factor of cost, however, is important and will depend upon the price of the respective materials in a given community, the percentage of calcium oxide they contain and the availability of the calcium oxide as determined by the fineness of the product.

Information on this point can be secured from the county agent, who will also test soil for farmers who desire to know the proper quantities of lime to apply.

Potato Blight Found Severe This Season

Late potato blight, a disease responsible for quick and heavy losses, is prevalent in some of the leading potato producing counties of the State this year and is particularly severe on some varieties, it is reported by Dr. R. A. Jehl, plant pathologist for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

The disease, it is reported, is equally as severe as it was last year when peculiar weather conditions brought it into prominence in the northern counties of the State. Fields have recently been inspected by Dr. Jehle in Baltimore and Howard counties and were found heavily infected. The Jersey Red Skin variety, which many growers have substituted for the old McCormick, is particularly susceptible to the disease and infection on the vines of this variety was most noticeable.

In most cases, it is reported, only the vines show evidence of the disease. There is some tuber infection, however, and unless the potatoes are dug before another heavy rain, spores of the disease will be washed from the vines into the ground, infecting the potato themselves.

The disease effects the tuber by killing the skin and can be detected by the black sunken spots on the surface. The discoloration frequently extends well into the potato and organisms of other diseases gain entrance and speedily render the tuber worthless.

There is no effective remedy for the disease and growers are advised to dig their potatoes as soon as possible. If there is evidence of blight on the tubers after they are dug, they should not be stored but should be marketed at once, it is said.

Thus far no late blight has been discovered in the potato growing counties of the lower eastern shore.

Club Members Make Money on Baby Beeves

Washington and Frederick county 4-H club members have demonstrated that baby beeves, fed to a weight of about one thousand pounds and nicely finished, can be produced successfully on an economic basis in Maryland under prevailing market conditions, it is pointed out by K. A. Clark, livestock specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

The first attempt to produce this class of beef cattle in Maryland was undertaken last year in Washington county when fifteen 4-H club members, under the direction of County Agent M. D. Moore, fed out fifteen steer calves. This year in the same county, forty-five animals were raised by club members while eight were produced for market by club members in Frederick county, under supervision of County Agent H. R. Shoemaker.

All of the animals were recently sold at auction, the Washington county group at the Hagerstown Fair and the Frederick county group at the Frederick Fair. The Washington county club members received $6,448.81 for their forty-five animals or an average price of $16.45 per hundredweight. The Frederick county club members received $1,733.16 for their eight baby beeves.

Sixteen of the animals sold at Hagerstown were of the Angus breed. Their average weight was 1,019 pounds and the average price paid for them was $16.68 per hundredweight. The other animals were Hereford and Shorthorn breeding, the former averaging 970 pounds on the scales and bringing an average price of $16.66 per hundredweight, and the latter weighing 916 pounds on the average and selling at an average figure of $15.04 per hundredweight.

The champion steer in the Hagerstown sale, raised by James Speilman, was an Angus, weighing 1,075 pounds and selling at $22.25 per hundredweight. The champion steer in the Frederick show and sale was a Hereford, weighing 1010 pounds and selling at $32.00 per hundredweight.

The production of baby beef involves methods very different from those followed by beef cattle feeders of the State. Records of feed costs kept by the club members, however, indicate that there is a good margin of profit on the better finished animals.

The demonstration of this particular type of beef cattle production in Maryland is regarded as very satisfactory, according to Mr. Clark, and is expected to appeal to more 4-H club members next year. It is probable that the sale of the animals will be transferred to the Union Stock Yards, Baltimore, another year to take advantage of the better facilities there and the improved opportunity of reaching buyers.

BITTINGER.

The election passed over quietly, but the memory will linger long to the end. Let it be hoped that the issues unwisely injected into the campaign and equally unwisely discussed, may be kept forever in the discard.

Snow, to the depth of three or four inches, fell in this section last Saturday and continued on the ground over Sunday.

James P. Wiley, a life long resident of this district, and the only survivor of local Civil War veterans, is selling his personal property on Wednesday of this week and will very soon thereafter move to Somerfield, Pa., leaving his farm in the care of his sons.

Rex Buckle is now the owner of a splinter new Ford coupe and he and his friends are enjoying its comfort.

Judging from the number of gun shots heard in the nearby woods on the first day of hunting season, there must be an abundance of game in this locality.

A number of sportsmen from Cumberland spent last Saturday in this neighborhood in quest of rabbits and pheasants.

Oliver Beachy and son Earl, both of whom are employed in a coal mine near Uniontown, Pa., spent the week-end with their home folks here.

C. R. Broadwater is prepared to do chopping for his neighbors, and will have his mill in operation on Friday every two weeks.

FRIENDSVILLE

Approximately three hundred citizens joined in a "Hoover" parade last Wednesday evening, parading to Accident and return, on every street in town, and cheering for the new president.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church served dinner in the Holman building on Election day, a good sum being realized.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Holman, California, Pa., were home for election.

Mr. J. H. Carter and Misses Ethel Roberts, Roselle Bishoff and Grace Coddington attended the Grantsville High school fair last Thursday night.

Mrs. A. J. Mason and granddaughter, Miss Theresa Kendall, were Cumberland shoppers Saturday.

Mr. Ellis Artice injured his foot in the Ryland mine last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Welch and Miss Grace Coddington attended Rio Rita in Cumberland last Saturday.

Quite a few people went hunting Saturday, it being the first day of the season.

Mr. Asa Rush and Mr. James Rush spent a few days in Pittsburgh last week.

Mrs. Lafayette Frazee was visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Rush, near Accident, a few days of last week.

Mr. N. C. Browning, of Snag Run, was a business caller here last week.

A Real Spirit of Service!

"Undoubtedly a very great factor in the continued progress and improvement of telephone service is the intangible but quite real spirit of service that has become a tradition in the telephone business * * * "

WALTER S. GIFFORD,
President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company
(Bell System)

¶ Every minute of the day or night 50,000 telephones are ringing somewhere in the United States! 3,000,000 every hour! 73,000,000 telephone conversations take place during the course of a day.

¶ Telephone service has become a vital service. Never for a moment must it falter. The message must get through; the service must be kept at the highest standard of efficiency. That is the creed of the army of telephone workers—374,000 of them—who operate the country's telephone system.

¶ Many and varied are the functions of these workers, for the business of furnishing telephone service is one of great complexity. It requires specialists in scores of diverse activities.

¶ But different as are the tasks of this army of telephone workers, thousands of whom are men and women of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Baltimore City, they are moved by a common purpose—to get the message through in the most efficient way and the shortest possible time.

¶ Throughout the twenty-four hours of each day, three hundred and sixty-five days of each year, this is the purpose which continually actuates our people—a purpose that inspires in them a real spirit of service.

U. of M. Students Aid National Convention

Student Grange Gives Dinner in Honor of National Officers and Delegates

GRANGERS TO BE ADDRESSED BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

The Student Grange of the University of Maryland will play an important part this fall in carrying out plans for making the joint meeting of the National Grange and Student Grange Convention in Washington a success.

The University organization will act as a reception committee for the Student Granges and, under the leadership of Hazel Watsou, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Watson, of Hancock, Md., and William Cockerill, of Virginia, will register all students visiting the Capital for the convention.

On Tuesday, November 12, a banquet has been planned for the Student Grange at which Harry Gray, of Washington, D. C., will act as chairman of the entertainment committee. Headquarters for the Student Grange will be at the Cairo Hotel and the "youngsters" will hold their meetings there from November 12 to 15.

Through Mr. Lewis J. Tabor, national master, who addressed the students last year, on his first visit to the State, the officers and delegates of the National Grange have accepted an invitation extended by Dr. R. A. Pearson, President of the University, to be guests of the University at a dinner given in their honor November 19. All past members of the local organization are urged to attend the dinner and the open meeting directly after. At this meeting concrete illustrations of what the student grange at the University of Maryland has accomplished in its thirteen and a half years of existence will be given.

The students also will have their share in making the convention a success for the older Grangers, for during the second week, which is reserved for the majority of business transactions, they will send entertainment committees in to lighten up the morning and afternoon sessions.

The National Grangers will be addressed by President Coolidge on November 16, at the Washington Auditorium. Other speakers during the 10-day session will be Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon; Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, and Representative John C. Ketcham, of Michigan. The Grange policies regarding new agricultural questions will also be discussed by the Convention.

The Willing Workers Sunday school class of St. Paul's M. E. church will hold their annual bazaar and cafeteria supper on Tuesday evening, December 11, 1928, at the Parish House. There will be on sale all kinds of fancy articles.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND STATE HOUSEKEEPERS

Supervision of Foodstuffs and Bedding Inspection Explained

Nearly all Marylanders are aware of the fact that the State Department of Health has supervision over matters relating to the purity, the proper handling and production of foodstuffs. The care that is taken to protect oysters, crabs, milk and other foods from contamination, the precautions used to prevent adulteration of foods and to insure cleanliness in handling are well known. But the fact that the department is entrusted with the same sort of supervision over bedding materials—mattresses, pillows, bolsters, feather beds and comfortables—that are manufactured or displayed for sale in Maryland, and under the law is required to make similar inspections of them to see that the health regulations are observed, is not equally well known.

A report prepared recently by Mr. J. Davis Donovan, of the State Department of Health, describing the work that has been done in carrying out the provisions of the Maryland bedding law, brings out some interesting facts. The law was introduced at the request of manufacturers; was passed at the 1924 session of the Legislature and amended in Certain details in 1927. It corresponds closely to that of Pennsylvania and other nearby states and requires, first of all, that all feathers and down, new or old, and all other second hand material be properly sterilized and disinfected before use; and second, the use of a linen tag on each article giving an accurate statement of the materials used in filling.

The inspections made in carry out the provisions of the law have covered manufacturing plants, warehouses, jobbing houses, auction rooms, second hand stores and retail establishments.

The most flagrant attempt at deceiving prospective purchasers was found in the output of a certain mattress factory, the mattresses from which were labeled "all new felt and cotton." When speciment mattresses from this concern were bought and the contents examined, one of them weighing 21½ pounds was found to contain more than 7 pounds, or over one-third of dirt. Another, in addition to an equally large percentage of dirt, contained three chunks of concrete. On being questioned, the proprietor of the plant admitted that it had been customary to shovel dirt of the dust bins into the mattresses. The mattresses were of course withdrawn from sale.

But the majority of the inspections have turned out differently and appreciation is expressed in the report of the way in which the greater number of the manufacturers and dealers have cooperated with the Department. In an examination made last winter of samples of comfortables labeled "all new wool" from fifteen different factories, all were found to contain over 95 per cent of wool except the output from one plant, whose comforts, despite the label, contained from 20 to 70 per cent of cotton. When articles of this sort have been found, the manufacturers have been notified and have been given an opportunity to make the necessary changes. Prosecution has been used only as a last resort. If the plant is outside the state, the sale of the illegal articles is stopped and the proper official in the state in which the plant is located, is notified.

TWO STILLS CAPTURED AND THREE MEN UNDER ARREST

Raids Near Altamont Tuesday Net Quantity of Liquor and Mash—Stills Operating

Two stills, a large quantity of mash and a small quantity of liquor were the fruits of a series of raids made by Federal agents and county officials in the vicinity of Altamont Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Abe King, aged 60 years, and Coye Ervin, 32, were arrested and brought to the Garrett County Jail where they will await a hearing before Justice W. A. Gonder the latter part of this week on a charge of manufacture and possession of liquor.

The two stills had a capacity of 100 and 25 gallons respectively and were in operation when discovered by the officers. The mash found and destroyed by the raiders totalled approximately 750 gallons. The stills were slashed and brought into Oakland as evidence by Sheriff W. D. Casteel, who assisted in making the arrests.

Search was made throughout the community of Altamont and North Glade by the officers, who had been advised of the operations of the moonshiners in that section before the plant was found on the Altamont Stock farm, the operators being trespassers upon the property.

King, it is alleged, resisted arrest and threw a bottle at one of the officers.

The Federal agent and Sheriff Casteel were assisted in the work by Constable Andrew Shartzer and Deputy Sheriff Joy Griffith.

INJURIES PROVE FATAL TO PRISONER IN KEYSER JAIL

Fell to Floor While Washing His Face and Dies in Hospital

(From Keyser Echo, Keyser, W. Va.)

Hubert Hinebaugh died at the Hoffman hospital, Wednesday morning, November 14, while undergoing an examination for a fractured skull sustained when he fell to the concrete floor of the Mineral county jail in Keyser.

Hinebaugh and George Cook were placed in jail on Tuesday afternoon about four o'clock by State Trooper Alkire and Constable J. Perry Greenwade, following a raid made at Hubbard where a 50-gallon tin and copper bottom still and a 25-gallon copper still were captured.. Five gallons of shine, 150 gallons of mash, sugar and other articles were found. Hinebaugh was arrested three years ago for operating a still.

About 6:30 Tuesday evening Hinebaugh requested some medicine and Jailer Riley called Dr. Flick who reported Hinebaugh very restless and gave him some medicine to quiet his nerves.

According to the other prisoners, Hinebaugh arose Wednesday morning in a good humor, laughing and talking, but as he was washing and preparing for breakfast, he suddenly threw up his arms and muttered as he fell to the floor. Dr. Flick and Dr. T. C. Gitlin were called and the patient rushed to the hospital. An examination was made and x-ray pictures taken of his head, but he died while being examined. The doctars stated that his skull had been fractured.

Th edeceased was a son of James and Mary Ellen Hinebaugh, of Deer Park, and was born May 6, 1889. He was aged 38 years. Funeral services were conducted last Saturday at the Deer Park Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. S. J. Westfall officiating. Bolden Undertaking Company, Oakland, had charge of the interment. ## WRITE YOUR NEWS EARLY

Captain Miles Standish was never a newspaper editor. It he had been this Puritan could not have used such poor judgment in having the Pilgrims land at Plymouth Rock on Thursday, the day when a majority of weekly newspapers go to press.

But Turkey Day is Turkey Day and there isn't anything that can change the history of the landing except the "three-in-one" program on the radio, so—

Being only human, the editor, his associates and employes all are desirous of spending the day of Thanksgiving as other people spend it, and that means that The Republican will be printed one day earlier than usual—Wednesday, November 28, instead of on Thursday, November 29, the regular publication day.

For that reason it is requested that all correspondents, news and advertisements for the Thanksgiving issue be in the office one day earlier than usual to insure their publication.

CANVASS TO BE MADE IN ANNUAL RED CROSS DRIVE

Teams of High School Girls to Make Rounds Tomorrow—The County Quota Set at $500

Shilke, chairman for this community. Rev. Shilke arranged with Miss Katharine Conley, principal of the high school, for the girls to take part in this work and they will begin at six o'clock tomorrow evening.

Garrett county's quota in the 12th annual Red Cross Roll Call, which began November 11, is $500 and one hundred per cent enrollment is the aim of the Red Cross workers of this county. Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey, of Grantsville, is chairman and local chairmen have been appointed in each community.

Oakland's share in the quota has been set at $200. "This ought to be easily raised," Rev. Shilke said. "The Red Cross and its noble work is appreciated by all, and certainly commands our support."

TABULATION OF SCHOOL CENSUS BEING COMPLETED

Account Is Taken of all Children Under 19 Years of Age

Figures and tabulations of the census of Garrett county children under the age of nineteen years as taken by the school teachers in various parts of the county, will be completed and ready for publication within a week or two, according to John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer of the county, who has been compiling the data received at the office of the Board of Education in Oakland.

The county school census is taken in connection with the State-wide census, which is required every two years for the purpose of ascertaining how many children there are in the State, how many are in school who are of school age and the number not attending school. The census taking was begun on November 1 and all school teachers have made their reports, it has been stated.

Figures of 1926 Given

The census of 1926 showed that there were 11,652 children in the county under the age of 19 years; 4,866 of these were attending public school, and 80 of them were in non-public schools. This left 6,706 children above and under the age limit of required attendance, with the exception of a very small percentage who should have been in school but were not.

The census also showed that 37 children were physically defective and 18 mentally defective, all of whom were unable to attend school because of their affliction. Since 1926 several of these deficient children have been sent to various institutions for treatment, through the orthopedic societies, and it is thought that this year's figures will show a decided decrease in the number of defectives.

Ten colored children in the county under the age of 19 were listed in the census. Seven of these were in school and three under the school age.

Many people are under the impression that a child finishing the grades before he is fifteen years of age is not compelled to go to high school, but according to school officials every child is required to attend school until he or she has attained the age of fifteen.

CHRISTMAS CLUB SAVINGS CHECKS TO TOTAL $18,200

Money to be Distributed by Local Banks on December 1—Amount More than Last Year

An approximate increase of $3,000 over last year's total has been saved by means of the Christmas Savings clubs of the First National and the Garrett National Banks of Oakland, it was announced today, bringing the total sum to be distributed around December 1 to $18,200. This, total will be given out to more than 250 depositors in these two banks, it is said.

The Christmas Savings feature was established in Garrett county about three years ago by the First National Bank of Oakland and two years ago this policy was introduced by the Garrett National Bank of Oakland and by the First State Bank of Grantsville.

Many of the checks which will be received on December 1 will be cashed and immediately used for Christmas shopping, while others will find their way into the stockings of Garrett county residents.

Small Amount Each Week

By depositig small amounts each week those who have taken advantage of the Savings Clubs now have at their command just at this time when demands are made for funds with which to buy Christmas gifts, money sufficient to meet these demands without having to wait for the next pay day.

Both the First National and the Garrett National Banks will begin next year's Christmas Savings accounts on Monday, December 10, and they will take care of as many as may choose to take advantage of the opportunity of creating a fund for the Christmas shopping of 1929.

There are clubs for 25 cents each week; 50 cents, $1.00, $2.00, $3.00 and so on. The money thus deposited will draw three per cent interest and will prove a good investment.

Oakland Homemakers Hold Initial Banquet

Tables were beautifully decorated with yellow candles and holders, yellow rosebuds and at each plate a bunch of yellow pompons and a heart-shaped jello mold in which was an appropriate poem.

Songs were sung by the ladies during the evening and Miss Elsie Benthien, Home Demonstration Agent for Garrett county, gave an interesting talk concerning club work throughout the county and the program as outlined for the year 1929. An open discussion followed.

During the afternoon, at 2:30, the club held its regular monthly meeting in the Court House. Miss Benthien presented some lovely and practical Christmas suggestions, which were greatly appreciated. The meeting was in charge of Mrs. D. S. Davis, prsident.

ATTENDANCE AT POULTRY SCHOOLS SATISFACTORY

Specialist Lectures on Brooding--To Take up Other Subjects

A very satisfactory number of persons have been present at the various meetings held in Grantsville, Friendsville, Accident and Oakland in connection with the poutry schools being conducted by W. H. Rice, poultry specialist of the University of Maryland during the present week.

In the first of the series of meetings, Mr. Rice lectured on housing the poultry. He pointed out that housing of poultry was probably the most important factor in poultry production in this county. He listed and discussed five main factors to keep in mind in the construction of poultry houses for laying birds as follows: Convenience to the attendant, cheerful surroundings for the birds such as light; dryness, it being more important that the house be dry than warm; ventilation; economical construction.

The first lectures on brooding were given yesterday, Mr. Rice saying that one of the biggest factors was the control of disease and the production of chicks on an economical basis.

In the second series of meetings 18 adults and vocational boys attended at Accident on Wednesday afternoon and 144 persons were at the meeting in Oakland last night. At the first meeting held in Oakland there were 11 adults and 34 vocational boys present. Accident had 25 at the evening session in spite of adverse conditions. At Friendsville there were 25 and at Grantsville there were 50 persons in attendance.

Sunnyside Grange To Hold Oyster Supper

A committee went to Washington, D. C., to attend the National Grange there in session from November 14 to 23. The committee on the masquerade party reported $24.02 above expenses. A radio will be given away on January 25, the secretary of the grange reported.

Pleasant Valley Grange To Conduct Trap Shoot

Decision to hold a trap shoot on Thanksgiving Day, beginning at ten o'clock in the morning, was made at the last meeting of the Pleasant Valley Grange last Thursday evening. The shoot will be held near the grange hall and will be open to everybody. Chickens, ducks and perhaps some turkeys will be offered as prizes, and there will be rifle, shot gun and trap-shooting matches. Participants should provide their own guns. Lunch will be served at the grange hall and an oyster supper will be served in the evening.

Mark Moon addressed the grangers on the "Farmer and the New Day," and Luther Riley spoke on the sheep industry. The next meeting will be held December 6, at which time applications will be balloted upon and officers for 1929 elected.

Mrs. J. W. Parks, of Eglon, spent Monday in Oakland on business.

The improvement and progress one year's work will bring will be demonstrated during the Christmas holidays by the members of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' band at a concert to be given in the Maryland Theatre, R. R. Gilbert, director, has announced.

On December 25, 1927, the band made its first appearance and a similar performance is planned this year to show just how much the boys have learned under the direction of Mr. Gilbert and his assistant, Russell Brown. Five dollars of this amount was from an Oakland woman who did not want her name published and$20 was a donation from the Knights of Pythias lodge in appreciation of the splendid turnout during the Hallowe'en celebration. This check was in addition to the prize of $5 awarded for the most comic costumed band and shows the appreciation of the Pythians for the service rendered upon the occasion.

Electric Current Turned On In New Extension Line

Twenty homes and business places along the Oakland-Aurora highway are now enjoying the benefits of electric service furnished by the West Maryland Power Company through its lines, the "juice" having been turned on last Saturday. For the present the service extends only as far as the State line at Gnegy church, service lines from that point on to Aurora not yet having been completed, but will be within a few days.

When service is established all the way to Aurora the power company will have added at least 112 new customers, that number having signified their intention of becoming consumers of the electric current as furnished by the company. The first new customer to be supplied on Saturday was "Shorty" Gortner, well-known and generally liked gas dispenser at Gortner, five miles south of Oakland.

The New Hat of Lace

By SELMA HART

(Copyright.)

BILL KEMP, the head of the exchange department, looked up wearily from his desk. It had been a day of odd jobs—refunds, complaints, exchanges. Everything had been relatively unimportant and yet everything demanded instant attention. Had Bill Kemp been ten years older than he was he would not have taken it all so seriously, and consequently would have been as fresh at the end of the day as he was early in the morning.

"I wanted," said a pair of violet eyes, at least Bill Kemp would have sworn that it was the eyes that spoke, so timidly and questionably did they regard him, "I want to know if I could do something about my lace hat."

Bill Kemp sighed. They were such marvelous eyes. And then to be mundanely interested in a hat—a silly lace hat.

"Well," he said gruffly, "what did you contemplate doing about this lace hat? If it's been worn it cannot possibly be accepted for exchange or refund."

The latter words issued mechanically from his mouth, and he wondered subconsciously how many hundreds of times he had uttered that same sentence—sometimes about gloves, sometimes about hair goods, sometimes about shoes.

"Oh, it hasn't been worn!" came the soft voice again. The voice sounded as though it were full of tears and he looked at the violet eyes again. Sure enough, there were large tears there.

Bill Kemp steeled himself. All women used tears as a means to an end and he determined that he would not be taken in. "Well, go on, go on," he said as testily as he could.

"You see I decided last Saturday that I could take it—it's a beautiful hat. Oh, it was really the most beautiful hat in the whole world, I think," she said wistfully. "I looked and looked at it—before, you know—and on Saturday I paid a deposit on it, a deposit of a dollar. I was to take it this Saturday, but—" the lips that were soft and pink closed firmly. "I—I believe that I shan't need it after all."

"And so you want the dollar back again, I take it?" he said, tapping his pencil against the desk and regarding it coolly.

"Oh my, no," she said softly. "Of course they wouldn't give back the dollar, but I went to the millinery department and the clerk said that I had agreed to take it and I would have to finish paying for it. I—I have the money but—"

"Will you sit down?" said Bill Kemp, rising suddenly, wondering why it was that he had not thought of it before. "I haven't been head of the department long and I am at a loss to understand one thing. Why do women buy a thing, take it home and then run right back here to return it?"

The violet eyes crinkled at the corners and the soft pink lips twitched. "I don't know," she confessed. "I never do myself. It's not that I probably wouldn't if I had the chance, but I work and so scarcely have time to buy what I need, let alone buying things for the fun of thinking I really owned them for awhile before I returned them. It must be lots of fun, mustn't it?"

"But you want to leave this flower hat on our hands," he expostulated.

"Oh, oh, not flower!" she exclaimed in horrified tones; "it is lace. And, besides, I don't want to leave it on your hands. I'd love it myself only I heard about this Mrs. Benzinger whose husband is in the hospital and whose children are all so small that she can't work. It wouldn't be right to wear a lovely hat when they might be—hungry. If you say I don't need to take the hat I'm going to take a basket out there tonight." She looked at her watch. "It's 'way, 'way out in—"

"You run along and get the basket and I'll see about the dollar refund. Then when you get the basket filled come back here and get the dollar and I'll take the basket out for you—wherever it is. You can't be running all over town—a girl like you—"

He listened to her words of thanks with an air of abstraction. "We ought to get a bite of supper at a restaurant first, maybe," he said nonchalantly, quite as though he were in the habit of asking strange girls to eat with him. He sent the call boy for the dollar and pulling a card from his pocket, wrote down:

"She'd like a hat—lace—later."

And the violet-eyed Mrs. Bill Kemp with her still shiny wedding ring was happily surprised on her birthday a few months later with a round hatbox tied with a huge violet bow. The hatbox held a hat of lace.

Painter's Fairy Story

Jim Painter relates to Andalusia Dawson of Harned's pharmacy,—"I had just one shot left in my single barrel gun as I crept upon a herd of 30 ducks. When close to the pack of winged creatures I aimed carefully, pulled the trigger softly, and by moving my gun slowly to the right and left as the bullet exploded, I was able to kill 15."

Browning's "Once Upon A——"

Bill Browning has memorized the ensuing: "I was just this side of the game reserve when I saw what I took to be a squirrel flying from tree to tree. I trailed it closely through the snow until it came to a big oak tree. By shaking the tree I made him jump and pulled the trigger just in time to bring to earth a rabbit on the wing. His ears had a wing spread of 18 inches."

Harry Mickey's Delusion

Harry Mickey also seemed to have a brainstorm and told interested listeners what he had seen on the Sang Run flats. He tells the following:

"I had three rabbits and was wending my way along a ledge when I gazed ahead of me and there was a bear as big as life. Had I been Baron Munchausen I would have rammed my fist down the beast's throat, grabbed his tail and turned him wrong side out making him run the other way, but being myself I calmly lifted my trusty to my shoulder and—you know the rest."

Harry claims to have fallen into the Yough, the swift waters of which carried away his bear carcass. However, he did bring home a rabbit or two. All of which proves that Harry, as a fisherman, would make a much better hunter. Col. Bell, by means of a special long-distance operating contrivance hooked to his camera, and for which he wants to secure a patent, took a picture of what Mickey was thinking and saying in his mind. In this way proof of his assertions can be had through the Colonel and Scoop.

A Real Santa Claus

Starting next week, Col. Bell and Scoop are going to receive and send letters to Santa Claus. A private wire has been put through to Santa and the North Pole through the courtesy of Charley Tower, which will give exclusive service and guarantee best results. These letters must be very short and to the point. Several will be printed each week. Harry Stemple Bill Whorton, George Littman, Jim P. Treacy, Bill Sturgiss and several others, including the Chief of The Republican, have advance orders already written, and some of these will appear in the next issue of The Republican.

A communication from Santa Claus late this morning stated that a very heavy sleet had covered the North Pole, that it was expected to snow soon and that the price of walrus steak was on the increase, but this would not keep him from receiving letters from Garrett county if they are directed to him care of The Republican, which paper guarantees delivery and the filling of all orders. Watch for the letters next week.

Scoop expects to be on the job 24 or 26 hours each day from now until the holiday season, provided basketball and other outside interests do not interfere.

HOW DISEASES SPREAD AMONG YOUNG CHILDREN

Flare-up of Measles, Whooping Cough, Explained by Dr. Riley

Asked why there is usually a flare-up of measles, whooping cough and other diseases among young children as soon as school opens, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said, "One reason why the so-called children's diseases spread as they do, among young children, is because the beginnings of these diseases are so often believed to be 'just a cold' and 'nothing serious.'

"As a matter of fact, what seems to be 'just a cold' may run on for two or three days and at the end of that time may prove to be measles. And if every precaution has not been taken to prevent the spread of the 'cold' to other children you can be very sure that that one case of measles will be multiplied by several. In the same way, after a week or ten days of the 'sniffles' a child will give the whoop that is characteristic of whooping cough, and in another week or ten days the children with whom the little boy or girl has been associating, will be whooping also.

"A rather remarkable instance of this sort was brought to the attention of the Department recently. A kindergartner, who had charge of a group of twenty children, four, five and six year olds, who had been playing together all summer, noticed that one of the children had a suspicious case of sniffles. She took the child home and asked the mother to call her doctor. Then she notified the mothers of the other children that one of the group was probably developing whooping cough, the dread of most mothers, and rightly so, not only because of the suffering the child endures during the progress of the disease but because of the possible after-effects.

"The mothers were warned, but it was too late. Within two weeks, all but one of the group of twenty had developed whooping cough. And all because one mother apparently thought 'oh, my child has only a cold; it doesn't make any difference if the other children eateh his cold; it's only a cold.'

"It is easy enough to see HOW the children caught the cold from their playmate and spread it to each other. They played games together; they exchanged toys; they used the same playground equipment; they shared their treasures.

"There are several lessons to be learned from this experience. First of all, the seriousness of any sort of 'cold' to children; second, the responsibility that mothers have for the health of other mothers' children as well as their own.

"There is another lesson that can be taught in connection with an occurrence of this sort: Our ten fingers are the commonest carriers of disease from outside sources to ourselves. It is never too early to begin teaching children two of the most effective precautions against the spread of the catching diseases: Don't put your fingers in your mouth; always wash your hands before eating.

"And these precautions are as necessary for grown-ups as for children."

THE RED CROSS APPEAL

Over all this broad land of ours the people are being solicited to renew their memberships in the American Red Cross, while others are being solicited as new members to join the millions who have already been identified with this organization.

The Red Cross drive for membership began on November 11 and continues through until Thanksgiving day. No other humanitarian organization in all the world has so large a membership nor is there one which appeals so much to the hearts and consciences of the people. This is not difficult to understand. The American Red Cross has proved its worth because of its service to mankind.

During the World War it rose to the highest peak of effort and service and fully demonstrated its place as the world's greatest humanitarian organization. The Red Cross was not only, through its nursing service, the mother to the boys in khaki but also a ministering angel to millions of boys from all countries suffering from hunger, thirst and wounds, upon many a European battlefield. From every country participating in the war the boys came back, loud in their praises of the Red Cross.

The soldiers have never forgotten the Red Cross and the Red Cross has never forgotten the soldiers. In fact, during the past ten years, or ever since the war ended, the Red Cross has been ministering to the soldiers and has rendered to them an invaluable service. The home service department of the Red Cross has ever kept functioning and has been faithfully devoted to the interests of the veterans.

This, however, is but one of the outstanding services which the Red Cross has rendered since the war. It has given help and succor to thousands upon thousands of people in every clime and every country who have suffered through disease or disaster. We need only cite the splendid work which was done during the Mississippi flood disasaer and within recent months in rendering assistance to the homeless and destitute who were visited by floods and storms in Porto Rico and Florida. These things of course stand out before all the people as examples of the highest and noblest service, yet a service which was carried on only because of an efficient, well trained organization and by reason of the generosity of the American people.

Every day, in every year, in our own communities as well as throughout the length and breadth of this land, a very definite work is being done for suffering humanity. Every day we see the Red Cross nurse going forth on her mission of mercy, visiting homes where someone is suffering from accident or disease, ministering to them in time of their greatest need and sorrow. It is everywhere doing this sort of work, relieving the distress and suffering and always on the job to meet emergencies which arise in every community, resulting from the visitations of epidemics and disasters.

Surely there is not a single patriotic American who, at this time, does not want to be enrolled as a member of the American Red Cross.

ELECTRICITY AND THE COAL PROBLEM

More than 70 per cent of the 41,000,000 horespower now used in the factories of the United States is electrical. There is 4.3 horse power for every worker, or twice as much as in 1910.

Moreover, electrification of factories is proceeding at a rapid pace. It will not be many years until practically all the power of our shops and mills will be electrical. The reason is that electricity is the cheapest, cleanest, most dependable and convenient of all power, and is becoming constantly more readily available with the growth of great interconnecting utilities and the develpoment of the nation's waterpower.

It is estimated that this increased efficiency of steam plants and use of water power saved the factories last year 40,000,000 tons of coal, which otherwise would have been consumed to obtain the same power. This is about 22 per cent more than the amount of coal actually used.

Such is rather a mixed blessing. The saving at the factories was, of course, enormous. But at the same time the difficulties of the coal industry were increased proportionately. Coal has not yet recovered from the war-time over-expansion. There are too many mines open and too many miners for all to make a fair living, peace-time demand being what it is.

With overproduction the basic trouble of the coal industry, radical reduction of the coal needed for manufacturing, as well as the increasing electrification of the railroads and also for the heat and power requirements of both commercial and domestic users, tend to postpone further adjustment of the coal industry to a profitable, soundly economic basis.

However, there is no possible relief for the coal industry in this direction. The progress of engineering science is certain to make steam plants more efficient with the use of less coal, water power ought to be utilized and not permitted to run to waste, and manufacturers are exercising only common sense in taking advantage of these economies. Ultimately the public will gain by lower prices of goods.

The great hope for the coal industry is not to try to force, in the face of naturally lessened demand for fuel, high prices by artificial means. The salvation of the coal industry lies in utilizing the vast by-product values of coal which are now ordinarily wasted.

The tar and chemical constituents in a lump of coal have a worth, readily procurable, fifteen or twenty times greater than that of the mere fuel value. It is by the extraction and marketing, on a large commercial scale, of these elements that certain and substantial profits will be brought to the coal industry in the future.

THE GOOD-WILL VOYAGE

Mr. Hoover's Latin-American trip was a happy inspiration. The President-elect knows the world as few other men do, having lived and worked as an engineer and administrator in most parts of it—North America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia. South America is the only continent to which his profession did not call him. It is the only one in which he has not established direct personal contacts.

The present trip will fill the gaps in his first-hand acquaintance with conditions the world over. He will visit some of the Central American states, having already done engineering work in Mexico, which he will probably revisit. But south of Panama he will enter new territory, closely allied politically as well as economically with the United States and yearly assuming a larger importance in the working out of the problems of Pan Americanism.

No time could have been better chosen for the President-elect's tour in Latin America. The Havana conference last winter reawakened interest in the relations of the American republics and in the possibilities of extended intercourse and co-operation among them. Before the delegates assembled an intensive effort was made, both in Europe and in this country, to create the impression that a solid Latin-American bloc had been formed to combat this country's "imperialism." It was a fanciful conception that the United States was going to stand isolated, with its back against the wall, at Havana. The prophets of ill-will soon discovered that there was no Latin-American bloc hostile to the United States. It was demonstrated, on the contrary, that this country and the Latin-American states did not differ essentially as to the purpose and future of Pan-Americanism. The existing union is not political and is not intended to be so. Its aim is friendly association for common benefit in the field of communications, international helpfulness and comity, enlarged trade and commerce, intellectual relations and continental solidarity. The conference ended with many confusions removed and a better understanding of the limitations and possibilities of co-operation established.

Mr. Hoover goes south as a messenger of good will and as a student of political and economic conditions, says the New York Herald Tribune. He is not traveling as a sort of super-salesman or as the advance agent of American foreign trade. It would not be decorous for him to do anything of that sort. As President he will have to direct our political relations with the Latin-American states, and that task will be eased by acquaintance with their peoples and leaders. South America is, economically speaking, a new continent. Its trade with the United States and its demand for American capital will rapidly increase. There is a mutual advantage in this development and one which needs to be stressed to South Americans themselves. What the President-elect's gesture does stress is this country's desire to cultivate friendship and neighborliness in its dealings with the other American peoples. That comes first.

The Western world, unlike the Eastern, is one of brotherhood, of kinship due to similar political origins, institutions and ideals. It has advanced considerably along the lines of common effort and of non-aggression. It has brought about a moral union of the Americans. It is a representative of that effort and a guarantor of its continuance that Mr. Hoover goes to the various Latin-American capitals, offering friendship and assured of a welcome in the same spirit.

TWO TEACHER TRAINING SCHOOLS TO OPEN DEC. 2

Will Be Located at Friendsville and in Grantsville

That the communities of Friendsville and Grantsville would hold their first Standard Teacher Training schools, beginning December 2, was announced by the Garrett County Council of Religious Education yesterday.

The school will begin at Grantsville on that day at three o'clock in the afternoon and at Friendsville at 7:30 o'clock in the evening of the same day, and will alternate between the two places, giving an evening for study and outside work. Each school will have six sessions of two periods each.

Two classes are offered—one on intermediate work to be taught by Col. Joseph H. Cudlipp, nationally known authority, and the second on "Teaching Religion," which will be taught by Mrs. Cudlipp, a graduate of Boston University, and also an outstanding teacher on religious subjects.

The school is open to all interested persons, the tuition being one dollar. At least fifty are expected to enroll in each school. These schools will be in charge of administrative boards at each center. Grantsville's board is composed of Rev. S. D. Sigler, chairman; Rev. Beck, Rev. Johnson, G. W. Diefenbach, Mrs. Fred. Livengood and Mr. A. J. Bender. The Friendsville board is composed of Rev. T. E. Shea, chairman; Arnold Fox, C. O. Ross and George J. Kolb.

Each school will have an appropriate graduation exercise and diplomas for accredited work will be given. The public is invited to witness these ceremonies.

Rev. C. A. Shilke, of Oakland, and Rev. E. E. Campbell, Bittinger, accompanied Col. Cudlipp on his trip to Friendsville and Grantsville Tuesday and aided in the arrangement for the schools. Similar schools will be held later in Oakland and at Kitzmiller.

MERCHANTS FORGE AHEAD IN BOWLING COMPETITION

Postoffice Loses Two Games and Gives Way to Leaders

Although entirely inactive during the past week in the Bowling League, the Merchants forged ahead of the Postoffice team to take first place as Postoffice was losing one game out of three to Crellin last Thursday night and one game out of three to the Lutherans on Monday night.

The Lutherans took two games from the Presbyterians on Thursday but lost two games to the Postoffice quintet Monday. The Presbyterians were also defeated Monday night when Crellin took two out of three games. The five members of the Lutheran team rolled a total of 691 pins in one game, while Walters of the Presbyterians had the high score of the week in a total of three games with 472.

Tonight the Methodists will meet the Knights of Columbus and the Merchants will try to hold first place by downing the Rotary Club.

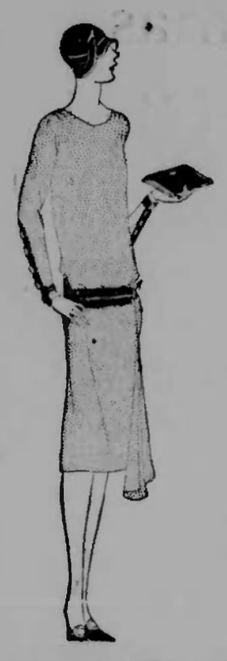
GARRETT COUNTY CHAMPS DEFEATED BY BRUCE HIGH

Kitzmiller Booters No Match for Allegany County Leaders

Kitzmiller high school soccer team, Garrett county champions, was defeated by Bruce high school, Westernport, Saturday afternoon at Barton by the score of 6-1. Kitzmiller's only score of the game came as the result of a penalty kick by Johnny Malouse just before the first period ended.

Although outclassed from an offensive standpoint, Coach Paul Custer's Garrett countians played a good defensive game with Lamark Moore, goal keeper, throwing Bruce high school for a loss time and again by warding off shot after shot.

Johnny Malouse and Lamark Moore were the stars on the best team that Garrett county has ever entered in the State tournament over a stretch of eight years. The former was a very clever dribbler and would have made more headway if his supporting cast had been on the job at the right time.



An odd coincidence was the appearance of two one-armed fullbacks on opposite sides. Junior Mays, of Bruce, and Bill Harvey, Kitzmiller, were the one-armed stars of the game.

Those playing on the Kitzmiller team were Moore, Harvey, Wilson, Hoey, Arnold, Burns, Sharpless, F. Sapp, Walker, Justina and Malouse.

Mr. Richard Tasker, of Vindex, was here Saturday on business.

THE HOMEMAKERS CORNER

BY MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN
Home Demonstration Agent

Cookies for the holiday season are well worked out in new and fancy designs. Four suggested designs are the turkey, pilgrim's hat, holly leaf and the Christmas tree. Colored frostings complete the design.

Plan ahead and start the holiday cookies now. The longer the dough for lebkuchen and moravian cookies "ripen" the better the cookie.

Lebkuchen—8 c. sifted Swan's Down cake flour, ½ t. soda, 1½ t. cinnamon, ¼ t. cloves, ¼ t. nutmeg, 1 1-3 c. strained honey (1 lb.), 2 c. brown sugar, ¼ c. water, 2 eggs, slightly beaten; 1½ c. candied orange peel, shredded (6 oz.); 1½ c. candied citron shredded (6 oz.); 2 c. almonds, blanched and shredded (¾ lb.). Sift flour once, measure, add soda and spices and sift together three times. Boil honey, sugar and water 5 minutes. Cool; add flour mixture, eggs, fruits and nuts. Work into loaf and place in refrigerator. Let ripen two or three days. Roll on slightly floured board to ¼ inch thickness. Cut in strips 1x3 inches. Bake on greased baking sheet in moderate oven 350 degrees F. 15 minutes. When cool cover with transparent icing. Makes 10 dozen lebkuchen.

Moravian Christmas cookies—½ c. butter or other shortening, melted, 1 c. molasses, heated, ½ c. brown sugar, ¾ teaspoon ginger, ¾ teaspoon cloves, ¾ t. cinnamon, ¼ t. nutmeg, ¾ t. allspice, dash of salt, ¾ t. soda, 3¾ c. sifted Swan's Down cake flour. Combine butter and molasses, add sugar, spices, salt and soda. Add flour. Let stand in cold place a week or two. Roll paper-thin. Cut with fancy cutters. Bake in moderate oven 375 degrees F. 6 minutes.

St. James' Pudding.

Three tablespoons butter, ½ c. molasses, ½ c. milk, 1 7-8 cups flour, ½ t. soda, salt, cloves, allspice, nutmeg, ¼ t. each, ½ lb. dates, stoned and cut in pieces. Melt the butter, add the molasses, milk and dry ingredients, mixed and sifted, and the fruit. Turn into buttered moulds, cover and steam 2½ hours. Nuts and other dried fruits may be added. For moulds try using ½ lb. baking powder tins.

Pudding Sauce.

Three-quarters cup sugar, ¼ cup water, 2 teaspoonful butter, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Make a syrup by boiling sugar and water five minutes; remove from fire; add butter and lemon juice. In place of lemon juice other extracts may be added.

Strained Cranberry Sauce.

Four cups cranberries, 2 cups wated, 1 to 1½ cups sugar. Boil cranberries and water until the berries stop popping; press through coarse sieve; add sugar and cook until sugar is dissolved (2 minutes). Strained cranberry sauce is delicious served with cottage or bread puddings and makes a tasty filling for cakes, jelly roll and sandwiches.

Cranberry Mold.

Four cups cranberries, 2 c. water, 2 c. granulated sugar. Boil cranberries with water until berries stop popping. Strain through fine sieve; add sugar and stir; then boil rapidly for 8 to 10 minutes or until a drop jells on a cold plate. Turn at once into a wet mold and cool.

Cranberry Ade.

Cover cranberries with water and boil until soft, then strain. To 4 cups of this juice add 1 cup sugar; let come to a boil; then bottle. Serve in glasses with cracked ice.

THE RAINY-DAY HUSBAND

(©, by D. J. Walsh.)

FROM her kitchen window Alice watched the Houghlands depart on their annual vacation. She watched Mrs. Houghland rush to the fence and hand Aunt Carrie, who had just finished pinning dazzling white sheets on the line, a house key and a big purring cat. Alice smiled as she drew back the curtain and waved an encouraging farewell.

Aunt Carrie came in with a noisy bang of the screen door. "They're off!" she laughed. "Wonder what Jim'll say now!" she speculated, depositing the cat on a chair and giving Alice the key for safekeeping.

Alice stroked the cat's velvety head absent-mindedly. "The usual prediction of the Houghlands coming to grief, I suppose, and next summer instead of seeing them wallowing in debt we'll wave good-by when they start out on their vacation." She frowned at the purring pussy.

Aunt Carrie chuckled. "Leave it to Maude Houghland to get away each year. She's a wise little woman. Last year when the children had been sick all winter we thought doctor bills would keep them home, but Maude told me that she and the children needed the sea air and off they went!"

"But this year," protested Alice feebly, "Mr. Houghland was out of work three months. They can't afford it, really!"

"Maude said they could not afford to stay home! She said her husband needed a change, that he was all run down from worry and they'd all come home ready for a winter of hard work. And Mr. Houghland agrees to anything she says," added Aunt Carrie pointedly.

Alice's cheeks grew quite pink. "That Albert Houghland!" she tossed her head, "why he couldn't tie Jim's shoestrings. How does he take care of his family? Has he a cent laid up for a rainy day? Answer me that? Does he own his own home? Or build a new sun porch like Jim did this spring? How about the new living-room suite Jim bought this winter? And the real Chinese rug? And Mr. Houghland tripping over the hole in his parlor carpet night after night." She worked herself into a heat.

"Well," answered Aunt Carrie tranquilly. "Chinese rug or not. Albert Houghland takes his family on a vacation every summer and let me see, you've been married eighteen years, and you haven't left this town except once to go over to Coalville to your uncle's funeral."

"We did intend to go last year," Alice explained, "but there was such a wonderful opportunity for Jim to invest his savings in that Jones property. And this spring we built the sun porch and now Jim's paying off on a bond. Maybe next year," she added, turning away so that Aunt Carrie would not see intense yearning in her eyes. Oh, for a whiff of a stiff salt breeze and the luxury of a first-class hotel! For eighteen years she had hoped and planned while the neighbors packed their bags and departed.

"Next year!" sniffed Aunt Carrie. "Jim Stover will be straining to meet another investment. I know his kind, so intense saving for that rainy day that he has no time nor money to enjoy the sunshine of today."

"He's making good with his firm," Alice protected her husband loyally, "and it's just because he pleases Mr. Pulver and you know he never encourages vacations. It's his brother, you know, always going off on vacations and getting into some trouble."

Footsteps in the front hall stopped the conversation and both women hastily busied themselves with the cooking dinner.

"Hello, there!" Jim Stover came noisily into the kitchen, positively beaming.

Alice looked up with concern, for Jim was usually very quiet and not given to beaming at all. "Dinner will be ready in five minutes," she anticipated his usual urgent query.

"No hurry," he remarked genially, and Aunt Carrie was so astonished she dropped a fork. "Great day, isn't it?" They stared at him in dismay for Jim never mentioned the weather except with reference to the future rainy-day period. "Say, Alice, how'd you like to run down to Atlantic City with me for a week?"

Alice hastily put down the pot of potatoes she was draining.

"Mr. Pulver suggested it today," Jim explained, nonchalantly. "He said, 'Why don't you take your wife and run down to Atlantic City for a week, Stover? Do you both good. Business is a little dull right now, a good time to play a little.' Can you be ready by Monday?"

Alice gave a little squeal of delight as she flew to him.

Aunt Carrie looked at them doubtfully. "There's a string to it somewhere, Jim. Old Pulver isn't urging anybody to go on vacations!"

Jim laughed boisterously. "No string to this, Aunt Carrie! I guess the Stovers can afford a week at the shore. There happens to be a shoe exhibition at Atlantic City and Mr. Pulver mentioned that I should drop in and look the thing over."

Monday morning they were off, laughing and talking excitedly like two adventurous children. "Mr. Pulver told me the Brandon was as good a place as any to stop at, so I wrote for reservations," Jim mentioned in the train.

Alice gasped. "The Brandon? Why, Jim, it's one of the most expensive hotels down there?" Her gray eyes danced with delighted expectation.

For a moment Jim fell heavily out of his holiday mood. "They'll soak us, I'm afraid. I have the address of a good boarding house, but Mr. Pulver may ask me when we come back how I liked the hotel and then he said he might run down himself over the week-end, so I guess we'd better go there."

"Oh, it'll be heavenly!" Alice sighed rapturously, "but did you take money enough along, Jim?"

"Drew every cent out of the bank. One hundred and fifty dollars. Guess that ought to see us out, eh?"

At the hotel, which towered above Alice's most extravagant dreams, Jim's holiday mood received another dent when he heard the price of the room. He might have changed to the boarding house but Alice firmly refused to move.

The dinner in the vast fairy-lighted dining hall with soft-footed attentive waiters and dreamy, entreating music was to Alice an hour of exquisite joy well worth waiting eighteen years for, but Jim grew heavy with concern.

Out on the boardwalk he told her. "We can't eat there again, Alice. Eight dollars and twenty cents for that dinner!"

"Oh, Jim," she remonstrated, "it was worth a hundred!"

The next day he led her to a cafeteria on a side street where in a din of noise and a smell of fish they ate a lukewarm dinner in less than fifteen minutes. Right there in Alice's breast rose a great protest backed by a tremendous determination. Nothing could move her, she would eat at the hotel; she had some money with her, saved from her allowance. Jim argued, but he could not convince her. This was her first vacation in eighteen years and she was going to enjoy it to the fullest extent.

So Alice ate delicious, expensive meals at the hotel and Jim patronized dairy lunches and cafeterias. Between meals they were mostly together, both tactfully not mentioning the subject of eating, though Alice noticed Jim was continually munching peanuts or salt water taffy. She wondered, a little conscience-stricken, if he were hungry.

Sunday morning Jim came in with a telegram. "Mr. Pulver wants to see me Monday morning early—it's important—so I'll go down and settle the bill while you pack. Let me see" —he fished out his roll of bills— "twelve dollars a day for this room—" He did a little reckoning—"I'll just have enough for the bill, tips and our return tickets."

Alice, who was finishing dressing, grew a little pale. "But Jim," she faltered, "the bill will be much more. You see," nervously, "I just signed checks for my meals, and the money I had with me is all gone but $3. I bought some linens and a dress and—"

They began to figure, Alice straining to remember the amount of her meal checks. Jim fishing in all his pockets for loose change. It was all of no use, they were nearly $50 short.

"It's Sunday," Jim was saying in a hard, flat voice; "I can't telegraph the office. No use to offer a check, I have no funds at the bank. We don't know a soul here to borrow from. Can't stay till tomorrow—got to be in the office and straighten out that misunderstanding or the firm'll have a bad lawsuit." He looked at Alice in reproachful disapproval. "You think I enjoyed eating at those miserable little places? You know how I love good food! You always think all my sacrifices are foolishness; perhaps in the future you'll be more willing to save. This is the result of thoughtless extravagance. Well, I'll go down and face the music!"

She rushed over to him. "Jim, oh, Jim, what can happen?" She clung to him, trembling; "they couldn't arrest us?" Was Mr. Pulver right? Did all vacations end with trouble?"

She insisted upon going down with him to the office. If only she had brought her engagement ring with her they might offer that as security! And Jim's watch was just gold filled! She shrank against Jim at the cashier's cage when after several unsuccessful efforts her husband asked in a low voice for their bill. How cordially the cashier smiled. Alice felt like a criminal.

"The bill?" the cashier fumbled in a file. "Oh," he brightened, "there isn't any. Mr. Pulver—he's patronized our hotel for years—wrote us that he is taking care of that end of your visit. I hope you had a pleasant stay with us, Mrs. Stover?" he waxed very sociable, "and was the shoe exhibition satisfactory from a business viewpoint, Mr. Stover? I used to be in that line myself."

Up in their room the Stovers stood looking at each other for one brief second, then Jim, throwing back his head, burst into a great boyish laugh. "Alice," he gasped wiping his eyes, "don't ever tell a soul, will you, about my being hungry and all, and honey," he drew her close, "we'll have a vacation every year and save a little less!"

Ancient Saying

The famous saying, "You can't eat your cake and have it," is a quotation from a poem by George Herbert, the English poet, who was born in 1593 and who died in 1673. The poem, entitled "The Size," was published with many others after the poet's death. The exact quotation is: "Wouldst thou both eat thy cake and have it?" Plautus, the Roman dramatist who lived more than 200 years before Christ, wrote something similar. He said: "If you spend a thing you cannot have it."

MARRIAGE BUREAU KEPT BUSY ISSUING LICENSES

Twenty-seven Applicants Receive Permits During Past Week

Twenty-seven marriage licenses were issued during the week ending Monday at noon from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, according to A. G. Ross, deputy clerk, bringing the total for the month of November to 65. This is 44 less than the total for the entire month of last year, which was 109.

With only nine more legal days in the month it would be necessary to have five applicants each day to pass last year's record. This is highly improbable, Mr. Ross said.

Four licenses issued were marked "don't publish" and one applicant was refused a permit on account of the youthfulness of one of the parties applying.

JENNY CAME OUT STRONG

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

EVA THURBER and Helen Carver were making out invitations for the open meeting of the Woman's club which was to occur the following Thursday afternoon. The two women constituted the committee for that particular affair and as they were friends and neighbors they could say what they pleased to each other.

"I'd like to ask Jenny Boyd," Eva said.

"We ought to ask her," Helen agreed.

There was a silence during which Helen bit the end of her penholder and Eva made tiny marks with a pencil on paper. Then their eyes met across the library table. They were making out the invitations in Eva's house.

"She's in the neighborhood," Helen went on. "I'm afraid she'd feel it terribly if we didn't ask her."

"Of course she won't go," Eva replied. She hasn't anything to wear. The open meeting is always a dressy occasion. I'm going to wear my new canton crepe."

"It's safer to ask her then," Helen remarked.

"Why, Helen, what do you mean"

"I mean that if she can't go, it's safe to ask her. You know, Eva, she isn't—well, she takes in washings to help out. She is all right as a neighbor, but when it comes to real society—oh, I don't want to appear mean, but you must see that there's quite a—a difference between Jenny Boyd and the rest of us."

"Yes, I see." Eva was grave. "I feel that myself, but I do like her, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, I like her. Well, I'll write the invitation," Helen sighed and began to write.

They never dreamed that Jennie Boyd would accept the invitation, but she did. She came running across next day to thank Helen.

"I appreciate it awfully," she said.

Helen remembering what had passed before she wrote that invitation, squirmed a little.

"We certainly wouldn't think of leaving you out, Jenny," she said.

"I should have been terribly disappointed if I couldn't hear Miss Newton. I'm crazy over Miss Newton," Jenny said. "Ever since I heard she was coming to speak at the meeting of the Woman's club I've just hoped and longed to hear her."

"It—it's going to be something of a dress-up affair, you know, Jenny," warned Helen tentatively.

"I know it. I'll find something to wear," Jenny replied brightly. "Well, I must go. I've got to finish Mrs. Jenk's ironing."

Helen watched her as she flew back home. There was something fine about Jenny Boyd. She had spirit and grace, too. Not every woman could have jumped the puddles in West street as she did without appearing awkward. She had the boyish build that turned motion into poetry.

"I will say for Jenny," thought Helen, "that whatever she wears, even if it is just an old rag of a bungalow apron, becomes her. It's her shape, I suppose."

Eva came in presently. She gave a little gasp when she heard that Jenny Boyd had accepted her invitation.

"What will she wear? She hasn't a thing but that old blue suit. Not a decent blouse or anything! And now that her husband is out of work she won't be able to afford anything. You know the Boyds never go in debt for anything. What they can't pay for they don't have."

Helen bit her lips. She wondered if Eva knew that the hat she was going to wear was not paid for yet. That hat bill was worrying Helen terribly. Still, if one was in society one had to have things like other people.

There was, however, one comfort in the fact that the hat made her look very nice, when at last she was dressed for the meeting. Of course, if Miss Hill was there, it might be a little embarrassing. Miss Hill had made the hat and she never failed to get her pay for any millinery work she did.

Eva joined Helen, and the two women proceeded to Mrs. Alverson's where the meeting was to be held. Mrs. Alverson had plenty of room for such affairs, and besides she was Miss Newton's hostess.

The great parlors, opening into one another, were full of women in their best hats and frocks. There was the scent of cut flowers and the sound of a faint jingle in the kitchen where Allie Scott was making coffee. Miss Newton had come down and was making herself agreeable to everybody. She was a thoughtful-looking plain little woman of sixty. Nobody would ever have guessed from her appearance that she could be a popular leader and organizer of women.

Upon this assembly Helen and Eva were amazed to see Jenny Boyd entering with the calm manner that would have done credit to Mrs. Alverson herself.

"Look!" gasped Helen. "Isn't Jenny stunning?"

Jenny was indeed stunning. What another woman might have looked in the same apparel, one may not say, but Jenny certainly had an air of distinction.

In the first place, her hat was new, a smart little dark blue felt, crisply trimmed with pheasant's feathers. Her old blue suit had been pressed until it had not a crease. With it she wore a silk blouse with a tiny blue line, severely plain. Her gloves were new and beautiful silk stockings showed from underneath the hem of her skirt.

Miss Newton saw her at once and asked for an introduction. Without doubt she was impressed by Jenny; they talked a long while.

After Miss Newton's speech she called for a free expression on the part of the women along the same line.

Jenny Boyd was the only one who spoke!

She spoke almost as well as Miss Newton herself— "I study out a good many things over my ironing board and washtub," she said.

Helen blushed for her, but when she finished everybody cheered.

"Well," Eva said as they returned home, "Jenny certainly came out strong. But where did she get that silk blouse?"

"Land knows. I give up about Jenny.' She certainly is an astonisher."

That evening Helen and Eva were sitting together still talking about their amazing neighbor when the door opened and Jenny, with only a preliminary, "Hoo-hoo!" walked in. Her dark eyes were flashing and she had a glow of happiness on her face that made her something more than interesting to look at.

"How did you like my costume?" she demanded. "I told you I'd find something to wear."

"You looked very nice," said Helen and Eva in a breath. "And your little speech—how could you find so many wonderful things to say?"

Jenny laughed.

"Oh, the speech didn't matter, I'm always thinking. But the clothes took some pains, I can tell you. I worked hard over that rig. And after I'd trimmed that old felt with feathers from the ten-cent store and pressed my suit till I scorched it, I was still out of a blouse. So I borrowed Sam's best shirt. Did you recognize it?"

"Sam's shirt!"

"Yes, and the fun of it was he needed it himself. He was going to meet a man who was going to look him over with a view to giving him a job. He had to wear his old shirt—he's got only two."

"Too bad," murmured Eva.

"Oh, no!" Jenny laughed again. "He got the job—twenty-five hundred a year. I shan't have to wash any more."

Eva and Helen did not dare look at each other. For after all they were good women and they had consciences.

Observe Rigid Rules for Husband's Safety

A wife of a shah of Burma has picturesque rules. Every fifth day she ceases from working and rests. Also she puts water in an earthen cup, filling it to the brim, and sets flowers in the water every day. Were the water to sink or the flowers to droop, that would mean to her an omen of death. In addition, the wife takes care never to sleep in her husband's bed while he is away.

Probably, of such observances, those recorded in an ancient history of Madagascar are the most exacting:

"While the men are at the wars," it says, "and until their return, the women and girls cease not day and night to dance, and neither lie down nor take food in their own houses. Many believe that by dancing they impart strength, courage and good fortune to their husbands."

About Face

Flopsy—I really think he's the world's most attractive man. We spent hours together on the ship coming home last summer and he was frightfully entertaining. He's read simply everything and, dear, he's a perfectly divine dancer. He gave me the whirl of my life—actually monopolized about half my time, but he's really a delightful person to be with—so entertaining and everything, do you know what I mean?

Mopsey—Isn't it nice you know each other so well? You see, he's coming to town for the McTavishes' dinner dance next week.

Flopsy—Oh, is he really? Well, of course, my dear, you know I've only just met him—I mean we hardly know each other at all—I mean he probably won't even recognize me.

Important Element

Boron occurs in combination with other elements, especially in regions that are or have been volcanic. Its principal compounds in nature are borax and boracic acid. Boron is derived by heating boric oxide and powdered magnesium. It was first obtained in its elementary state about 1808 by Gay-Lussac and Thenard in France, and by Sir Humphrey Davy in England. Boron salts are used as a catalytic agent and in metallurgy.—Washington Star.

Earliest Watches

Watch making has been practiced for centuries. Although the early history of watches is somewhat uncertain, the first watch was probably made at Nuremberg, Bavaria, at the beginning of the Sixteenth century, says the Pathfinder Magazine. At first only the hour hand was used. The minute hand was added in the latter part of the Seventeenth century. The flat, round form of the timepiece was introduced during the early part of that century.

Restricted

"There isn't much room in your new apartment, is there?"

"I should say not. We even have to use condensed milk."

Lesson for November 25

THE PRAYERS OF PAUL

LESSON TEXT—Acts 20:36-38; Rom. 1:8-10; Eph. 1:15-23; 3:14-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Prays for His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Prays for His Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul as a Man of Prayer.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Place of Prayer in Paul's Life.

His prayer life most really reveals the character of a man. Paul's prayers explained the power and efficiency of his wonderful ministry. The careful study of these prayers will give us strength, guidance and peace as we go about life's duties. The prayer meeting, believers getting together to pray, has characterized the Christian church throughout its history.

I. Paul's Prayer with the Ephesian Elders (Acts 20:36-38).

Having met with these elders and pointed out to them the perils which confronted them and set forth their responsibility, he knelt down and prayed with them before going to Jerusalem, where bonds and afflictions awaited him. They all wept sore and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him, knowing that this was to be the last sight of him. When believers pray and weep together, they will definitely work together.

II. Paul Praying for the Romans (Romans 1:8-10).

1. He thanked God for their world-famed faith (v. 8). The true minister has no greater occasion for gratitude than the knowledge of genuine faith possessed by followers of Christ.

2. He prayed for them continually (v. 9).

Knowing the far-reaching influence of the church at Rome, he unceasingly prayed for them that their influence might be most widely felt.

3. His supreme burden in prayer was for a successful journey to Rome (v. 10).

He desired to visit Rome in order that he might impart some spiritual gift to the believers there and also to receive some spiritual help from them. The true minister receives a reflex blessing from those to whom he ministers.

III. Paul Praying for the Ephesians.

1. For knowledge concerning Christ (Eph. 1:15-23).

He besought God that the believers at Ephesus might know (1) The hope of their calling (v. 8). Unfaithfulness on the part of believers is frequently due to their lack of a true understanding of their calling. The right understanding of the Christian's hope will make steadfast the lives of believers. (2) The riches of the glory of God's inheritance in the saints (v. 18). It is marvelous to know that the saint has an inheritance in God, but it is more marvelous that God has an inheritance in the saints. (3) The greatness of Christ's power to usward (vv. 19-23). This mighty power was demonstrated in the resurrection of Christ from the dead. The same power which gave the victory over the grave is available for believers.

2. For strength (Eph. 3:11-21).

This prayer was made to God who is the Father of His great family in heaven and in earth. He prayed that the believers might be strengthened with might in their inner man, with the object of being indwelt by Christ. If Christ is to be entertained, the temple needs the divine strengthening. Where the house is strong enough, Christ will come and abide. Likewise, that they might be rooted and grounded in love (v. 17). This establishment in the love of Christ is needed by all so as to prevent them from being turned aside by every wind of doctrine. Also, that they might comprehend the love of Christ (v. 18). This love is wonderful in its dimensions—in its depth, breadth, width and height, it transcends human understanding—the object being that the believer might be filled unto the fullness of God (v. 19). This does not mean that the believer can hold God, but that he can be so related to God that the infinite resources are at his command.

Immortality

Who does not feel that it would change everything if he believed with his whole soul in his immortality? It would supply him with a totally new standard of values. Many things which the world prizes and pursues he would utterly despise, and many things which the world neglects would be the objects of his most ardent pursuit.—James Stalker.

The Bible

The Bible is the most thought-suggesting book in the world. No other deals with such grand themes.—Herrick Johnson.

Makes Us Comforters

God does not comfort us to make us comfortable, but to make us comforters.—J. H. Jowett.

Most Sacred Art

The most sacred art that the soul can engage in is prayer.—A. W. Tozer.

To the first half-million new Ford owners

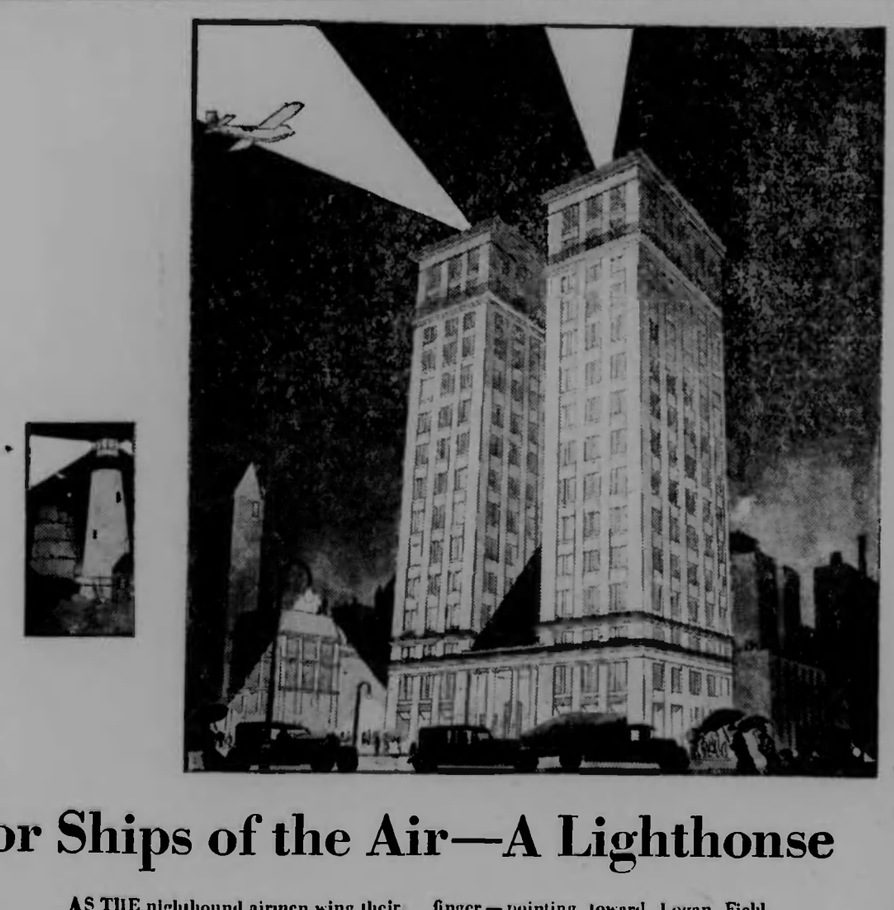
TO THE half-million men and women who have received new Fords in the last eleven months, there is no need to dwell on the performance of the car.

You have tested its speed on the open road. In traffic you have noted its quick acceleration and the safety of its brakes. You know how it climbs the hills. On long trips and over rough stretches you have come to appreciate its easy-riding comfort. Continuous driving has proved its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep.

This is an invitation to you to take full advantage of the service facilities of the Ford dealer organization so that you may continue to enjoy many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring.

The point is this. You have a great car in the new Ford. It is simple in design, constructed of the best materials and machined with unusual accuracy. It is so well-made, in fact, that it requires surprisingly little attention. Yet that doesn't mean it should be neglected. Like every other fine piece of machinery, it will serve you better and longer if given proper care.



One of the best ways to do this is to take your car to the Ford dealer every 500 miles for oiling and greasing and a checking-up of the little things that have such a great bearing on long life and continuously good performance.

Such an inspection may mean a great deal to your car. To you it means thousands upon thousands of miles of motoring without a care—without ever lifting the hood.

Ford dealers everywhere have been specially trained and equipped to service the new Ford. You will find them prompt and reliable in their work, fair in their charges, and sincerely eager to help you get the greatest possible use from your car for the longest period at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the true meaning of Ford Service.

For Ships of the Air—A Lighthouse

AS THE nightbound airmen wing their ways through this evening's darkness and strain their eyes to pick up Baltimore, a new beacon will greet them—a lighthouse of the sky.

Tonight a flare is set for those intrepid nocturnal birds who fly to and over Baltimore. Swinging steadily on its orbit above its neighboring towers of steel and masonry this brilliant beam from the Standard Oil Building will pierce the horizons to guide these flyers. Beside the larger light, a stationary beacon cuts through the darkness, a luminous guiding finger—pointing toward Logan Field.

A new service for the night's air riders.

A new service by an old servant. Many are the years that "Standard" has met the needs of motor boat operators, anticipated the wants of motorists and helped the aviator find his place in the clouds. Road markers, road maps, the best in gasoline, motor oil and personal service have been part of "Standard's" contribution to the motor tourists of the roads. And now the new era brings but a newer service for the motor tourists of the sky.

Lady Nancy Astor, who is greatly interested in welfare work among women, while in Washington recently, took occasion to visit the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company's headquarters building and some of the central offices. She was shown through the company's exchanges and employees' lunch and recreation rooms, and expressed great admiration as to the manner in which the telephone company looked after the welfare of its employees and the excellent conditions under which they work.

Lady Astor showed great familiarity with working conditions generally, and asked many questions of the chief operators and supervisory employees of the telephone company regarding such matters. The visit was entirely informal and grew out of her interest in working conditions for women.

What a Blessing

we have the Red Cross

Now!

NEARLY half a million victims of the West Indies Hurricane last September echoed this sentiment, expressed in hundreds of newspapers throughout the country.

You have read dramatic accounts of the relief work done by the Red Cross during the Hurricane, the Mississippi Floods and sixty-six other disasters last year. You have admired the courage and efficiency of America's world-famed "legion of mercy."

But have you ever thought of your responsibility in supporting the American Red Cross? Have you ralized fully that the Red Cross exists to help you if calamity should visit your community? And that the Red Cross must depend upon the support of the people to be prepared for such emergencies? This support, in the form of annual membership renewals, is separate from special Disaster Relief contributions. And a membership will cost you only one dollar.

Respond to the Red Cross Call now. Do something to help the Red Cross maintain its place as the world's greatest "legion of mercy."

K. OF P'S. "BROADCAST" POVERTY ENTERTAINMENT

About 150 Present At Poverty Party Last Friday Night

The results of a hard struggle to make both ends meet was exemplified last Friday night when the Knights of Pythias held a Poverty Party for members, their wives and sweethearts for which all dressed their parts by appearing in the oldest costumes available.

After a short session of lodge, approximately 150 began the grand entry march and paraded before the judges for their approval. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Naylor won the prize for the most comic couple, Mrs. Grover Stemple for the most comic woman, and Grover Stemple for the most comic man. Door prize was won by Maurice Davis.

The hall represented broadcasting station GLKP, broadcasting a barn dance and "house-warmin'". Numerous telegrams received throughout the program indicated the public approval of the Stringed Band Entertainers, the Four-Horsemen quartet, and the manner in which Walter Dawson, master of ceremonies, presided. Following the serving of refreshments there was an old fashioned square dance in the room adjoining. The entertainment committee responsible for the success of the party, was composed of Mr. Dawson, Paul Naylor and Harry Stemple. Tomorrow night an appropriate program will be given, according to Mr. Stemple.

These bags are sent out each year to men whom would be deprived of the spirit of Christmas were it not for this thought from the women of the American Red Cross. These boxes sent out by the Garrttt county women, under the guidance of Mrs. E. Z. Tower, chairman, contain key rings, pocket knives, wash cloths, memorandum books, pipes, playing cards and puzzles, mechanical pencils and pencil sharpeners, handkerchiefs, housewives, writing pads and envelopes, shaving soap, tooth brush, tooth paste and a small comb with case, and cost $5 each.

The seemingly regular occurrence happened again last Monday night when the Mountain Lake Park postoffice was robbed. Several parcel post packages were rifled of their contents and a raincoat belonging to Postmaster Herbert Leighton was stolen.

It has been the custom of the thieves at previous robberies, according to Mr. Leighton, for them to take a sweater, but this time the robber evidently passed up the opportunity and took the rain coat instead of the usual sweater. Officers were notified as soon as the robbery was discovered and with his bloodhound Sheriff Casteel responded to the call, but no clue as to the identy of the person or persons guilty has been found.

Twenty-three Licenses Are Issued During Past Week

Twenty-three licenses had ben issued during the week ending Tuesday at noon, bringing the total for the month up to eighty-eight. This is 21 less than the record for last year and 38 less than in November of 1924, when 126 were issued.

Seven of those issued during the week were on Saturday, but Monday kept pace with the most popular day by having six granted upon the latter day.

SCOUTMASTER IS CHOSEN FOR LOCAL TROOP OF B. S.

George Hanst To Succeed Rev. Paul Linaweaver

George H. Hanst was appointed Scoutmaster of Oakland Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, on Tuesday night following the acceptance of the resignation of the Rev. Paul G. Linaweaver, who had headed the scout movemenet locally for the past several months and who has accepted a call to become minister of a church in a Washington suburb.

Mr. Hanst has been a resident of Oakland for eight years and is associated with The Republican on the editorial staff.

The Scout Committee, which body made the appointment, expressed their delight in being able to secure the services of Mr. Hanst as scoutmaster of the local organization and pledged their untiring efforts in assisting him to maintain a troop of worthy and active boys.

Commenting on the appointment of Mr. Hanst to the mastership of the troop, a member of the committee stated that while Mr. Hanst has at all times shown a marked interest in the Scout movement, he has not as yet inaugurated a complete program for the conduct of the Troop but understood that while the organization was not of a military nature he would nevertheless devote a portion of his time in giving the boys the benefit of his military experience and would conouct the activities of the Troop in an orderly and systematic manner.

The newly appointed master has had four years of military training at the West Virginia University and holds a commission in the U. S. Reserve Corps.

The troop committee making the appointment consists of W. W. Dawson, Harland L. Jones, F. E. Rathbun, D. R. Sincell and L. M. Fraley.

Plans are being made by J. L. McGlone, county agent, whereby two dairy schools will be held in the county during the months of December and January, providing an adequate number signify their intention of attending the classes.

TWO SERIOUSLY INJURED IN WRECK AT CROSSING

Automobile Runs Into Moving Freight at Weber About 7:00 O'clock Sunday Evening.

Two men were seriously injured and two others were badly bruised and cut when a Willys-Knight sedan in which they were riding ran into a moving westhound freight train at Weber's crossnig, a mile east of Oakland last Sunday evening at seven o'clock.

The injured are:

Olie Smith, sheriff of Pendleton county, West Va., who retires from office on January 1st, broken ribs, a punctured lung, cuts and bruises.

C. D. Harper, assistant cashier of a bank at Circleville, Pendleton county, West Va., cut across forehead, a puncture of his upper lip, and other cuts and bruises about his face and body.

Hugh Hedrick, garageman, Franklin, Pendleton county, driver of the car, minor bruises and cuts and a bruised side.

Andrew Eye, Franklin, sheriff-elect of Pendleton county, the least serious injured of the four, very slight cuts and bruises, although his clothing was almost completely torn from his body.

The four men were en route to their homes from Weston, West Va., where they had taken an insane man earlier during the day. Being strangers in this section they were unaware of the location of the railway tracks and while they saw the blinker light at the point where it was recently erected by the railway company one of the party stated that he thought it marked a crossroads. A terrific snow storm was raging at the moment the car was approaching the tracks and this may have been a contributing cause for the accident. The train was moving at the usual rate of speed and when the driver realized his position he stated that he turned his car to the left and after striking the train it was carried for some distance.

The injured men were brought to town by passing motorists and were given surgical aid at the office of Dr. McComas. Mr. Smith and Mr. Harper were sent to the Western Maryland Hospital in Cumberland on Monday morning, while the other members of the party went to their homes from Keyser, at which point they were met by friends.

The automobile was almost completely demolished.

NEARY EVERY COUNTY IN THE STATE WAS AFFECTED

After Care of Infantile Paralysis Given By Dr. Riley

Special clinics for the follow-up care of recent sufferers from infantile paralysis are being held in Baltimore City and in the sections of the State most seriously affected by the recent outbreak of that disease. The clinics are conducted by specialists from the different hospitals and the State and city departments of health, the deputy and local health officers and public health nurses, assisted by the Maryland League for Crippled Children are joining in a combined effort to bring the benefit of prompt after care and treatment to every individual in need of it.

"Two things have been learned in regard to the care of infantile paralysis since the great outbreak in 1916,' Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health said in announcing the arrangements for the clinics, "the possibilities of help thru the early use of convalescent serum and through the prompt after care and training—under skilled advice—of the damaged muscles and nerves. Both have been applied in the cave of the sufferers in the year's outbreak.

The counties that were hit hardest in this year's outbreak were Garrett and Allegany, in each of which there were 35 cases. Baltimore county came next with 27 cases; Anne Arundel had 9; Prince George's and Washington counties each had 7 cases; Carroll, Frederick and Cecil each had 6 cases; Howard had 5; Harford and Montgomery each had 4; Dorchester 3; Calvert and Queen Anne's 2 each, and Wicomico and Worcester had one case.

"From the first of January of the current year until after the middle of November, 279 cases of infantile paralysis were recorded in Maryland; 156 in the counties and 123 in Baltimore City. There were 12 deaths in the counties and 11 in Baltimore City. In the epidemic of 1916, 353 cases were recorded in Maryland, 203 in Baltimore City, with 70 deaths, and 147 in the counties with 47 deaths.

"Infantile parlysis is one of the diseases that fares up in cycles. It is with us always, but in the 'off' years we are likely to have comparatively few cases. Then every four or five years there will be four times as many. We had 221 cases in 1921 and 200 in 1924. The total number this year was greater than at any time since 1916.

"Through the ready cooperation of the hospitals in Baltimore City, especially the isolation department of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Sydenham, the Children's Hospital School, and the Kernan Hospital for Crippled Children, many of the patients in the counties were brought at once into the hospitals where they had the benefit of the best that science and skill could give, and convalescent serum was furnished—rushed—from these same hospitals, for those who were cared for in their own homes.

"The clinics for follow-up care began in Garrett and Allegany counties before the outbreak had reached its peak. For the benefit of patients in other sections of the State after care clinics are being held in Baltimore City. Every physician in the State has been notified of the dates and has been invited to bring or send to these clinies any patients who are in need of such care—whether sufferers in the recent outbreak or from earlier ones.

"Parnlysis does not accompany every case of infantile paralysis, but it does occur in a large number of cases and the most favorable time to strengthen and to begin to train and re-educate the damaged muscles and nerves is as soon as possible after the attack. The clinics are being held by specialists of wide experience. We hope they will reach every individual in the State in need of such care."

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop

Due to various and sundry events, expected and unexpected, what the readers see here will be all there will be to Scoop this week. Even the Santa Claus letters will have to be held over until next week. All of the esteemed gentlemen who promised to write letters wanted more time to think. The question is whether or not time will improve them.

Thanksgiving also comes but once a year, and Scoop has to see his Alma mater trim Washington and Jefferson in the annual Turkey day football game at Morgantown, even with the snow six inches deep. The other members of the staff would also like to eat a little turkey.

For other excuses, if they are necessary, please look on the pages of The Republican and find tax sales, financial statements, which are no half so important as Scoop from a newsy point of view, yet are quite a necessity on the pay end of the business. Without them there would be no Scoop for he would be working in other climes.

I forgot to mention basketball, play practice, etc. They have been interfering with my business just a little.

IN MEMORIAN

In sad but loving memory of my dear husband, George W. Sterling, who departed this life September 8, 1923.

Today recalls sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And the one who thinks of him today
Is the one who loved him best.

Rest in pence, dear husband—
Two long months nre passed away;
You are gone but not forgotten,
As I think of you each day.

What happy days we enjoyed together,
How sweet their memory still;
But they have left me an aching heart
The world can never fill.

But again I hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled,
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

Oh, how sweet it will he in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips and harps in our hnnds
When we meet one another ngain.

His loving wife, Mrs. G. W. S.

GRANTSVILLE.

Thanksgiving Dinner

The home of Miss Christine Winterberg was the scene of a very happy gathering when the Ladies Sewing club, organized some years ago but nbandoned, held their annual turkey dinner on Thursday at one o'clock. A delicious dinner of turkey and dressings was prepared and served by the ladies. The tables were attractively decorated with lighted candles and red and green favors.

The blessing was asked by Miss Mollie Dorsey and Mrs. J. H. Dorsey was toastmistress, after which a rising vote of thanks was given Miss Winterberg for her hospitality and the very happy day spent in her home.

Mrs. R. C. Bowen, of Cumberland, a charter member, was present as the guest of honor. Other members who were present were: Misses Gertrude Hone, Mary Blocher, Margaret Dorsey, Mary Dorsey, Christina Winterberg; Mesdames J. H. Dorsey, V. L. Blocher, W. E. Stanton, Annie Getty, Ella Keller, C. H. Bender and Mrs. J. F. Fahey.

Short Course

A short course on poultry was given last week by Prof. Rice, of the University of Maryland. A very large attendance was present at every meeting except Thursday afternoon because of weather conditions.

Prof. Rice gave several splendid talks on the "Brooding and care of baby chicks," "Feed and care of the laying hens," "Culling of poultry and how to detect diseases of poultry."

A joint discussion was held by the members revealing the experiences of each other, Friday night, when a total of about fifty people were present. Refreshments were served by the boys of the Agriculture department.

Bridge Party

One of the most attractive bridge and "500" parties was held Monday night at the Victoria hotel by the Women's Community Club. There were eight tables of "500" and seven of bridge in play. This was the first of a series of card parties to be held by the club. The prizes jn five hundred were: ladies, high, Mrs. C. A. Bender; gentlemen, high, Otto Bender; consolation, N. R. Patton. In bridge, ladies, high, Mrs. V. L. Blocher; mens, high, Dr. J. H. Dorsey; consolation, Bryon Bender.

George W. Slick

All but the very young in the Grantsville community felt a tightening of the heart and a pang of sincere regret when the word came that "Jessie" Slick had been called to his eternal rest. "Jessie" the irrepressible, who all of his long life, up to about seven years ago, had lived in and near Grantsville and whose sparkling wit and ready tongue has long been a tradition here. His many lovable qualities carved a permanent place for him in the hearts of the people of Garrett county.

George W. Slick died on Wednesday, November 21, Washington, D. C. His funeral was held on Friday, November 23, 1928. He was 83 years old. A devout Catholic all of his life, he was taken to the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, where mass was sung, and thence to the Arlington National cemetery, where he was received by a corps of the United States Army and borne by them to his final home among our hero dead and among his old companions of the Grand Army of the Republic with whom he marched during those terrible days of the Cival War.

Personal Mention

Mrs. R. C. Bowen, of Cumberland, attended the annual turkey dinner given at the home of Miss Christine Winterberg in Grantsville one day last week.

Miss Emily Friel, of Kitzmiller, was a guest of the Casselman Hotel over the week-end.

The pupils of the Dorsey school, in this community who were neither absent nor tardy during the month of November were Dorothy Fresh, Clyde Krause, Ellis Durst and Allan Fresh. These children represent 25 per cent of the enrollment.

Mr. U. M. Stanton has returned after visiting friends in Washington, D. C., for several days.

The socials held at the Mar's Hill, Engle and Negro Mountain schools during the past week were all great successes.

Miss Lucretia Boucher, of Cumberland, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Phineas Boucher, in this place.

LID LIFTED A LITTLE ON THE STATE ROAD MESS BUT NOT ILLUMINATING AND DISCREDITS ADMINISTRATION

(From The Observer, Baltimore)

Well, the lid on the State Roads scandal has at least been lifted a little, but only a little, by Governor Ritchie's "Advisory" Committee. The public—the discerning portion of the public—will be sorely disappointed to note that a committee of three prominent business men undertook such a task as was involved in this case and then did not finish it. Perhaps they thought it too big a job to handle without pay. All of the three are busy men in their regular pursuits.

The public, I take it, well knew after the State Auditor's men were called off the roads investigation that the stealing amounted to much more than the $127,000 admitted by State's Attorney O'Conor. The public has waited months and months for the facts and now the committee tells us that the amount illegally taken by employees and others was $176,183 and that there are "bills receivable" amounting to $250,000. The latter is something new, for up to this time the public did not know that the Roads Commission had "bills receivable."

No Facts As to Commission's Operations

The report as handed out at the Belvedere Hotel on Monday night, accompanied by a statement from the Goverenor in which he twiddled, tells little that the public wanted to know.

The public wanted to know what if any contractors had special pulls with the Commission.

The public wanted to know to what extent the road building and the handing out of the State's money was conducted as part of a political machine. There is no such information forthcoming. Instead there is talk that if possible some twenty persons are to be prosecuted and a bank or banks are to be sued to recover money stolen by the State's employees.

We find nothing in the brief report that really enlightens the public. We do find, however, a recommendation that the office of treasurer of the Roads Commission be created, thus providing another job for one of the Governor's political favorites. There is no explanation of why the State Roads Commission should need a treasurer any more than does the Highways Engineer of Baltimore city. The Highways Engineer of Baltimore city has no treasurer. The Sewerage Engineer has no treasurer. The Fire Department has no treasurer. The School Board, dispensing many millions, has no treasurer. The Park Board has no treasurer. All these many millions are kept in the City treasury and therefore intelligent persons will wonder why the Governor's "Advisory" Committee wants to create another State job.

Talk of Laxity Raises Question

It would appear to one reading the scanty report of the "Advisory" Committee that if the supervision of the handling of the roads money has been lax the laxity should have been corrected long ago. The stealings were discovered in February last by the State authorities and by others with ordinary eyesight some time before that. Now after nearly a year has passed and millions of additional dollars have been spent, there is talk of remedying the laxity.

If the "Advisory" Committee had any legal advice it must have discovered before it got very far that the Roads Commission had been proceeding in wholesale disregard of law ever since Governor Ritchie has been in office. And if it looked a bit further it must have become convinced that the Governor knew of this disregard of the statutes. He is the man responsible for the budgets.

Stealing Began With Ritchie Administration.

It is more than significant that the systematic stealings did not begin until the first fiscal year of the Ritchie administration. Prior to that there was a small piece of thievery, but it was discovered within the Commission. The Governor superseded the Commission named by Governor Harrington four years earlier and put in his own favorites. It wasn't long after the new administration had taken hold when Governor Ritchie said to the writer of these lines:

"In my opinion the man in the street, as you call him, doesn't care how you spend his money after he has once paid his taxes."

Some employees of the Roads Commission evidently got wind of this devil-may-care attitude on the part of the Governor, for they proceeded to do what they had not done before and waded in, the figures of the auditors showing that they became increasingly active from year to year.

Governor Took Over Auditor's Department

Blame has been attached to the office of the State Auditor for not uncovering the thievery sooner. But before the State auditors there was an auditor of the Roads Commission placed there by Governor Ritchie.

Later, the Governor, by means of legislation he fathered, took the State Auditor's office into his own hand, appointing a new auditor. The State Auditor who was superseded was an expert accountant. The new State Auditor picked by the Governor was not an accountant at all. The Governor knew all that. But that was his way of doing things, figuring as he was on getting a new term of office and then running for President. The State Auditor's office was made part of his political machine while the employees of the State Roads Commission proceeded to loot the strong box.

Would Sue the Banks to Appease The Public

Right on the heels of the "Advisory" Committee's report, Roads Chairman Mackall opens his mouth again and starts to talk of suing the banks, the principal one among them being the Union Trust Company, of which State Treasurer John M. Dennis is the President. I wonder how Mr. Dennis feels about that, inasmuch as he was reputed to have had a hand in getting the appointment of Roads Chairman for Mr. Mackall.

Attorney General Robinson is quoted as saying the banks will have to pay losses on "forged" checks. Possibly; I am not a lawyer, and neither are many members of the bar. But according to the information I have been getting the money was not scooped out of the Roads Commission with forged checks at all but with checks signed by those authorized by the Roads Commission or its chairman to sign such checks as they saw fit. The sum of $50,000 was kept in this fund and when it got low it was stocked up again and the pilfering went on right under the noses of the members of the Commission, who were so busy with parades and toy balloons they could not notice what was being done.

Of course we may have some fine law suits. I recall that the first Secretary of State under Governor Harrington withdrew from the State Tresury certain funds it was contended he should not have had and put them in a bank of his own selection. Later the State sued to recover the money. The State never got the money. The State never got any money and so far as I know the thing went to seed. They were all good Democrats.

Same Method Followed In Governor's Office

It is plain that the chief trouble with the Roads Commission was largely due to the custom of drawing money from the State Treasury in a lump sum and expending it without presenting any vouchers. The Governor could have stopped this but he did not. He knew it. No, he did not stop it for he has been pursuing the same course in regard to his own office. He has at his disposal several different funds in addition to his salary. The contingent fund the constitution requires him to report to the Legislature and this he does in some indefinite sort of way but the other funds he draws from the State Treasury quarterly and puts them in bank in his own name. Checks are then drawn on these funds set aside for this or for that and as far as I have been able to ascertain no vouchers explanatory of these expenditures have been presented to the State Comptroller since Governor Ritchie has been in Office. If I am in error, I will be glad to be corrected publicly and to be shown that the Governor has adopted the only correct method of accounting for public monies.

Senator Levin Takes Shot At Prevailing Evils

Now comes Senator Levin calling attention to the vast concentration of absolute power in the hands of the Governor through the making of appointments without the consent of the Senate. He recalls that the Legislature passed a bill correcting this autocratic system but that the Governor used his veto power to kill it and thus retain his absolutism. The Senator indicates that the question will be taken up again by the next Legislature. It should be and that promptly. The Governor has been prating about home rule, local self-government and all that sort of stuff but when the thing comes right to his own door he wants none of it.

Naturally the Wet Blanket, now Maryland's chief laughing stock, takes the Governor's side. The editors have to take their orders from the financiers for whom they work and who are close to the Governor.

The argument advanced by the Governor's partisans is to the effect that the advice and consent of the Senate means interference by politicians. Well, had the politicians of the Senate had a chance to approve or disapprove the appointments to the Public Service Commission could that body be more diligent in rnising street car fares than it has been? Had the politicians of the State Senate had authority to pass on appointments to the State Roads Commission would we have had a bigger scandal than we now have—making the State Government a veritable stench in the nostrils of decent people? I think not.

Prominent Democrats Defeated in a Bunch

Never before have I seen so many prominent Maryland Democrats defeated on the same day as I saw on November 6. Look at that list of Presidential electors. Down they went: Frank A. Furst, John M. Dennis, Emerson C. Harrington, R. Walter Graham, all in a hunch. And that is not the worst of it. A glance at the financial report of the Democratic campaign committee shows that Messrs. Furst and Dennis each contributed $3,000 to the campaign fund, while Mr. Graham, more modest and circumspect, chipped in $500, and all for naught, the Republican electors winning by more than 77,000.

The Democrats spent more than $160,000 in the campaign while the Republicans spent about $20,000 less. And the State would have gone just about the same way if neither side had expended a penny. It should hut probably will not be a lesson to somebody.

P. S.—I almost forgot Senator Bruce. He, too, spent a few ducats.

In the Old, Old Fashion

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

"MOTHER," said Eve Leslie a little impatiently, as she swung to and fro in the couch hammock on the broad piazza at the Leslie house, "I am afraid that I am a failure!"

Mrs. Leslie lifted her eyes from her sewing and smiled at her charming daughter, her brows lifted in mock wonder. "A failure? A girl who has been a leader in her classes ever since she went to school—who carried off honors at high school graduation, and brought home honors from college—my dear little girl, you are not a failure in that way! And as a daughter—you have always been most loving, willing, helpful."

Eve blushed and looked ashamed, "It is lovely of you to say all that, mother, dear, because I know you really believe it," said the girl quickly, "but in spite of all that, don't you really think that to be truly successful, a girl should attract the love of some nice man?"

"Yes, indeed," said Mrs. Leslie, cheerily. "I thought you had, Eve. How about Jim Field?"

"Oh—Jim!" exclaimed Eve rather vaguely. "Somehow, he didn't mean anything to me, mother. Why, he didn't even have a car!"

"I know you are fond of a car," admitted Mrs. Leslie, "but I always understood that when a girl loved a man—his possessions did not count so very much."

"I never cared for Jim, anyway—he was a very nice boy, but he could not dance and I did tire of him—so when he became angry because I would not have him here at the house once or twice a week, it was a great relief to me. And then, of course, Phil Briggs came along with his snappy roadster, and we had such fun going about, but"—

"But what?"

"Nothing, mother, not much, only he became such a bore after awhile! Instead of driving over to the hotel for a beach dance or a moonlight swim or something, he took it into his head that he must come to see me every week at the house here—not go anywhere at all!"

"I see," murmured Mrs. Leslie. "And I suppose it was the same way with John Bliss and Frank Clark and the Kittredge boy—they all wanted to come to the house."

"But I do love to drive," sighed Eve.

"Then, my dear, take the money that Great Aunt Beulah left to you, and buy a car and get your pleasure in that way when you feel like it."

So Eve followed her mother's advice and bought a car in which Eve and her parents or her friends rode and enjoyed themselves very much.

It was about this time that Peter Allen came to Rosedale to work in his uncle's bank. He lived at Judge Allen's house, for the judge was his grandfather. Peter was a fine young man—college bred, as all the Allens of Rosedale had been, he was very clever, and a splendid business man. People said that the Allen bank would eventually come to young Peter. He was a tall, good looking fellow of five and twenty, with charming manners. The second time that he met Eve Leslie he asked permission to call.

"Your house is such a homey place," he confessed, "I am hoping that you will let me come and see you."

"Of course," Eve found herself saying. "You will like my mother and father—really, I can vouch for both of them!"

"Peter Allen?" asked Mrs. Leslie. "Why he must be Polly Allen's son. We were great friends, as girls."

"What shall I do with him?" begged Eve forlornly. "You know I hate to entertain them."

Mrs. Leslie smiled. "Most girls are born with the instinctive knowledge of how to treat a young man when he comes to see them. I believe I was born with a sort of intuition, what do you think, Ned?"

Mr. Leslie grinned, and lighted his pipe. "Well, I never remember having a better time than when I came to the Tyrells house, and I thought Evelyn, your mother here, Eve, was the sweetest, prettiest girl I ever saw! I'm mighty glad that I didn't do my courting in these days, and have to put my girl into the seat of a swift car and then go galloping all over the county looking for something to do! There was always something to do at the Tyrells, eh, Evelyn?"

So that night when Peter Allen paid his first visit to the Leslie's old-fashioned place, he found the great living-room bathed in soft light from shaded lamps, and with a bright fire on the hospitable hearth. They played cards, they talked and told stories, and the time passed like magic. Then, Mr. Leslie, coming home from his lodge, brought a box of ice cream, and Mrs. Leslie had "happened" to make a delicious layer cake that day, and after they had eaten, Eve played the piano, and they sang together.

"I hope you will invite me again," said Peter, "I'd like to bring my violin over—"

"Oh, you must come," cried Eve swiftly, happier than she had ever been before. So, in the old, old way of a man wooing a maid, Eve Leslie was wooed and won by Peter Allen, but the amusing item to Mrs. Leslie was the fact that Peter Allen did not own an automobile, until his grandfather gave him one for a wedding gift!

TEACHERS' PENSION ACT EXPLAINED BY GOV. RITCHIE

State's Executive Sets Out the Obligations of Commonwealth Under New Law.

(Baltimore Sun, Nov. 30, 1928.)

Governor Ritchie yesterday issued a statement explaining the State's obligations under the new Teachers' Retirement act and the operation of the law.

His explanation, he said, was not designed to criticize the act, but to clarify what he believed was a public lack of understanding concerning it.

The Governor's statement follows:

"I want to advise the public of what will be the effect on future State appropriations of the Teachers' retirement system, which was enacted by the Legislature of 1927.

$844,017 For 1930.

"The appropriation for retired teachers for the fiscal year 1930 will be $844,047, and for 1931, 885,873. These figures compare with appropriations of $80,000 for 1925 and $100,000 for 1929, made under the old system of a flat pension of $400 for retired teachers.

"The State's $844,047 appropriation for 1930 includes $411,893 for Baltimore city teachers and the $885,873 State appropriation for 1931 includes $432,487 for Baltimore city teachers.

State Aids City

"The Baltimore city teachers never before have been included in the State's pension system. They always have been cared for under Baltimore city's own system. The Legislature, however, included them under the new law, and inasmuch as the Baltimore city law, of course, will continue, the result will be a contribution by the State to Baltimore city's retirement fund for Baltimore city teachers of $411,893 for 1930 and $432,487 for 1931.

"I am issuing this statement not to criticize in any way the appropriations required by the new law, but in order that the public may understand the State's obligations under it, and also to explain, as well, as a very difficult and complicated subject can be explained briefly, the operation of the new law, I do not think that either is very well understood by the public at large.

Administered By Board.

"The Teachers' Retirement act provides for the raising of a fund which is invested and administered by a board of trustees, consisting of the State Superintendent of Schools, the State Comptroller, the State Treasurer and two elected teachers. Ultimately this fund will amount to perhaps $12,000,000 or more.

"The fund and its income is employed to pay teachers and other school officials covered by the law (1) an annuity and (2) a pension upon their retirement for age or disability. Retirement is optional at 60 years of age. Death benefits are also provided for.

"The teachers themselves make up the annuity fund, except that the State, as will be explained, contributes during the first thirty years, and the State makes up the pension fund.

Annuity and Pension Same

"The plan is worked out so that the amount of the annuity and the amount of the pension will be approximately the same, and both together will be a certain proportion of the teachers' average annual salary during the ten years preceding retirement.

"The amount in dollars, of course, will vary according to length of service, but in the average case the total retired pay will be about half of the teacher's average salary for the preceding ten years.

"The salary now paid elementary school teachers average something less than $1,300 a year, and the salaries of the high school teachers average about $1,400.

Contributions Vary.

"The principal of the annuity fund is made up of annual contributions from the teachers out of their salaries, which vary according to age and sex from 4.08 per cent to 7.75 per cent. These percentages always will remain practically the same. The teacher is permitted to withdraw his or her contribution at any time.

"The existing teachers all go under the system, and the State is required to assume the 'prior service' obligations of the existing teachers, by which is meant the amount these teachers would have contributed to the annuity fund if the law had been in effect when they entered the State's teaching service.

Liability For Prior Service

"The total liability of the State for this prior service is approximately $5,100,000, and this is amortized over a period of thirty years, by which time it is assumed that all of the then existing teachers will have contributed to the fund from the beginning of their service, so that there will be no longer any prior service charges for the State to meet.

"This results in making the State's annual appropriation for the next thirty years for 'prior service' 3.83 per cent of the State's educational pay roll, and the State's annual appropriation during that same thirty-year period for the pension fund will be 2.86 per cent of the pay roll.

"At the end of this thirty years the State's appropriation for prior service, of course, will stop, and thereafter the State will pay only the 2.86 per cent of the pay roll for the pension fund, which percentage will remain practically the same.

"This 2.86 per cent from the State for the pension fund is smaller than the teachers' contributions to the annuity fund of from 4.08 per cent to 7.75 per cent of their salaries, because allowance is made for teachers who do not remain in the service until retirement or who withdraw their annuity contribution before retirement.

State's Obligations

"The State's obligations under this law are as follows:

"For the fiscal year 1930 the State's appropriations for prior service 3.83 per cent of the pay roll, and for pensions 2.86 per cent, or 6.69 per cent in all, will be $844,047. For the fiscal year 1931 it will be $885,873, the increase being due to the fact that the appropriation is based upon the pay roll, which increases on an average of three per cent a year.

"Until this law went into effect the State, as already stated, was paying a flat pension of $40 to retired teachers, the annual appropriations for 1925, 1926 and 1927 being $80,000; for 1928, $90,000, and for 1929, $100,000. These appropriations, however, have not been sufficient to pay these flat pensions to all retired teachers.

"The State's contribution to the retirement fund under the new law this year is $197,000, but 1930 is the first year the State's full obligation under this law will begin."

Local Benefits of System

From the office of the Board of Education of Garrett county the following data with reference to the interest Garrett county teachers have in the Teachers' Retirement System, has been obtained:

Total number of members during 1927-1928 .....178

Total number of members during 1928-1929 .....182

The payments or contributions as made by Garrett county teachers to the treasury of the system run as follows:

|---|---|
| September, 1927 | $874.82 |
| October, 1927 | 874.20 |
| November, 1927 | 874.51 |
| December, 1927 | 876.69 |
| January, 1928 | 891.44 |
| February, 1928 | 886.93 |
| March, 1928 | 885.59 |
| April, 1928 | 882.31 |
| May, 1928 | 882.31 |
| June, 1928 | 882.31 |
| Total | $8,811.11 |

The lowest percentage of any teacher's annual salary as paid to the treasurer of the retirement system during the school year was 4.10; the highest, 7.75.

For the two months of the present school year for which teachers have made contributions to the treasurer of the retirement fund are as follows:

|---|---|
| September, 1928 | $946.40 |
| October, 1928 | 956.25 |
| Total | $1,902.65 |

11 LICENSES SATURDAY GIVE BOOST TO DECEMBER

November Marriages Fell Nine Short of Last Year's Record

A good start for the month of December in the number of marriage licenses issued at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit court, was made on Saturday, December 1, when 11 applications were granted. The average number obtained during this month has been in the vicinity of the 100 mark for the past several years, but the highest number was granted in 1920 when 131 applied. Last year there were 98.

The twenty-three marriage licenses issued during the past week ending, Monday at noon, brought the November total for this year to 100, 9 less than last year and 26 less than the record made in 1924.

Clarksburg, W. Va., led the field in the number of its residents obtaining permits this week. One license issued was marked "don't publish," while one applicant was refused a license.

Ralph Lorraine Smouse, 24, clerk, and Helen Louise Michael, 18, both of Oakland.

Max Noel Long, 21, clerk, and Ocie Layfield, 19, both of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Willie Frank Whitehair, 29, mechanic, Friendsville, Md., and Marie Alice Humberson, 16, (parents' consent), near Hazelton, W. Va.

George Steve, Jr., 26, laborer, and Cora Sutton, 19, both of Smithfield, Pa.

Melvin James Martin, 21, salesman, and Ethel Marion Springer, 18, student, both of Uniontown, Pa.

Marwood Arthur Edwards, 21, truck driver, and Ruth Owens, 18, student, both of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Rollyn Ligget Dowell, 23, rubber worker, and Margaret Josephine Herget, 19, both of Akron, Ohio.

"COME ABOARD!"

Flying smoothly over the spray-tossed waves, the ship of health is coming into port. Full sail, with pennants floating against the blue sky, she is homeward bound with her cargo of priceless treasure. On her main-sail is the emblem of her successful trip—the double-barred cross. She is a Roman galleon and her oarsmen may not rest in their efforts to bring her safely home. She is an argosy, sailing with favorable winds, and she is symbolic of the happiness that can come from perfect health.

Twenty-four years ago the ship of health was launched—the educational campaign to control tuberculosis was started. During those years in both rough unsettled weather as well as on fair, smooth seas, the ship has steadily kept to her course. Men with vision have been at her wheel and her crew has been made up of hundreds of partners who have "come aboard" to help in making the voyage prosper.

And these are some of the ways by which the crew has been successful in overcoming sea monsters, buccaneers, hurricanes and typhoons—in other words the old pirate—sickness. Organization of the voluntary health agencies that carry on the educational campaign under the leadership of the National Tuberculosis Association has been enlarged from five States, who in 1904 actively worked together against tuberculosis, to forty-eight states with anti-tuberculosis associations. Affiliated with the States there are today 1,400 associations and societies thruout the country.

There are now 608 sanatoria and hospitals with 72,723 beds for tuberculosis patients in the United States. In 1904 there were only 100 hospitals with less than 8,000 beds. There are over 3,600 especially trained tuberculosis nurses and thousands of others who are doing tuberculosis work. There are 600 tuberculosis clinics where persons may be examined to keep track of their health. At preventoria and at summer health camps and in the hundreds of open air schools, mal-nourished and substandard children are being bult up in order to resist disease. Coordinated research work is being conducted in the best laboratories in the belief that some day a cure will be found.

One of the most forceful and permanent methods used in controlling tuberculosis is education in the ways of health. The continuous plea for people to get plenty of rest, exercise, fresh air and nourishing food and that they go to their doctors for periodic physical examinations is really the keynote of the campaign. In the spring the tuberculosis associations will conduct an early diagnosis campaign with the slogan "Early Discovery, Ecarly Recovery. Let Your Doctor Decide." Then in December during the annual Christmas seal sale, a big publicity campaign is carried on to teach the public the importance of sickness prevention.

At this time the work of the association is greatly aided by the cooperation of newspapers, magazines, house organs and trade journals who contribute editorial and advertising space for the Christmas messages of health.

The ways by which we measure the success or failure of any venture is to view the accomplished result. And the fact that during these years the death rate from tuberculosis has been reduced from 200 per 100,000 in 1904 to 87 in 1926 seems to be evidence enough that the work has been worth while.

The saying, "When my ship comes in" is a happy motto for tuberculosis workers. That day will come when tuberculosis is as well controlled as smallpox, plague and yellow fever. For the present, however, it is necessary to keep the ship of health constantly plying its course toward the desired port. Everybody has a chance to "come aboard" in December when the tiny seals are being bought and sold.

COOLIDGE OR HOOVER?

Whose name is to be associated with the signing of the treaty outlawing war? Will it be Coolidge or Hoover?

Should Mr. Coolidge submit the Kellog Treaty to the Senate immediately upon its convening in December, should the Committee on Foreign chairman, act upon it promptly and report it favorably and without reservations to its body and the Pact go to the President for signature during the last days of his term, then the name will be that of Calvin Coolidge.

Not often does a world event link itself in historically with a name. When it does that name is immortalized; and Mr. Coolidge is known as being lucky. Still even his pulse must quicken its tempo, calm as it is judged to be, at the thought of being written on the page of history, not only as one of the presidents of the Relations, of which Senator Borah is United States, but as a man who helped to shape and brought to a successful completion, one of the upward steps of the world—the man of a decisive era.

Yet rumor is giving accounts of deals and wirepullings, which may hinder the treaty from being presented to the Senate, or, being presented, from early and favorable consideration.

A tremendous force of public opinion, that is of mass opinion, is backing the treaty. Mr. Coolidge may be able to translate it--and put it into action. Also he may understand the questions which would be asked about a country—or the president of that country—which, proposing a treaty to other countries and obtaining the signatures of all these first asked to sign and the pledged support of three times as many more, yet fails itself to ratify and at an early date?

Twice before has the United States led up to a decisive question of world cooperation and then herself side-stepped. Can she afford to do so now?

For the luck and for the glory of Mr. Coolidge it may be added that the Kellogg Treaty in its vast significance has been compared to the two greatest steps of world history: The Magna Charta, and the Declaration of the Rights of Man. The Magna Charta was the beginning of the fulfillment of a great hope for the English, the Declaration of Rights for the liberty of the French. But the Pact of Paris is the beginning of the fulfillment of a great hope for the world.

Moons and moons ago when the Governor named his "Advisory" Committee to report on the State Roads scandal, Billy Curran or some of his people pushed through the City Council a resolution congratulating Mr. Ritchie on his "masterly" handling of the matter. The resolution was generally laughed at but now it appears that it was based on substance, since it is seen that the Governor used that very committee to stave off a real investigation of the operations of the Roads Commission which almost everybody now knows has been the main wheel of his political machine.

The National Convention of the Young People's Society Christian Endeavor This Year Was the Biggest in This Generation.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I quote below from an article in The Christian Endeavor World of November 15th, published in Boston as the official organ of the International Society of Christian Endeavor (the young people's society in the Presbyterian churches) which ought to be of interest to your entire community and cause everybody to sit up and take notice in order to prepare for next summer:

The National Convention of The Young People's Christian Union, the Christian Endeavor organization of the United Presbyterian church, this year was the biggest in this generation. Three thousand, two hundred and eighty-two delegates registered, representing 49 of our 57 Presbyteries from coast to coast. A great banquet, in which 1678 persons were served a course dinner, stands out as a feature that perhaps was never approached in any other youth gathering in the land. The 1929 convention will be held in Mountain Lake Park, Md.

I wonder if the people in the local communities realize what organization and cooperation is necessary to prepare for a such a convention with credit to themselves and comfort and satisfaction to their guests. I also wonder that, apparently, no definite steps seem to have been taken, save an easy and rather indefinite canvass by a single individual among the cottages of the Park for spare rooms. How will they house and feed six times the number of young people they have been accustomed to while they thought that was a big job?

The quality and quantity of the water supply at the Park is an important consideration, also.

Yours sincerely,
T. D. RICHARDS.

Two Fire Alarms This Week But Property Not Damaged

The fire department responded to one alarm this week, and was preparing to answer the call to a second one when a message came stating that the blaze had been extinguished.

Monday, at 11:45, an alarm was sent in from the Auto Electric garage, but the fire was extinguished before firemen started.

OAKLAND A. A. TO OPEN SEASON WITH KINGWOOD

Play Starts at 8:15—Local Team Line-up Same as Last Year With Addition of Pollock

Oakland A. A. basketball team will play its opening game of the season tomorrow night at 8:15 when it will meet the strong Kingwood independent team at Naylor's Hall, Oakland.

Kingwood has a number of new men in its lineup and is considerably improved over last year, according to a statement issued by its manager. Last year the Oakland team divided with Kingwood, winning its game at Oakland and losing at Kingwood a few weeks later.

Oakland will present practically the same lineup as last year with the addition of Pollock, formerly star forward on the Oakland high school team and a member of Oakland A. A. two years ago. The team will open with "Buck" Killen, "Hen" McComas and Pollock on the forward line, with Nally and Hanst as the defensive men. Kahl, Stanton, Kerchival and Sanders will form the reserve material and they have been showing up well in practice sessions lately. They will in all probability get into the fray.

The final practice session will be held tonight and the Oakland boys are preparing to make this season as successful as the one last year. The admission will be 25 and 50 cents and the veteran ticket men, Messrs. E. G. Naylor and Harry White will be in charge of the gate. There will be a preliminary game at 7:30.

Games are now pending with the Altoona Overlands and the Cumberland Knights of Columbus teams to be played in Oakland during the Christmas holidays.

"I certainly hope that the basketball fans will patronize the opening game and those to come," the manager said. "The finances are very low, but if the team is properly supported we will be able to book some very high class attractions here this winter."

Lesson for December 9

PAUL GOES TO ROME

LESSON TEXT—Rom. 1:8-15; Acts 27:1-28:31.

GOLDEN TEXT—I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul and a Storm at Sea.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul's Voyage to Rome.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Makes the Most of Circumstances.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Divine Leadership in Paul's Life.

I. Paul's Longing to See the Romans (1:8-15).

Rome was the center of the world's power and influence. Paul longed to visit that metropolis with the gospel so that it might find its way from that center to all parts of the world. He had a twofold object so far as the Roman church was concerned.

1. That he might impart unto them some spiritual gift to the end that they might be established.

2. That he might be comforted by their fellowship. There is a reciprocal relationship between the minister and the people unto whom he ministers.

II. Paul's Voyage to Rome (Acts 27).

1. The ship (vv. 1-6).

It was a vessel of Alexandria sailing from Myra to Italy.

2. The company (vv. 1, 2).

Two of Paul's friends, Aristarchus and Luke, were permitted to go with him. Besides these three, there were two hundred and seventy-three in the ship (v. 37).

3. Overtaken by a storm (vv. 7-20).

Paul had advised that they winter in Fair Havens (vv. 9-12), but his advice was unheeded. The gentle south wind deceived them so they loosed from Crete, only to be overtaken by the tempestuous wind called Euroclydon.

4. Paul's serene faith (vv. 21-26).

(1) His rebuke for failure to heed his advice (v. 21).

(2) Bids them be of good cheer (v. 22).

(3) He promised safety (v. 22).

(4) The source of his information (vv. 23, 24). It was revealed unto him by the angel of God.

(5) The reason for Paul's faith (v. 23).

"Whose I am and whom I serve." The consciousness of having been chosen by God and being engaged in His service enables one in the midst of the most violent storm to rest in God.

5. The ship's crew all safe on land (27:27-28:10).

This was exactly as the Lord had said.

(1) The hospitable reception by the natives (28:2).

They built a fire and made the shipwrecked people as comfortable as possible in the cold and rain.

(2) Paul gathering sticks for the fire (v. 3).

(3) Paul bitten by a poisonous serpent (v. 3). Among the sticks gathered there was a serpent. Perhaps it had already coiled itself up for its winter's sleep, but when warmed by the fire it darted at Paul and fixed its fangs upon its hand. At first the natives thought that he was an escaped murderer and that retributive justice was being meted out to him. When they saw he was unharmed they concluded he was a god.

(4) Paul heals Publius' father (vv. 7-10). Paul now reciprocated the kindness of these people.

III. Paul's Arrival at Rome (28:11-16).

Brethren from Rome came some forty miles to meet him. This greatly encouraged him, for which he gave thanks to God. His desire to preach the gospel at Rome was now realized. He was treated with great leniency, being allowed to hire a house and live apart, except that he was constantly under the guard of a soldier. Being chained to a soldier was irksome, but it gave him a chance to preach to the soldiers, which he could not have done in any other way.

IV. Paul's Ministry in Rome (vv. 17-31).

1. His conference with the leading Jews (vv. 17-22).

He did not, as usual, wait for the Sabbath day to speak to the Jews, but after three days' rest he called the chief Jews together because of a desire to have a fair understanding with them. The result of this interview was that the Jews took neutral ground.

2. Paul expounding the Kingdom of God and persuading concerning Jesus (vv. 23-31).

He pointed out a real kingdom, the Messianic Kingdom, with the historic Jesus as King.

Prayer

Prayer is the great lever of the spiritual life; nay, to speak in various figures, it is the lung by which it breathes, it is the atmosphere in which it floats, the wing by which it speeds its flight, and the language by which it daily communes with its own Original.—W. Kuhel.

The Richest

He is richest who possesses most of "the mind that was in Christ Jesus."—Southern Methodist.

THE HOMEMAKERS CORNER

BY MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN

Dates for Special Occasions

In homes where the quota of milk is eonsumed each day, where fruits, green vegetables, whole-grain cereals, and dark bread are eaten faithfully, even the most vigilant homemaker ean relax occasionally and serve a dish to the healthy adult members of her family just because it is well-liked or because it fits into the traditions of holiday celebration or hospitality.

Date and Nut Bars

Three fourth cup flour, ½ teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup brown sugar, ½ c. ehopped nut meats, 1 cup (½ pkg.) sliced dates, 2 eggs.

Mix and sift the baking powder, salt and flour. Mix the dates and nuts through the flour with the finger tips. Beat the egg until light; beat in the sugar gradually. Stir in the dry ingredients, nuts and dates. Spread the mixture evenly over a shallow pan, which has been lined with paper or well greased and dusted with flour. Bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes or until the surface will spring back when pressed lightly with the forefinger. Cut into strips four inches long by one inch wide. The strips may be rolled in confectioner's sugar. This receipt will make 18 bars.

Date Appie Sauce Cake

Two cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 t. cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup (½pkg.) sliced dates, ½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar 1 egg, 1 cup hot, thiek, strained apple sauce.

Date Waldorf Salad

Two large apples, ½ cup nut meats, ½ cup eelery, diced; lettuce, 12 quartered dates, (½ pkg.) 2 tablespoons French fruit dressing, mayonnaise or cooked dressing.

If the apples have a tender, red skin, this should not be removed. Otherwise, peel the apples, cut into quarters, remove the cores, then cut the fruit into one-half inch dice. Cover with French fruit dressing to prevent discoloration. Add the broken nut meats, the diced celery, and the quartered dates, using additional dressing if neeessary to moisten. Pile in mounds on cup-shaped lettuce leaves and garnish with mayonnaise or any favorite dressing.

Spice Cup Cakes

One-third cup shortening, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1¾ cups cake or pastry flour, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon soda, ½ cup sour milk ½ cup mincemeat, ¼ cup walnuts or pecans.

To make the filling, mix the flour with the sugar, and stir the mixture into the boiling water. Stir constantly until thick. Add the chopped dates, nuts and lemon juice. Cool.

Roll the chilled dough to about ⅛ inch in thickness. Cut cookies with a three inch cutter. Place a spoonful of the filling on one half of the cookie and with a broad bladed knife fold the other half of the cookie over to form a semi-circle. Press the edges together. Bake on an inverted pan in a fairly hot oven for about 10 minutes.

Cranberry and Banana Salad

On a chilled salad plate, arrange crisp leaves of lettuce. In the center place peeled ripe bananas. Garnish with mayonnaise and just before serving, place 1 tablespoon of ten-minute cranberry sauce, or cubes of cranberry jelly, on each side of the banana.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

Winter Plowing Is Best In Maryland.

For most Maryland soils, winter plowing will give better results than fall plowing unless provision is made to protect the soil with some kind of cover crop, it is asserted by O. C. Bruce, professor of soils at the University of Maryland.

Plowing in the fall may have the advantage of improving the physical condition of the soil and in some cases may make it possible to get the seed bed prepared somewhat earilier in the spring. It may likewise result in a more even distribution of labor, it is said. On the other hand the injurious effects of erosion and the leaching away of valuable fertility are extremely detrimental to many Maryland soils.

The great advantage of plowing in December and January, it is pointed out, is the fact that the soil is left without a cover for a shorter period of time than when fall plowing is practiced. The shorter the length of time that a soil is left uncropped the less it will suffer from surface run off and consequent depletion of fertility. Under most conditions it is advisable to protect the soil with a cover crop that can he turned under in the spring.

Sod lands may be plowed in the fall or in the early winter with comparatively little damage unless the slopes are steep. Even then, hetter results are obtained if plowing is delayed until well into the winter. Decemher and January are the best winter months for plowing in sections of the State where winter plowing is at all possihle. Ordinarily the ground should be left rough and unharrowed in the spring before sowing the crop.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop

Special Edition

Scoop wonders if the Republican readers liked the "special edition" which came out on Friday evening. Archibaldson said he'd bet a lot of people thought that it was the regular edition which was so late. Well, maybe they were right.

* * *

In scanning over the news columns of the paper last week, which were made up while Scoop was at work on other things, he notices where the "groom was attired in hose with shoes to match." Hot Socks! as Etta Kett would say it.

Where Are The Boozers?

Archihaldson comes forth with a timely thought this week. He says, "It's a good thing they don't take census around the date of the grand jury meeting, or it would be exceedingly low in certain parts of the town and county." Which is all very true. Just try and find a boozer or bootlegger in town this week.

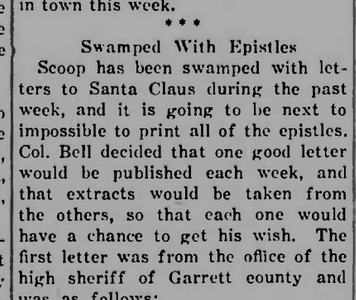
Swamped With Epistles

Scoop has been swamped with letters to Santa Claus during the past week, and it is going to be next to impossible to print all of the epistles. Col. Bell decided that one good letter would be published each week, and that extracts would be taken from the others, so that each one would have a chance to get his wish. The first letter was from the office of the high sheriff of Garrett county and was as follows:

The Letter



Deer Kris Kettle or Sandy Claws:-

I dough nut no witch name is the krrect one to call you but I am riting to you in care of Scoop of The Repuhlican, Garrett County's leading newspaper, to let you no what I want for Chrismas. You no, Sandy, I am a flee for Antieks; in other words, I no my onyons when it comes to Anticks. I have a verry fine colleetshun now but there is one more thing I want and I am going to ask you to bring it to me this Chrismas. If you do this, Kris, I will be good for nuther hole yere. I want the hole out of the first dough nut that Henry Lauer ever made.

Now Sandy, don't disappoint me, or my grefe will be more than I can bare. You can't miss my house because it has bars like a chicken coop over the windos, so you will have to come down the chimmy, for you can't get in the windos. Wieh ever way you come, be allful careful with the hole because I want to put it with my other anticks. I enclose a pieture of miself wich was took by Col. Bell showing me among my anticks. A mary Chrismas and a happy nu yere to you and Mrs. Kettle.

The new Ford has a very simple and effective lubrication system

THE lubrication system for the engine of the new Ford is as simple in principle as water running down-hill.

A gear pump in the bottom of the oil pan raises the oil to the valve chamber reservoir. From here it flows on to the main crankshaft bearings and the front camshaft bearing. Overflow oil drops into the oil pan tray and runs into troughs through which the connecting rods pass.

As the ends of these rods strike the oil they scoop up a supply for the connecting rod bearing. At the same time they set up a fine spray that lubricates the pistons and other moving parts.

From the tray the oil runs into the bottom of the pan, and is again drawn up through a fine mesh screen and pumped to the valve chamber.

This system is so effective that the five-quart contents of the oil pan pass through the pump twice in every mile when you are traveling at only 30 miles an hour. Yet there is only one movable part — the oil pump.

As a matter of fact, the lubrication system for the new Ford is so simple in design and so carefully made that it requires practically no service attention.

There is just one thing for you to do, but it is a very important thing . . . watch the oil! Change the oil every 500 miles and be sure the indicator rod never registers below low (L).

If the oil level is allowed to fall below low, the supply becomes insufficient to oil all parts as they should be oiled.

To insure best performance it is also advisable to have the chassis of your car lubricated every 500 miles. This has been made easy in the new Ford through the use of the high pressure grease gun system.

Proper oiling and greasing mean so much to the life of your car that they should not be neglected or carelessly done.

See your Ford dealer regularly. He is especially well-fitted to lubricate the new Ford and he will do a good, thorough job at a fair price.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear husband, Dougald McLean, who passed away one year ago, Monday, December 5.

Dear husband, I have missed you
More and more each day;
As the world seems oh, how sad,
Since the day you went away.
Friends may think I have forgot you.
When they see me smile,
But they do not know the sorrow
That the smile hides all the while.

His wife, ELLA M'LEAN.

CHRISTMAS SHIPPING AND THE CHRISTMAS SEALS

Millions of the Little Ships Start on Their Journey This Week.

Millions of tiny ships—gay little pictured ships—have started on their journeys Christmasward, this week. Each is freighted with messages of friendliness, of health and of hope. They are the tuberculosis Christmas seals.

"As Marylanders, there are many reasons for our interest in the fight against tuberculosis," Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health, said in urging every man, woman and child in the State to invest generously in the little Christmas seals. "First among them is the obligation that rests upon every one of us to next on and on to a victorious finish against this dragon of ill health and disease that takes such an appalling toll of our people each year. Tuberculosis has lost the place of supremacy it held for so long, as the leading cause of death in Maryland. It has gone down to third place, with heart disease and chronic Bright's disease, taking first and second places, respectively.

"But you cannot realize the extent of the light we have to wage until you visualize the actual facts. Here they are: Out of a total of 21,114 deaths in Maryland last year—the year ending December 31, 1927—tuberculosis was responsible for 1,620; 798 in the counties and 822 in Baltimore City. Multiply that be ten and you will have an estimate of the number of those who are ill with the disease—16,200 in the State; 7,980 in the counties and 8,220 in Baltimore City. Appalling as these are, if you will look back at the figures for five, ten, fifteen years ago, you will see that slowly, but surely, the light is being won. 1917, for instance, out of a total of 23,528 deaths in Maryland from all causes, 2,772 were caused by tuberculosis. Both totals—1,620 in 1927 and 2,772 in 1917, represent the deaths from all forms of tuberculosis—not simply tuberculosis of the lungs.

"It is not often that anybody who cares to do so can acquire a whole fleet of his own and can send it out laden with as worthwhile a cargo as the little Christmas seals carry. The argosy that goes forth this year brings back to each State our own among them—means of advancing the fight against tuberculosis. Some of it will go toward the support of the activities under the direction of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, including the Preventorium at Clairborne; some of it to extend the services of the public health nurses and some of it to bring about a better understanding of the possibilities of rational living, wholesome recreation, play as well as work, wholesome food and plenty of sleep, as means of strengthening the powers of resistance against disease.

SPARKS FROM AN OAKLAND PULPIT

THE PAINFULNESS OF GRATITUDE.

Save a girl from death by drowning and she is more apt to curse than bless you, writes a life guard who has been on duty at Atlantic City for six seasons. "It's easy to understand. She knows she looks a wreck. There is nothing more unbeautiful than a beautiful girl two seconds after she has been hauled out of water six inches over her head. . . Of course she is mad." It is difficult to maintain one's self-respect while being dragged half-dead from a watery grave; and most people would rather lose their lives than their self-respect. That is why the life guard gets so little gratitude.

When Jesus healed the ten lepers, one of them came back and fell down on his face at His feet, giving Him thanks. Then Jesus said, "Were there not ten cleansed? But where are the nine?" (Luke 17:17). Only one in ten was grateful for deliverance from the most loathsome of all diseases. The modern life guard says that only one in a hundred is grateful—for deliverance from a sudden and horrible death!

Gratitude is the rarest of all virtues because it is the most painful. It wounds our human pride. To be grateful is to acknowledge that another is, in some respect, greater than we. It is the attitude of debtor to creditor, of received to giver, of inferior to superior. That is the reason why a proud man simply cannot feel the emotion of gratitude. Only a humble man, or at least a man in his more humble moods, can be truly grateful.

"Gratitude is the sign of a noble soul," said old Aesop long ago. True! for the noble soul is always humble, and the humble soul is always grateful. It is only the little fellow who puffs himself up. Pride is the mark of a small mind. The man who is so mentally near-sighted that he can't see anybody but himself is of course well satisfied with himself.

But the man who knows—whatever else he may know—knows this: That he lives in a star-littered universe of unimaginable distances, of incalculable energies, of inconceivable durations, of inscrutable mysteries—an infinite universe in which he is but a finite speck. Wisdom is always humble; it is ignorance that parades the streets.

"Think" and "thank" are really the same word. They come from the same root. They have the same meaning. A thankful soul is always a thoughtful soul. Thanklessness is sheer thoughtlessness. The understanding mind sees, with Stevenson, that—

"The world is so full of a number of things
I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings;"

sees, even in the darker experiences of life, hidden blessings—some lesson to be learned from every failure, some joy yielded by every pain, some courage gained from every danger.

Truly, gratitude is the sign of a noble soul!

BOSTON SOCIOLOGIST TO GIVE ADDRESS IN THEATRE

David Goldstein Coming Under Auspices of the K. of C.

Oakland Council, Knights of Columbus, has invited David Goldstein, of Boston, to deliver a free public lecture at the Maryland Theatre on next Tuesday evening, December 18, at 8 o'clock. His subject will be "What is Wrong With the Family." Mr. Goldstein's visit to Oakland is part of the Knights of Columbus nation-wide campaign against the insidious propaganda that constitutes a serious menace to Christian ideals of family life and which has, in recent months, come forward with a new boldness.

Mr. Goldstein, an authority on sociological questions, will deal with the Christian, the evolutionary, the socialist and the modernistic conception of the origin, the moral character and the responsibility of the family and its relation to the state.

He will review the assaults upon the family in Russia, Mexico, the United States and Canada. Mr. Goldstein, always a pleasing talker, has made it his policy to solicit questions from the audience and to answer them at the close of his lecture. It is expected that the open forum at his appearance in Oakland will be the occasion of some interesting and perhaps lively exchanges. His lecture will be free to the public. There will be no reserved seats and no solicitation of any sort.

TO DISCUSS POSSIBILITY OF THE MAPLE SUGAR INDSTRY

Forestry Specialist to be Here December 21 in Interest of Improving Sugar Products

The feasibility of erecting a maple sugar and syrup plant in Garrett county, possibly at Oakland, where the producers may improve their product and standardize it, will be discussed at a meeting to be held in the County Agent's office on Friday, December 21, it has been announced.

F. B. Trenk, forestry specialist, and Dr. Bomberger, marketing specialist of the University of Maryland, have been in Vermont during the past few weeks making a survey of the industry there and inspecting the manufacturing plants, and Mr. Trenk will have such data to submit to the business men of this vicinity and the sugar producers of this county.

Mr. Trenk will also have information on equipment needed in a standard plant and the best methods of producing the sugar and syrup.

"This survey has been undertken with the end in view that Garrett county sugar and syrup producers will be able to realize more money from their products," County Agent McGlone said. "A manufacturing plant here, which would standardize the product and improve it would create a higher price and a greater demand for Garrett county syrup."

OAKLAND HOME DAMAGED BY EARLY MORNING FIRE

Blaze Discovered After Owner Had Kindled Fire in Kitchen

A two-story frame dwelling house, owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Feather, located in Highland Park, East Oakland, was partially destroyed by fire about 4:30 a. m. Sunday morning. Mr. Feather and his wife retired about 9 o'clock Saturday night, but on account of the bitter cold, it is said, Mr. Feather arose about 2 a. m., went to the kitchen on the ground floor, kindled a fire and again retired.

The range in the meantime becoming overheated, set fire to the wooden wall. The crackling of the flames and the smell of smoke aroused the couple. Mr. Feather sent in an alarm to the Oakland Fire department and its members extinguished the blaze before the entire building had been consumed. A part of the furniture had been carried from the burning house.

The building was insured for $1,500 and will be repaired by the insurance company, it was learned.

Bad Flue Starts Blaze

The roof of the house occupied by Mr. Abe Lawton and family was damaged to some extent about 7:30 o'clock Monday morning when it caught fire from a faulty flue.

The Oakland Fire department was called and after tearing a hole thru the tin, the flames were soon reached and extinguished. Mrs. Lawton and family were unaware of their danger until Elwood Hauser, who happened to be passing by, saw the flames and went in the house and told them "Your house is on fire." Very little damage was done, it was stated.

Federal agents were busy over the week-end and arrested six persons on charges of selling moonshine liquor in Garrett county. Four of those arrested are from Friendsville and two from near Grantsville.

Fifty members of Farraday Post, No. 24, American Legion, motored to Oakland from Frostburg Monday evening and took part in the street parade and meeting sponsored by Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, of Oakland.

The meeting was held for the purpose of installing officers of the local post for the ensuing year, the installation being in charge of Rudolph Nickel, State Vice-Commander.

Edward P. Kahl was selected post commander; Alex Hesen, vice-commander; Delbert Davis, post adjutant; James Fazzalari, sergeant at arms; Berne Teter, finance officer; Milton Sincell, historian.

Preceding the meeting the drum corps of the Frostburg post, together with a group of about fifty ex-service men belonging to the Legions posts of Frostburg and Oakland, paraded the streets of town. The drum corps is a recently formed organization in connection with Farraday Post and created much favorable comment.

The meeting at post headquarters was largely attended and addresses were delivered by Delbert Davis, J. W. Chapman, Edward J. Ryan, Joseph Spates, Engle Speir, the State Vice-Commander and others.

The address of Mr. Davis was of special interest. He spoke in behalf of the Oakland Legion, urging a revival of interest in American Legion affairs throughout Garrett county and expressed his gratitude to the Frostburgers who joined with the Oakland post in its annual installation of officers.

Mr. Chapman told in a very humorous way of his trip to the National convention, which was made by motor.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop

Intentional Error

Once or twice each month Scoop makes an intentional mistake just to see whether people read with any degree of accuracy. Last week he tested people on their history, and some of them did know it.

Several tried to tell Scoop that De Soto discovered the Mississippi and never spent any time in the wilds of Florida hunting for the youth fount. Scoop had to tell them, then, that it was another of his schemes to find out who reads the column, and that he knew all the time that Ponce De Leon was the bird who was hunting for youth and found nothing but second childhood. (Believe it or not.)

No Damage

With the exception of the fire on Sunday morning the people affected in the other eleven or eight fires during the past two weeks were able to extinguish the flames before the Oakland Fire department had arrived to do any damage.

If Harry Mickey, trapper deluxe, had anything to do with this State Roads investigation, he might say that some of those involved were "detouring," backtracking," and running into a blind.

* * *

Not the least of the Legion play last week was the after celebration in the Blue Bird. More "home talent" was exhibited there than can be found on Keith's circuit. Russell Brown, Doe McComas, Ed Lawrence and Ralph Blake, et al, were the star performers. The snap taken by faithful Col. Bell shows Ed Kahl, the new post commander, as he was about to crown the leading lady as queen of Sand Flat.

More Letters to Santa

There seems to be no let-up to the letters which have been coming to Santa Claus, by way of Scoop of The Republican. This week a number of prominent Oakland people have contributed and their wishes will be given every attention. The letter this week, printed in full, is from Arthur "Skeet" Naylor and it has all the earmarks of being written from some one who knows what he wants, and how!

The Letter

My darling sweet Kris:

I see where there is a chance of getting an extra letter sent to you thru Scoop, and I want to be sure of getting my finger in the Christmas pie.

First of all, Santa, I want another radio, inexpensive, yet one which will reach to London. The lamps in the one last year weren't light enough to read by, so give me service this year. Last week I couldn't even get New York on it, but when I got mad and broke the tubes I heard Glasgow.

Next, Santa, give me something for a bad cold. I seem to be tight across the chest, and in fact there's nothing loose about me anywhere.

Next, Kris, please send me a box of cigars. Some people like to smoke theirs as short as they can, but believe me, I always smoke mine as long as I can. Finally, Santa, if you have any hair tonic in stock, it wouldn't be a bad idea to send it along. None of this stuff they sell at Bittner and Stahl's seems to penetrate a marble dome. I mean it wouldn't, Santa, if there was a marble dome here to rub it on. I live on the same street as Scoop, so you can't miss me. Tenderly yours, Skeet Naylor.

"A very simple and also very good candy is made by spreading nut meats on a buttered pan and pouring over them melted chocolate. Allow two squares (2 oz.) of chocolate to one cup nuts."

"A candy thermometer is inexpensive and essential to chocolate dipping."

"A fondant or fudge failure need not be a total loss. Add the same amount of liquid called for in the recipe and recook to the desired temperature."

Maple Syrup Fudge.

Two c. maple syrup, 1 t. light corn syrup, ¾ c. thin cream, ¾ c. walnut meats, coarsely chopped. Combine maple syrup, corn syrup and cream and place over low flame. Stir constantly until mixture begins to boil. Continue cooking, without stirring, until a small amount of syrup forms a soft ball in cold water (236 deg. F). Remove from fire. Cool to lukewarm. Beat until mixture thickens and loses its gloss. Add nuts and pour at once into greased pan, 8x4x2 inches. When cold cut into squares.

Coconut Haystacks.

One c. granulated sugar, 1 c. brown sugar, ¾ c. water, 1 c. dark corn syrup, ½ t. salt, 4½ c. Baker's coconut, premium shred, toasted. Combine all ingredients, except coconut. Place over low flame and stir constantly until sugar is dissolved. Continue cooking, stirring frequently, to prevent scorching. Cook until a small amount of syrup forms a firm ball in cold water. Remove from fire. Add coconut and mix thoroughly. Drop from tablespoon on slightly greased marble slab, inverted pan or baking sheet. Shape into cones, working quickly so that mixture does not harden. Makes 24 to 30 haystacks.

Pop Corn Balls.

Three c. sugar, 1 c. karo, 1 c. water. Cook to hard boil; remove from stove and pour into large pan of popped corn. Mix with stick or long handled spoon. Roll into balls. Puffed rice or puffed wheat may be used instead of popped corn. Fruit coloring may be added to make pop corn balls pink, or strawberry extract may be added.

Candied Orange Peel.

Select oranges with bright and thick skin. Peel them and cut the rinds into pieces of uniform size, about 2 to 3 inches long and 1-4 in. wide. Put the pieces into a sauce pan, cover with cold water and bring almost to boiling point, but do not boil. Pour off the scalding water and repeat this process twice again. Add to the peel it's own weight in granulated sugar, cover again with cold water and boil until no syrup shows in the saucepan when it is held to the side. Spread on a buttered platter and when partly cold, roll in sugar. Lemon and grape fruit peel may be done in the same way.

LESS CYLINDER WEAR WITH "STANDARD" MOTOR OIL

The motor of a well-known six sedan after being driven 26,760 miles with "Standard" Motor Oil as the only lubricant, was dismantled and cylinders carefully measured for wear with precision instruments. The average wear of each of the six cylinders was a fraction under 9 ten-thousandths of an inch.

When other oils are used the cylinder wear of the average well-cared-for car is over 30 ten-thousandths of an inch in 20,000 miles. Several times as great as in the sedan in which "Standard" Motor Oil was used.

The practical advantage to you of the greater oiliness of "Standard" Motor Oil is easily apparent. Less wear means a better, smoother running motor, fewer repair bills and greater satisfaction with your car. Yet "Standard" Motor Oil costs only a quarter a quart.

How much do you spend for gasoline? How much for tires? When did your battery last have water? The "Standard" Motor Record will tell you. Ask your "Standard" Service Station or dealer for a free copy.

Last Meeting of Civic Club Was Well Attended.

The meeting of the Oakland Civic Club, held the last Tuesday in November, at the home of Miss Lottie Loar, was well attended, and thanks are due to the hostess for a pleasant afternoon.

During the meeting a donation of $50 was made for the work of teaching the mothers of little children who were afflicted with infantile paralysis ho wto properly massage and care for them. Mrs. Napoleon LaSeurer, of Baltimore, has been giving this instruction.

It has been learned that the Civic Club cook books have not all been sold. Over one hundred copies are available, and Mrs. Arthur Naylor will have them for sale at her home and also at Hamill's book store. This cook book was published several years ago and has many fine recipes.

The next meeting of the club will he held the last Tuesday in January and has been invited to meet at the home of Miss Grace Jones.

The following article was one of those read from the book, "The Business of Being a Club Woman," and the women of the club have asked that it be republished in The Republican, as it contains good advice for any organization:

Ten Ways to Kill a Club

1. Don't go to meetings.
2. If you do go, go late.
3. If the weather doesn't suit you, don't think of going.
4. If you do attend a meeting, find fault with the work of the officers and members.
5. Never accept an office—it is easier to criticise than to do things.
6. Get sore if you are not appointed on committees, but if you are, don't attend committee meetings.
7. If asked by chairman to give your opinion, tell her you have nothing to say. After the meeting tell everyone how things should be done.
8. Do nothing more than absolutely necessary, but when members use their ability to help matters along, howl that the institution is being run by a clique.
9. Hold back your dues, or do not pay any at all.
10. Don't bother about new members. "Let Mrs. Brown do it."

IT IS UNLAWFUL TO TRAP MUSKRATS AT THIS TIME

A Correction

An error was made in these columns last Thursday when two marriage licenses were combined to read "Willie Frank Whitehair and Marie Alice Humberson." The license should have read: "Clarence Jackson Sisler, 21, mechanic, Friendsville, Md., and Marie Alice Humberson, 16 (parents' consent), near Hazelton, W. Va." The Republican regrets the error.

A Democracy of Ownership

"The aim of the management — and it is the only aim that will protect in the long run the safety of the investments of the hundreds of thousands of stockholders — is to continue to furnish the best possible telephone service at the least cost to the public."

WALTER S. GIFFORD,
President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company (Bell System)

¶ Nearly three quarters of a million people, more than half of whom are women, are owners of the securities of the Bell System. This is the widest distribution of corporate ownership in the world.

¶ This ownership is not confined to large investors; in fact, no one person owns as much as one per cent. There are thousands in every walk of life who are using this means to invest their savings. It represents a cross-section of the thrift of the American people.

¶ This widespread ownership on the one hand and the fact that we have accepted the responsibility for a nation-wide service on the other, impose a twofold obligation. We must protect the savings of these hundreds of thousands of investors and we must furnish the best possible service at the lowest possible cost to the public.

¶ We are fulfilling these objectives, and the wide distribution of the securities of the System shows the faith of the people in the stability and integrity of the business. This is a true democracy of ownership —an ownership by the people of a utility that serves the people. It is public ownership in its best and most practical form.

OAKLAND WINS OPENER; TO PLAY ALTOONA QUINT

Pennsy Team Well Known—Meeting of City League Team Managers on Saturday

The Oakland A. A. basketball team inaugurated its season last Friday night by defeating the Kingwood Bears by the score of 21 to 16 at Naylor's Hall. The game was fast and closely contested for an opener, and was witnessed by a good-sized gathering of fans.

Killen led the Oakland attack with five field goals to his credit while R. Corrick registered three goals to lead the Kingwood scorers.

Both teams phyed more or less defensive throughout the entire game, not being exactly sure of themselves, but with a little practice the local team will give the best teams of this section real battles, according to a number of fans.

Although Kingwood was never in the lead during the game, they threw scares into the Oakland boys time and again as they crept closer to the front. Oakland led at half time, 9 to 6. In the preliminary the Sure Shots were defeated by East Oakland, 18 to 6.

The Altoona Overlands, a team which has always presented a strong line-up here, will play Oakland either on December 24 or 25, probably the latter date, according to an announcement. Donnelly, Means, Sweitzer and others, who have appeared here many times, are still with the team, and they will be out to uphold their reputation. They defeated the Cumberland K. of C. team this week 55-29. Wesleyan College is also scheduled for December 29.

AND THIS SHALL BE A SIGN.

(From Little Songs of Every Day)
By SARA ROBERTA GETTY

They sought the Babe of Bethlehem,
the little uncrowned King,
Those wise men hastening from the East their loving gifts to bring;
They knew the sign and questioned not, for prophets learned of old,
The coming of the Infant King had long ago foretold:
They saw the Star and followed it, and lo, it led the way
Unto a lonely manger bed wherein the Christ-Child lay.

The shepherds sought the new-born
King and as their steps they turned
In eagerness to Bethlehem their hearts within them burned
With joy at what the angels told, nor did they question why
A manger-bed should shelter Him whom God sent from on high;
"For this shall be a sign to you," they heard the angel say,
"The Child ye seek, He shall be found upon a bed of hay."

We, too, are seeking for the Christ to be our guiding light,
And we must cast aside vain things and come with hearts contrite;
He does not ask for pomp and show,
but this shall be a sign:
Humility and reverence and smypathy divine.
These shall be ours in fullest part and when the glad bells ring
We, too, shall sing with glad accord
the praises of our King.

TERRA ALTA AND OAKLAND TO OPEN GYM WITH PLAY

New Athletic House, Terra Alta, To Be Dedicated Tomorrow

Oakland High basketball team has been invited to play Terra Alta High Friday, December 21, at the time of the dedication of the new gymnasium and it is hoped that many Oakland people go up to our neighboring town to see this game.

The local team opened its season Tuesday when they met and were defeated by Aurora High, at Naylor's Hall, Oakland, 20-18. The Oakland team led most of the way, but the Aurora quint set too fast a pace and they rallied in the closing minutes to take the lead. Stemple and Maroney played best for the locals and Webster for Aurora. The West Virginia team was defeated last year 45-10.

The line-up:

| Oakland. 18 | | Aurora, 20 |
|---|---|---|
| Maroney | F | D. Webster |
| Stemple | F | B. Webster |
| Winters | C | Helmick |
| Lohr | G | Spiggle |
| Spoerlein | G | Stemple, E |

Substitutions: Graves for Spoerlein. Field goals—Maroney, 3; Stemple, 3; Winters, 3; D. Webster, 6; B. Webster, 2; Stemple, 2.

Christmas Party.

The Christmas party, under the auspices of the senior and junior classes, was an unusually successful event. The evening was spent in dancing and card playing, music being furnished by Mr. Carroll Elliott. Santa Claus did his part and all guests departed with sweet gifts. The program consisted of solos—Sweet Mystery of Life and Sonny Boy—by Mr. Reeves Blandford; selections by the Four Horsemen; solos, Rio Rita and Sweet Sue, by Miss Ruth Conley; solo dance by Ralph Blake; the Song that the Angels Sang, Miss Susanna Dixon; duet, Angela Mia. Miss Ruth Conley and Mr. Blandford; Silent Night, the Four Horsemen.

School to Close Friday.

The second number of The Acorn, published this month by the Junior class, will be on sale today. This is an extra good number.

FOUR GOOD ATTRACTIONS ON OAKLAND A. A. CARD

Altoona Overlands To Be Met at Oakland on Christmas Night Wesleyan Here Saturday

Four important basketball attractions are scheduled for the Oakland A. A. basketball team during the Holidays, two of which will be played in Oakland on Christmas night, December 25, and on the following Saturday night, December 29.

The two home attractions should be banner engagements of the entire season and should interest a large number of fans, the manager said. The first, on Christmas night, will be with the Altoona Overlands, already well known to Oakland people. This year they are carrying such men as Sweitzer, Means, Donnelly and others who have appeared before Oakland fans a number of times. They recently defeated the Knights of Columbus team in Cumberland.

The contest Saturday night at Naylor's Hall will be between the local team and Wesleyan College Barnstormers, made up of regular members of the regular varsity team. This team defeated Oakland last year in the first game of the season, 32-28, and a better team is promised for this year. "Mickie" McClung, star forward of Wesleyan for three years, will be included in the line-up.

The Oakland team will line up with McComas and Killen, forwards; Pollock and Kuhl alternating at center, and Nally and Hanst, guards.

To Play in Keyser Tonight

The locals will inaugurate their season on foreign floors tonight when they meet the strong Keyser collegians at Keyser. They will follow up this game away from home on Wednesday, December 26, when they meet the Knights of Columbus team at Cumberland.

The support of all basketball fans is asked for the local games next week, as the expenses will be more than usual in an effort to bring good teams to Oakland. There will be preliminary games both Tuesday and Saturday, starting at 7:30. The main attractions will get under way at 8:15.

Successor to J. L. McGlone Has Not Been Named.

No successor to J. L. McGlone, who resigned as County Agent of Garrett county recently, has been named as yet, it is said. Dr. T. B. Symonds, director of the Extension Service, University of Maryland, has received several applications and recommendations for appointment to the position.

Mr. McGlone, who filed his resignation on Wednesday, December 12, will leave the Extension Service on December 31 to accept a position in the City of Pittsburgh. A comprehensive report on the work accomplished and the outlook for Garrett county agriculturally and as a dairying county, will be filed with the County Commissioners on Saturday, Mr. McGlone has said.

Freight Wreck on Grade This Morning.

Wrecking of an east-bound coal train at a point near Bond on the Seventeen Mile grade this morning at seven o'clock served to block all tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Eight cars of the train were involved and it is stated that the tracks were so badly torn up that seven to nine hours will be required to clear them of obstructions. As a result trains were re-routed over the Pittsburgh Division from Cumberland on the east and Fairmont on the west.

Walter Dawson Addresses Members of Brotherhood.

Walter W. Dawson was the speaker of the evening at the monthly meeting of the Lutheran Brotherhood on Tuesday. Over forty members and friends of the organization were present to hear his message on "Moral Thoughtfulness," which was indicative of the Christmas spirit. "Those who do not go out and hunt for a place to spread helpfulness have not caught the real meaning of Christmas," Mr. Dawson said.

Santa Claus was also on hand and presented each one with a small gift. Refreshments, consisting of pie, ice cream and coffee, were served.

DIED

CLARENCE V. GUARD

Funeral services for Clarence V. Guard, of Pittsburgh, Pa., formerly of Friendsville, will be held today at 2 P. M. from the M. E. church, Friendsville. Interment will be in Blooming Rose cemetery.

The deceased was employed by the Westinghouse Electric company, was about 52 years of age, and was the father of eight children. He has been a member of the Masonic lodge since 1903, and the funeral will be in charge of Oakland lodge, No. 192, A., F. and A. M.

MANY SUGGESTIONS MADE AT PUBLIC MEETING FRIDAY

Schools, Local Government, Game Laws, Outboard Motors, Roads, Among Subjects Discussed.

Suggestions for a loan based upon a bond issue, the proceeds of which to be used for the erection of new school buildings at various points in Garrett county, appropriations for municipalities, changes and improvements in local governmental affairs, a revision of the county topography map and a law providing for the employment of a road engineer, advocating the building of a road from a point east of Altamont to the Allegany county line at Bloomington, revision of the game laws applicable to Garrett county, permission to use outboard motors on Deep Creek Lake and the changing of the date for making the county levy, were some of the questions taken up at the public meeting held last Friday in the office of the Board of County Commissioners, when proposed changes in the various local laws enumerated above were discussed and which may be considered at the incoming Legislature which assembles in January.

The meeting was attended by all the members of the Legislature representing Garrett county, who are Senator A. D. Naylor and Delgeates Albert Markley, Arthur Lawton and Arthur H. Green. The meeting was presided over by Senator Naylor who stated the purpose of the gathering.

NO CHANGE OF LEADERS DURING PAST TWO WEEKS

Merchants Still Leading in Annual Bowling League Race

Two weeks of play in the annual bowling league, being held on the Recreation Alleys, has changed the standing of the teams but little, the Merchants still remaining at the top of the race with the Postoffice quint second and the Knights of Columbus and Crellin in tie for the third place.

During the last two weeks the Postoffice team has been beaten two out of three games by the K. of C. team, and two out of three games by the Merchants.

Crellin took two out of three games from the Rotary Club, three from the Methodists, but were turned back on Monday by the K. of C.'s, when the Knights took three straight from them.

The Merchants also took two from the Lutherans, while the Presbyterians have taken two of three games from the Rotary Club.

There were no records broken during the past two weeks of play. Elliott, of the Merchants, rolled 178 for one game, which was the highest recorded during that period. Tonight the Methodists will meet the Presbyterians and the Rotary Club will battle the Lutherans.

Benefit Picture to be Shown December 25 and 26.

"Four Walls," a picture of interest for the benefit of the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, will be shown at the Maryland Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, December 25 and 26, as arranged at a meeting of the department held last Friday evening. Messrs. Walter Dawson and Alva Gortner compose the committee having the affair in hand. The picture presents some thrilling scenes. The admission prices will be the same as usual. Special music will be an added attraction.

Held Under Bond for Appearance at Court.

Paul Verner, who was arrested yesterday a week ago by Constable Joe Callis on a bad check charge, was accorded a hearing before Justice W. A. Gonder on Saturday, and held under $100 bond for his appearance at the June term of the Circuit Court. The amount of the checks issued by Verner was $17, was made good and bond was furnished for his appearance. The checks are said to have been passed by Verner in and about Mountain Lake Park.

Legion to Visit Frostburg

Decision to accept the invitation of Farraday Post, No. 24, American Legion, of Frostburg, to be present at the meeting there on January 7, was made by the members of the local American Legion post at the meeting held Monday night. At that time installation of officers will take place, it was stated. The trip will be made in Gortner's bus.

A report on the play recently given in Oakland under the auspices of the post, revealed that more than $100 was turned over to the treasurer of the organization.

FATHER OF 3 ACQUITTED OF MURDERING HIS WIFE

William R. Keller Declared Not Guilty by Somerset Court.

William R. Keller, of Jerome, father of three small children, was acquitted of a charge of murder by a jury in court at Somerset, Pa., late last Thursday afternoon after deliberating three hours.

Keller was accused of pushing his wife, Ruth Keller, from an automobile while the car was in motion on October 13. She died shortly afterwards in a Meyersdale hospital. Keller testified that his wife either leaped or fell from the car.

At the time Mrs. Keller met death the family was enroute to Avilton, this county, to visit Mrs. Keller's former home. The three Keller children were occupying the back seat. There were six women on the jury.

LOCAL MAN IS INJURED WHEN TRUCK STRIKES HIM

Arthur Townshend Resting Comfortably at His Home Following Accident Monday Evening

Mr. Arthur Townshend, Alder street Oakland, who was struck by a truck Monday evening about 6 o'clock, near the corner of Fourth and Alder, is improving at his home, where he was taken following the accident. He slept quite a bit last night and seemed to be resting comfortably.

The accident was unavoidable, according to reports, as the truck was starting down the Court House hill when Mr. Townshend began to cross the road, and it was impossible to bring the machine to a quick halt. Mr. Thomas Butler, Hagerstown, driver of the truck, and James Hart took the injured man to his home where he was given medical attention.

He was in a dazed condition and had a severe cut over his eye, and it was feared that his skull might be fractured. Dr. Broadwater, the attending physician, stated this morning that Mr. Townshend's condition was favorable, and that there would be no serious after-effects.

The accident was reported immediately by the driver of the truck to Thomas E. Currie, State policeman, who made an investigation of the case. Mr. Butler is employed by the Kelvinator company.

Delbert Davis to Address The Knights of Pythias.

Delbert Davis, cashier of the First National Bank of Oakland, will address the Knights of Pythias lodge at its regular meeting tomorrow night. Mr. Davis' topic will be appropriate to Christmas. Other interesting features will be on the program.

Last Friday night the members of the organization were entertained by the String Band of Oakland and by a talk by Howard Sprague on his experiences while in the United States Navy, he having recently been discharged from duty. All members are urged to attend the meeting tomorrow night.

FORMER LOCAL ATTORNEY ELECTED AT SEBRING, FLA.

Playford A. Naylor Led Ticket In Councilmanic Race.

Sebring, Fla., Dec. 17.—(Special by Air Mail to The Republican)—Attorney Playford A. Naylor, son of Senator and Mrs. A. D. Naylor, of Oakland, Md., led the ticket in the councilmanic race here today with a total vote of 555. Mr. Naylor's nearest competitor in the field polled 241 votes.

The councilman-elect was chairman of the Highlands County Republican club during the recent presidential campaign and it was chiefly through his efforts that Hoover carried Sebring and Highlands county. Although the Republican candidates for state offices failed of election, this section gave the candidates a splendid vote because of young Naylor's visits to every part of the county.

With four candidates in the field for the two councilmanic offices, two of which were seeking reelection, Attorney Naylor plunged into the battle, informing the citizens of his platform for the betterment of the city and carrying on the campaign in a dignified manner. The votes of Sebringites reflected the confidence they have in the young attorney's ability to aid in the conduct of the city's affairs.

Meeting Postponed

The meeting for the purpose of discussing the feasibility of erecting a maple sugar and maple syrup refining plant in Garrett county, which was to have been held in the office of the County Agent at the Court House tomorrow, has been postponed, according to an announcement. The reason for the postponement is due to the illness of one of the parties interested in the project.

The meeting will be held some time during the month of January, it was stated, at which time F. B. Trenk, forestry specialist, and Dr. Bomberger, marketing specialist of the University of Maryland, will be present with plans, as mentioned in The Republican in a recent issue.

SENTENCES PRONOUNCED SATURDAY BY THE COURT

Nathan Friend Is Convicted of Rape By Jury—Sentenced to Penitentiary for 15 Years.

Punishment for various crimes was meted out Saturday to a number of those convicted at the December Term of the Circuit Court for this county by Judge Doub just prior to the recess until January 3, next, when court will reconvene to hear several civil cases and complete some untried criminal business.

Nathan Friend, of near Sang Run, submitted to be tried by a jury on an indictment charging him with having raped Mary E. Know, a young girl, and feund guilty as charged in the indictment, was senteneed to serve 15 years in the Maryland Penitentiary.

The jury in this case deliberated less than an hour Friday evening before arriving at a verdict. The case was stubbornly contested on the part of the defense by W. R. Offutt, and on the part of the State by State's Attorney Renninger. Mr. Offutt was appointed by the Court to defend Friend.

George Ervin, convicted of manufacturing and possession liquor, was fined $300 and sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

Harley Clegg, forging the name of C. H. Merrill on a check and passing it at the store of A. D. Naylor & Co., one year in the penitentiary.

Cove Ervin, manufacture and possession of liquor, $200 fine or six months in the House of Correction.

Russell Jones and John Miller, convicted of having had carnal knowledge of a female, were given eighteen months each in the House of Correction.

Eugene Baumgartner, indicted for maintaining a gambling device, was found not guilty when it was brought out in the evidence that the property in which the alleged device had been in operation did not belong to him but stands upon the records as that of another party.

Aged Deer Park Woman Gives Short Sketch of Her Life.

Mrs. Elmira Hinebaugh, of Deer Park, who recently celebrated her 91st birthday, gives a short sketch of her life, recalling the Battle of Bull Run, and includes other interesting facts. It is as follows:

"I have been asked to give a sketch of my life. I was born and reared in Confluence, Somerset county, Pa., at our home between the Casselman and Youghiogheny rivers. I always had a great desire for an education but we didn't have schools then like we have now.

"When I was 15 years old I joined the M. E. church and have tried in my weakness to serve my Master as good as I could. When I was 16 my father came to Maryland and bought 2,200 acres of land where Deer Park now stands. He made ties for the railroad. There was only one track then and small locomotives.

"In 1885 my father moved to Oakland and bought property of Daniel P. Bryant. He ran a store until the Civil war broke out. I remember the battle of Bull Run very distinctly. I was at my grandfather's and we were able to hear the cannons booming all day. My brother John was in the battle and it was a sad day for me.

"My life has been spent mostly in Maryland since I was 16. I have never had to call a doctor but twice in 60 years. I have never had a tooth pulled by a dentist in my life.

"I have attended every Camp Meeting held at Mt. Lake Park. I celebrated my 91st birthday on Tuesday, November 13. I baked my own cake, the gold and silver cake, and was complimented on it as being very good. My health is very good, I can walk around and wash dishes and have a great-great niece and nephew with whom I enjoy playing very much. I also do all my own sewing and make my own clothes.

"There is only myself and my brother Boss left out of a family of 8. Boss will be 89 in January and he is in good health."

Series of Robberies Committed.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Glotfelty, two miles southwest of Oakland, has been repeatedly pilfered during the past summer and fall, and the recent robberies in the Gortner community should serve to awaken the farmers to this constant danger and put them on their guard.

Five hams were stolen from the smoke house one evening during the month of June. All of their wheat was stolen during the month of July when they were on a visit to their daughter in Texas and the house was entered and some of its furnishings were carried away while they were in Washington in October besides having sustained the loss of fifty or more chickens about the same time.

They Returneth!

Court being over, we are again being favored with those whose breath always passes off the aroma of essence of corn. They are calling for more whiskey and bigger bottles. They're all wet.

One Casualty Only.

Only one casualty resulted in the erection of the curb Christmas trees along the streets of Oakland and that occurred in front of Fraley's store when Neil Fraley was engaged in attaching an electric bulb to the highest branch of the stately tree. It seems as though Neil failed to arm (or leg) himself with a pair of Abe Lawton's pole climbers and just as he reached the topmost branch his foot slipped and he came down with a wollop.

Col. Bell, sensing that something would happen while the hazardous work was being performed by a crowd of people who knew nothing about arranging electric lights or the setting of Christmas trees at the right angle, was on hand with his trusty camera and snapped Neil just as he ended his flight earthward.

Flattening the Sidewalk.

He'd Better Find It.

John Fitzwater, the attendance man in the public schools of the county, is in an awful fix. Knowing that his mind would be full of statistics on the census and school attendance records, he bought his wife's Christmas present several months ago and told the merchant that he would call later and take his purchase home.

Now that the time has come to call for it, he doesn't remember where he bought it, and the picture below, taken by the Colonel in John's private office, needs no explanation.

Where Could It Be?

Final Letters Today.

The final letters from Santa will be given today but only in brief form. None of the letters received were worthy to be published in their entirety, or at least, that is what Col. Bell said, so the extracts follow, asking Santa for some Christmas cheer. What they want and what they get are very different, but anyway, here is what they want:

Lizzie Tish, the girl in the front office of The Republican—A vault like the Garrett National Bank has to keep all her records in.

Mary Ann Small, the little girl in the composing room—A new blue working smock to match the green one she is now using.

Sam Aronhalt—A compound that will exterminate the mountain pussies from Crook Crest.

Dan Smouse, otherwise known as Andy Gump—Said he already had two little Chesters, what he wanted now was an Uncle Bim.

Berne Teter—His lost hat returned.

John Nosy Cropp—26 hours in a day so he can spend more time in Sturgiss' Pharmacy.

Col. Bell himself—A cure for boils and the patience of Job.

Archibaldson, the pressman in the back room—Eight nights in a week so he can have another night out.

Walter Dawson—A brief case so he can have a more professional appearance.

Bobbie Hoffman, the letter carrier—Wants nothing, but hopes Santa will get here and end the Christmas mailing rush.

Louie Waingold—A blue goose.

Delbert Davis—Some cannon balls of a size befitting the mounted gun on the Court House lawn.

Guy Yutzy—A railroad ticket so he can get a(weigh).

Scoop—A good crowd at the basketball game Tuesday night.

The Chief of this here journal—Business and more of it so that the pay roll may be met when it arrives during the ensuing twelve months.

Scoop's column will contain New Year resolutions of Garrett county people next week if they are sent in to him.

THE GIFT CUSTOM.

Some years ago we used to hear very much about the uses of the Christmas gift custom. The tendency to swap gifts as a mere trade, was much ridiculed. It seemed to many as if a great deal of money was being wasted on gifts in which people took no hart, and that a great deal of labor and effort was being caused with inadequate results.

As time has gone on, some abuses of this custom have seemed to disappear a little. People do not make these gifts so much now unless they really want to. Probably nine out of ten of the gifts represent a real desire to confer happiness. Anything that springs from such a fine impulse must do good in the world. It makes us realize how much our friends think of us and it helps us to show how much we think of them.

On 364 days in the year people hustle for themselves and spend money mostly for their own comfort and enjoyment. It is well that one day is consecrated to giving, and that people have learned to deny themselves some things that they want in order to manifest their affection to someone else.

The people of this community can well be reminded at this time that their home stores have a superb assortment of all sorts of gifts. People should not neglect making these purchases one single day longer than necessary, but should get them at once and get them off to their destinations.

The local stores have kept up to date with the latest thought on the observance of this custom. Noting the tendency to give substantial presents of real value, they specialize on anything that will be of real and permanent use. But they have not forgotten the children's side of the day. They display a most wonderful selection of toys calculated to make young America's eyes pop open very wide and conclude that there really is a Santa Claus.

LETTERS TO SANTA CLAUS.

Dear Santa Claus:—I have written you lots before. Mama told me to pin them on the flue and you would get them on the way down, but you never brought my red wagon yet, so I am going to give this to the mail carrier. Please bring me a wagon or a watch. I am nine years old, go to Oak Hill school. My teacher, Miss Oma Friend, stays at our house, so please bring her something, too; also my little sister named Beryl. I will be watching for you.

Your friend,
CLYDE R. CUSTER.

Dear Santa:—I am a little boy five years old and go to school every day; in the first grade. I would like a new sled, new pencil and tablet, new suit and a pair of shoes; also some candy and nuts. Please do not forget my brothers, sisters, father and mother, and especially my little friend, Grace Lichty, who wants a doll, story book and a set of tinker toys.

Your brown-eyed boy,
WAYNE MARTIN.

Dearest Santa:—I guess you remember me from last year when you gave me that sled. Now don't give it all to me but give something to other little boys and girls. Pick my presents from a pocket book, pair of stockings, box of handkerchiefs, wash cloth, book sack and some candy and nuts. I will have father clear the chimney so you don't get dirty.

A friend always,
OPAL FIKE.

Dear Santa:—For fourteen years you have been very good to me. I will give you a list and you can pick out what you want to give me: A rain coat, gloves and galoshes to match, round gold wrist watch, a pair of gunmetal silk hose and something to embroider, candy, nuts and fruits. Our house is not hard to find; it is one mile from Red House on the dirt road. I think you have been there before.

JENNY.

My dearest Santa:—I am a little girl 9 years old and go to school every day. Please bring me a pair of pajamas, an umbrella, pair of stockings and some toys, also candy and nuts. Please don't forget father, mother, brothers and sisters and little children who have no homes.

Your brown-eyed girl,
VIRGINIA FIKE.

Dear Santa Claus:—I am a little girl two years old. I live at Fort Hill with grandpa. Santa, will you please bring me something nice to play with. I would like to have some candy and oranges. Please don't forget poor grandpa.

Your dear little girl,
Swanton. FRANCES D. PAUGH.

Dear Santa Claus:—I am a little boy. I go to Avliton school. I am 8 years old. I am in the first grade. Please bring me a wagon, sled, ball, violin, a Christmas tree and candy and nuts. I will go to bed early Christmas eve.

Your little sweetheart,
FLOYD WILHELM.

A very Merry Christmas to you and yours, from Scoop and the rest of the force.

Christmas shoppers, belated in their purchases for various reasons, were largely in evidence in the stores of Oakland on Saturay and every day of the present week. Many of the purchasers bought heavily while others, undecided just what to buy for their friends and family, made light purchases of necessities. The merchants of town were well satisfied with the week's business and so expressed themselves.

GRANTSVILLE.

Operetta a Success.

The operetta, "The Love Pirates of Hawaii," presented by the Grantsville high school glee club, was very successful. A neat sum was cleared, which will go toward the needs of the school. The American Legion drum corps played several pieces before the play.

The utilities of a city are combined in your motor car

YOUR automobile is something like a miniature city. There is an electric light and power system, a water system, a fuel system.

In the new Ford, you will find each of these systems of the latest design and best materials. Every part has been made to serve you faithfully and well at a minimum of trouble and expense.

Take, for example, the generator—one of the most important parts of the electrical system which supplies the current for lighting and for engine ignition.

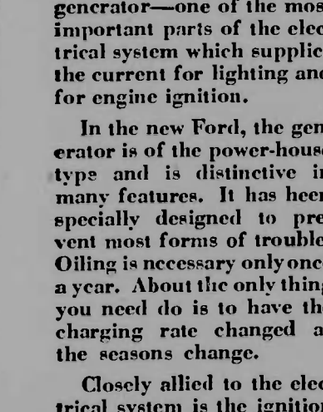
In the new Ford, the generator is of the power-house type and is distinctive in many features. It has been specially designed to prevent most forms of trouble. Oiling is necessary only once a year. About the only thing you need do is to have the charging rate changed as the seasons change.

Closely allied to the electrical system is the ignition system. It, too, is of new mechanical design in the new Ford. There is but one high tension cable and that connects the coil with the distributor. Even cables from the distributor to the spark plugs have been eliminated. Special care has also been taken to make the distributor water-proof, thus preventing short circuits from rain, etc.

The entire electrical and ignition systems of the new Ford are so simple in design and so carefully made that they will give you surprisingly little trouble. Yet that doesn't mean they should be neglected. Certain little attentions are needed from time to time.

The storage battery should be given water and the connections kept clean. The generator charging rate should be changed as indicated. Spark plugs should be cleaned at regular intervals. Distributor points should also be kept clean and the distributor cam given a light film of vaseline every 2000 miles.

These are just little things, but they mean a great deal to your car. You can have them looked after at very small cost by the Ford dealer when you take the car in for oiling and greasing.



A thorough checking-up at regular intervals will lengthen the life of your car and give you many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring.

MANY SUGGESTIONS MADE AT PUBLIC MEETING FRIDAY

Schools, Local Government, Game Laws, Outboard Motors, Reads, Among Subjects Discussed.

perintendent of Schools, as a representative of the County Board of Education, advocated a new school building loan of $150,000, authority for the same to be authorized by the Legislature without a referendum vote by the citizens and taxpayers. However, it was pointed out by Mr. Rathbun that if a referendum upon the proposed loan were not attached by the General Assembly and yet if a referendum should be desired by the people of the county it could later be secured, as a result of which the proposed loan would be brought to a vote in November, 1930, under the provisions of Chapter 673, Article XVI, entitled "The Referendum," as set out in full in the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1914.

In his address Mr. Rathbun stated that the school authorities are anxious to assist in keeping the county tax rate as low as consistent with good government and growth of the school facilities of the county, both of which were represented as being possible under the plan as outlined above instead of following the plan which has heretofore prevailed in raising funds for new school buildings by means of a direct county levy.

It was further pointed out in this connection that the providing of funds today by direct county levy for new school buildings is a more severe and exacting measure upon the taxpayers than it was before April, 1922. Prior to that date funds for several of the larger school buildings were provided by direct county levy. However, by an Act of the General Assembly of 1922 a higer tax rate of 67 cents for the current expenses or maintenance costs of the schools was made mandatory upon the county taxpayers with the result that the county has less ability or latitude consistent with a minimum county tax rate to provide funds through direct county levy for new school buildings. Before April, 1922, the county had been providing considerably less than 67 cents for maintenance costs, which in turn made it more possible and practical at that time to provide funds for new school buildings. In the county levies of 1927 and 1928, for instance, no funds were levied to the school board for new school building, during which two years the county tax rate nevertheless has been $1.99 and $1.90, respectively. Therefore, Mr. Rathbun stated, it might be advisedly possible for the county to provide new school building funds through direct county levy if it were not for the mandatory increased current expense item of 67-cent-tax to be first provided. It is not thought advisable for the best interests of the taxpayers of the county under these circumstances for the county to provide through direct county levy as previously provided the funds for necessary new school buildings.

In answer to the question as to where school buildings are needed in the county for which funds are requested, the County Superintendent replied that there is an unprovided balance of about $23,000 yet to be raised in the county levies of 1929 or 1930 for the new school building now in course of completion at Friendsville unless a loan is authorized by the General Assembly of 1929 as requested. Furthermore, the State and county educational program also includes additions to the present school buildings at Grantsville, Accident, Oakland High and Kitzmiller as also present and future similar needs elsewhere in the county.

Charles Zeller, accompanied by Stuart Rodamer, requested appropriation for the Grantsville fire department. It was pointed out that only appropriations for maintenance are provided under the present plans for such municipal fire protection.

Milton Sincell, along with County Commissioners, explained to the members of the General Assembly the topographical map of Garrett county as made in 1913 and supplemented the same with recommendations for revision since county roads that have been built and abandoned since 1913, upon which mileage State funds for improved highways are disbursed. The suggestion was made that the County provide for a road engineer or combine this position with the present county surveyor's duties.

The building of an improved road to Allegany county via Bloomington was advocated.

The County Commissioners called the attention of the members of the Assembly to the present difficulties incidental to disposing of water accumulating along the sides of roads, near the bottom of hills, etc., and asked that suitable and proper legislation be passed to dispose of surface water.

William R. Browning suggested that for the propogation and protection of game in Garrett county that there be a three-day open season for deer in 1929 and that funds secured from licenses in hunting deer be devoted to paying additional bounties on vermin.

T. E. Bullard suggested legislation by which outboard motors could be used on the lake of the Youghiogheny Hydro company and that no additional fee be charged; that the trout season be open from April 1 instead of June 1 and that it be possible to prohibit trespassing on land between the property owned by the private individual along the lake front and the property of the lake owners. Suggestions were made by others concerning reduction in the present prices and conditions for license to fish in the same lake. A higher fine for violations of the fishing laws in the lake was also recommended.

A letter was presented by the Mayor and Council of Friendsville requesting authority for that body to convey or to close any alleys in the town when deemed advsiable.

Suggest Levy Date be Changed

Date of laying the County levy, it was suggested, should be changed from on or before the third Tuesday in April to a later date in the year with a corresponding change in the date that taxes are to be paid.

The Board of County Commissioners was asked to set forth its suggestions along these same lines in the form of a Bill which should be presented to the members of the General Assembly later for consideration.

Lawrence Fraley, mayor of Oakland, set out that in the opinion of many citizens of Oakland, there should be arranged a plan for the registration of voters for Oakland; also that in case of a tie vote in the Council that the Mayor be authorized to cast the deciding vote and that the present building permit zone of the Town be extended.

Richard Browning, district Game Warden, suggested a uniform season for squirrels and birds, the same being perhaps from October 10 to November 10.
